THE florists' business is not booming, but aside from a few localities where the trade has not come out of the slump, conditions indicate a fairly prosperous season.

NOW is the time to put the window and porch boxes in their winter dress. Order an assortment of dwarf evergreens from a nurseryman and take orders from your customers for them.

THERE seems to be every reason to expect the total arrivals of Dutch bulbs to equal those of last season, in spite of the difficulties the Holland travelers encountered in booking orders early this year.

AFTER buying slowly and canceling or cutting many orders, the trade took hold of Paper Whites so strongly last week that some of the largest dealers found themselves practically sold out. Prices are advancing.

IF you are not satisfied with the returns from the money you pay for advertising space, investigate the returns from the various media you use. Cut out those which bring you little or nothing for your outlay, and invest more in the places where you get results.

WHEN the Pink Part picks up, it's a sure sign the new season is under way. Twenty-five florists have entered their orders, for space all the way from half an inch to nine inches a week, since the beginning of this month. And, the advertising forms having closed, more orders are here to begin next week. Telegraph business is so appreciable an item now that keen florists want to have their names in the list that goes to 13,000 members of the trade every week.

HAVE you made reservation at Baltimore for your visit to the F. T. D. meeting, October 10 to 12? The Emerson hotel is headquarters.

THE American Dahlia Society will hold its annual meeting and exhibition at the Pennsylvania hotel, New York, at the end of next week. The ever-youthful R. Vincent, Jr., heads the society.

A GOOD many druggists sell postage stamps—without profit—in order to get possible customers into their stores. It is not advocated that florists add stamps as a side line, but now is the time of year to plan on getting orders from persons who have not bought from you before.

ARE you in position to plant shrubs and do lawn work this fall? Then start somebody making a house-to-house canvass of your territory in quest of orders. Or set a pleasant-voiced young woman at the telephone. It will be surprising how many orders even an untrained salesperson will pick up.

DESPITE repeated injunctions in this column to mail photographs flat, they still reach this office rolled in nothing sturdier than paper or thin cardboard. They are usually beyond repair and worthless after having been crushed flat in the mail. Wrap your photographs on a flat piece of corrugated box board.

THE general publicity type of advertising seldom produces direct return. To make any form of advertising react directly on the cash register, it is necessary that a definite offer be transmitted to possible buyers. The attractiveness of the offer and the carrying qualities of the medium employed then determine the effect.

TIME was when the largest business was considered the most successful, but now the methods employed count for more than mere size. The man with $25,000 annual turnover, who pays his bills on the dot, is likely to have a better standing than his neighbor whose sales are $100,000, but who asks you to take his note—and renew it.

THE 13,000 florists, seedsmen and nurserymen who subscribe for The Review are as interested a lot of people to whom to address your advertising as you can find. All their subscriptions are paid in advance. If anyone loses interest in the paper to the extent that he neglects to renew, the paper stops when his subscription runs out. No reader is carried past his expiration date. No one rides free. Everyone who receives The Review gets it because he thinks it's worth paying $2 a year for.

MARKETS GOING UP.

From our trade point of view this seems a mighty poor time to try to start another round of price boosting, but unquestionably many markets are on the rise, among them:

Glass,	Paper of all kinds,
Lumber,	Cut flower boxes,
Steel,	Twine,
Coal,	Textiles.

So many people give the increased cost of coal as the reason for advancing prices in some other line that it is creating widespread antagonism.

INTRODUCE US, PLEASE!

Out of the limited number of florists, seedsmen and nurserymen in this country, The Review's mailing list of 13,000 subscribers includes so large a proportion that additional readers are only to be gained, for the most part, by The Review's learning of members of these trades not now on its records and by their making the acquaintance of this paper. Last week a Kansas florist wrote:

> Through a friend of mine I got to know of your magazine, and it is just what I require in my line of work. So I am enclosing $2 for a year's subscription. I wish I had known of your publication earlier.

This instance is typical of how new readers are made for The Review—through one member of the trade recommending it to another. If there is one in your vicinity who is not a reader, send us his name—if you do not wish to lend him your copy of The Review—and we will give him a chance to make acquaintance with the paper. Some florists, thinking any and every florist would benefit himself and the trade as a whole by reading The Review constantly, have sent the classified page containing florists from the local telephone directory. We shall be glad to have you do the same, or send us the names of florist neighbors who don't get the paper. Introduce us, please!

COAL PRIORITIES AT END.

The interstate commerce commission has announced the abolition of all coal transportation preferences, effective at midnight, September 20. Hereafter no restrictions will apply on coal movement unless the commission is apprised of emergency or a call for help from some particular user or class of consumers of coal, when the commission will issue special orders for preferred transportation to cover such a situation. The commission has also added fertilizers and seeds to the list of commodities to which the railroads are to give preferred movement if they cannot move all traffic in the order of its offering. T. N. S.

TARIFF BILL TO PRESIDENT.

The McCumber-Fordney tariff bill passed the Senate Tuesday, September 19, when the conference report was agreed to by a vote of 43 to 28. The bill was signed by Senator Cummins, of Iowa, on behalf of the Senate, and Speaker Gillett, on behalf of the House, and forwarded to the president for his signature Wednesday, September 20. No changes were made in the rates on florists' stocks and wares, as contained in the conference report on the bill, made public in last week's issue of The Review. The bill provides that it becomes law at midnight of the day it is signed by the president. T. N. S.

IT WORKS BOTH WAYS.

Any number of florists use The Review as a means for buying and selling the things they need or grow, but here is something of a variation because the advertiser used The Review as a means of getting out of business and now is using it as a means of getting in again.

> The For Sale advertisement in The Review disposed of my place for me. I am sending herewith an advertisement headed, "Wanted, To Buy," and if you can do as well in getting me located again I will be twice wonderfully pleased. —A. L. Munk, Mount Gilead, O., September 9, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

In the main the cut flower market continues in about the same condition as it has been for the last several weeks. A slight improvement in the demand is offset by an equal increase in the supply, and this state of things, doubtless, will continue until the supply of outdoor flowers is cut off by frost, which must occur within the next three weeks, and the greenhouse products come into their own.

Dahlias are now the chief outdoor commodity and they are arriving in avalanches. While they appear to sell better than in former years, there is much waste. Really good varieties, such as appeal to a decorative taste, move well. Dahlia is dahlia anyhow, and in consequence we have a motley array, which is pathetic, indeed, when one realizes that the stuff has been put to the expense of express charges. The supply of asters is decreasing but is still unduly large and values are hard to obtain. Arrivals of gladioli are much smaller, now that the supply is nearing the end.

Roses are in good supply—just about sufficient to meet the demand, and the prices of the last week or two prevail. American Beauty is plentiful, but meets a poor demand. Hybrid teas are in good supply, excepting white varieties, which are scarce, owing to a good demand for funeral work.

Carnations are coming in rather freely for the time of year. The quality of arrivals is nothing to boast about, but stock moves within a range of $1 to $3 per hundred.

The supply of cattleyas is still on the large side and more than sufficient for the demand. There are few spray orchids available.

Easter lilies are fewer than for some time. Lily of the valley is also in shorter supply.

Early chrysanthemums continue to arrive, mostly Smith's Advance and Golden Glow varieties, and clean out fairly well, owing to a small supply.

Herbaceous material is in bountiful supply and moves slowly with considerable wastage. Stock in best demand includes cosmos, tritomas, tuberoses, zinnias, marigolds, delphiniums, gypsophila, feverfew and snapdragons.

Various Notes.

The lectures arranged for in the Museum building of the New York Botanical Garden have been well attended this season. Saturday, September 16, Dr. H. H. Rusby lectured on "Useful Birds in Our Gardens and Orchards." Saturday, September 23, Dr. M. A. Howe is to lecture on "Dahlias and Their Culture." The management of the Brooklyn Botanic Garden has arranged an interesting course of lectures for the fall months, free to enrolled members. The course includes instruction in greenhouse and garden work. A course to start at once is styled "Gardening in the Fall," and it will be conducted by Montague Free, the well known horticulturist at the garden. The course will include practical work in the greenhouse, on the methods of making cuttings, the various kinds of bulbs for fall planting, their treatment and care; proper management of house plants, and discussions as to the kinds suitable for cultivation. Another course is "Trees and Shrubs in Their Winter Condition," conducted by Arthur H. Graves, curator of public instruction. This course includes outdoor lessons in the botanic garden and Prospect park on the characteristics of our common trees and shrubs.

A peculiar case of interest to florists hereabouts went on record last week. An award was made by a referee of the State Workmen's Compensation Commission to James Adriance, of Fishkill, N. Y., a gardener employed by the Craig House Corporation there, for $12.77 per week for forty-six weeks, as compensation for an infection of the middle finger of his right hand from a rose bush thorn several months ago. The commissioners' examiner, Dr. James Donovan, has suggested amputation of the finger.

Charles Grakelow, the well known Philadelphia retailer, arrived in New York on the Celtic, Sunday, September 17. He was met down the bay by a party of his Philadelphia friends, numbering about 600, who had chartered a steamer for the trip.

In a lengthy article in the New York Times of last Sunday, on the "Value of Slogans in Selling Goods," the slogan of the florists, "Say It with Flowers," was prominently mentioned as one "the worth of which as a business builder has been attested to by the extent to which it has been paraphrased by other organizations and individual concerns."

Michael Cardello, for over fourteen years a salesman and decorator on the staff of Robert G. Wilson, the Brooklyn florist, has opened a store at 25 Bloomfield avenue, Newark, N. J. His many friends wish him the best of success.

Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md., president of the American Dahlia Society, was a visitor in New York Tuesday, September 12, on his way to Storrs, Conn., to visit the society's test garden at the Connecticut Agricultural college. He planned to visit the dahlia show of the New Haven Horticultural Society, at New Haven, also. J. H. P.

C. G. Andrews, of the New York sales office of the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., has closed the order of Edward H. Behre, Madison, N. J., for two galvanized steel-frame houses, 60x500 feet. Two 125-horsepower high-pressure steam boilers will heat them.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Business improved steadily last week and there was an air of general satisfaction the like of which has not been known in this market for several months. This is not to say there was anything approaching a boom, for there was not; it was just the normal seasonal revival of demand, which was just about strong enough to consume the receipts of stock, which were vigorously checked by the first cool weather of autumn. Prices were not advanced except as it became possible to move a larger part of each day's receipts at straight prices. During the period of oversupply in the hot weather only a small part of the stock was good enough for the shipping trade (some say not over ten per cent of the roses) and it was impossible to make any sort of an average for the growers. Since the cool weather came, quality has improved as supply has gone down, with the result that a much larger proportion of the receipts can be sold to the better class of buyers and fairly satisfactory averages have resulted. Further improvement is expected.

Roses, first forced by the heat and then checked by the cold, again are becoming more plentiful and, as the new cut comes on, the stems are lengthening. Roses of excellent quality now are obtainable in considerable quantity and a few tickets have been written at prices running up to 25 cents each for extra special Premier, which will be the predominating rose in this market this season. It is improbable that from now on there will be anything except a scarcity of short-stemmed roses. At about this date each year the supply of shorts, relative to the demand, falls off and they begin to command a premium by comparison with the price of the better grades. The tendency began to be apparent last week.

The late asters from the north are arriving in fine condition. These are the best asters of the season and they are selling well. But there is little call for the low-grade asters except for the cheapest kind of funeral work. Gladioli are less abundant than they have been since early in their season, only a few growers still being in a position to ship. The average quality of the stock is good and prices have advanced.

Last week the demand for the first time caught up with the supply of carnations. It was a novelty to see buyers going from house to house in quest of carnations. Nothing approaching a shortage is expected.

A call for chrysanthemums also sprang up last week, moving all good flowers received, with unsatisfied calls for pink and lavender. California mums are arriving in increased quantities.

Sweet peas are more plentiful and of better quality, selling clean on most days. Lilies and valley are in steady although not heavy demand. Cattleyas are in irregular supply, the best selling up to $2 each. Of the other items of stock the supply is not large enough to cut much figure. Since the supply shortened up, garden flowers have sold well. Large quantities of celosia are being sold, Brysonia chrysantheflora being the leading variety.

Notes from Poehlmannville.

At the Poehlmann greenhouses in Morton Grove business is reported most satisfactory for the season, with ferns and palms in excellent demand. Mr. Gabel, the carnation grower, is cutting a nice crop of carnations, mostly Ward, and the first Golden Glow mums. A big shipment of prepared hyacinth and tulip bulbs has been received from Holland and these will be ready for the Christmas sales. Carl Mueller, superintendent, is elated with his Christmas cyclamen, primrose and poinsettia stocks. Mr. Yehl, who is rose foreman, is planting the first of a number of sweet pea beds.

With only twenty-four hours, allowance for unloading coal cars, they are "stepping on it" to get the winter's supply stored. Mr. Pselk says they would certainly be up against it if it were not for the modern unloading trestle that is installed here.

Earl F. Poehlmann returned September 14 from his vacation at Lake Geneva and Delavan.

Various Notes.

Within a range of about 50 cents per ton, the price of coal now depends on the circumstances of the sale. When the florist goes after it, it is a case of "seeing him coming" and coal at once becomes scarce and high, about $5 per ton. On the other hand, few buyers in other lines are in the market and when the car is piling up demurrage the owner of the coal telephones around, cutting his price a few cents each call, until he finds someone who will make a counter offer. Then they dicker. Of course the better known growers and larger buyers have a decided advantage.

News of the sale last week of the corner of Lake and State streets, long occupied by Pitkin & Brooks, with the prospect of the early erection of a high class building there, has been received as another indication that the present market location soon is to become too costly for wholesale cut flower purposes. The wholesalers are for almost the first time seriously considering removal. A committee consisting of C. J. Michelsen, Paul Klingsporn, Eric Johnson, A. F. Poehlmann and Joseph Foerster has been formed to consider plans as they come up, but no meeting of the committee has as yet been held or any proposition presented to it.

October 5 all members of the trade are invited to an afternoon inspection of the range of Stielow Bros., at Niles Center. the country is here, a matter of much interest. The Universal thermometer installation, the large Kroeschell water-tube boilers and other apparatus will be interesting to see. In the evening the first meeting of the season will be held by the Chicago Florists' Club; Secretary Lautenschlager is making arrangements for this to be held in Niles Center.

Albert Collatz, at Niles Center, suffered a heavy loss by fire at midnight Sunday, September 17. The blaze, which originated in the boiler shed, as most greenhouse fires do, destroyed the service building and the ends of the adjoining houses. Mr. Collatz grows roses for Kennicott Bros. Co. and has been producing excellent stock.

The new 120-car garage of the Geo. Wittbold Co., located at Aldine avenue and Halsted street, although not completed, is open for business and already has ten auto boarders.

The brick chimney of the old George Wittbold greenhouses, which were dismantled, fell the other day on a nearby 3-flat building. It was not 200 feet high, as some Chicago daily papers stated, but only about seventy-five feet high. In falling, it tore away the rear wooden stair framework and part of the brickwork on the flat house.

A. Setterberg has prepared an exceptionally attractive catalogue of grass seeds and lawn-making materials and tools for J. Oliver Johnson, whom he describes as "The Turf Specialist."

At Mangel's Palmer House store they have been having a special sale on $5 baskets of summer flowers and it has served to keep all hands busy making them up. Mr. Canger says autumn business shows about the usual acceleration.

The widow and daughter of the late W. H. Hilton are about to open a flower store on the south side, in a neighborhood where they have many acquaintances through years in which they assisted Mr. Hilton in his business.

Michigan avenue is to be widened fourteen feet, from Twelfth to Thirty-third streets, and the work of setting the curb back seven feet on each side already is under way. C. A. Samuelson, Inc., and W. J. Smyth are the only florists affected. The sidewalks will be narrowed to such an extent that, to a casual observer, it looks as though property owners, tenants and pedestrians would lose at least as much as motorists gain.

boldt's Lincoln avenue department store, has taken over the concession in the Milwaukee avenue store and is having a new outfit of Randall fixtures installed. Formerly the Wieboldts ran both the florists' departments themselves, but they have come to the same opinion as other department stores, that it is better to rent space to a florist.

A new retail store is being opened at 3125 West Sixty-third street, under the name of the Manor Flower Shop, by Mr. and Mrs. Witty. They have an outfit of Randall fixtures.

E. C. Amling is expected here from California in a few days, on a trip which is to combine pleasure with business.

The A. L. Randall Co. has twenty-one basket makers working to capacity in its Chicago factory, in addition to the force at Traverse City, according to William Jacobs, who says the call for baskets never has been better.

A. Miller is in New York on business for the A. B. C.

The E. C. Amling Co. handled 80,000 gladioli last week and found it the best week for the grower since early in the season.

Zech & Mann report that Fochs & Son, the Rogers Park lettuce growers, have gone into carnations this season.

Friends of Henry Wehrman are congratulating him on his coal pile. Last spring he bought a full season's supply, at little more than half present prices.

The W. J. Smyth store, at Michigan avenue and Thirty-first street, again has had two of its show windows boarded up for several days. It was not from broken glass this time, however. A new foundation with concrete bulkheads is being put under the east windows. The store has just been in the hands of the painters. Mr. and Mrs. Smyth returned to their city home this week, closing their country place. Arthur Weatherwax now gets his vacation.

Marshall N. Tyler, manager of the supply department of Poehlmann Bros. Co., recently moved into his newly built home in North Evanston and his verdict is, "No more flats for me; never again."

Fifty carloads of coal are stacked beside the Bassett & Washburn greenhouses at Westmont, bought last spring at $2.75 a ton.

O. A. Tonner reports that a new nut-boring worm has made its appearance at Baconton, Ga., this year, where several Chicago florists have pecan groves, and that, in consequence, the crop to be harvested next month will be small.

A. C. Spencer has joined the devotees of the Scottish pastime. His links are the South Shore.

The A. L. Randall Co. has just issued a 164-page catalogue illustrating the lines of reed and fiber furniture made in its Chicago, St. Louis and Traverse City factories. The book is the work of Edward Galavan. It is not sent to florists except on special request.

Wednesday, September 20, was T. E. Waters' forty-seventh birthday anniversary. He started in the flower business at Beverly, Mass., in 1887, and has been at it ever since, though for some years past his efforts have been along the line of keeping florists supplied with the many accessories necessary for the successful conduct of an up-to-date business.

into business here. They are both experienced in greenhouse work and trade affairs, having lived all their lives among the Belgian growers who, before the war, produced plants for the American market. What the Germans left the quarantine destroyed, they say, and it is their belief Ghent never can be restored unless the unexpected should happen in the way of reopening the American market. Until they find the chance they seek to start in business for themselves they are working at what comes along and learning the ways of the trade here, living at 5245 Kenwood avenue.

Al. Campiche, 6012 South Halsted street, would like to get in touch with someone on the south side who needs a man capable of doing everything there is to be done around a retail store.

Visitors.

Hans Tobler, of Three Rivers, Mich., was here September 16, buying a stock of fall supplies. Mr. Tobler has just completed his first year in business for himself and is more than pleased with the success of his venture. That he earned the progress he has made is shown by the fact that his sales in the year were exactly double those of his predecessor's last year there. Mr. Tobler will need considerable stock from this market during the coming winter.

John P. Risch had as a visitor last week D. J. Murphy, the man who first grew Killarney in a large way for this market, for Weiland & Risch, and who later was in business for himself at Manistee, Mich. Mr. Murphy has lived in the vicinity of New York for several years and has been out of the florists' business since the war. He said there had been so many changes in fifteen years he scarcely recognized this market as the one he once knew so well.

E. Rober, who formerly was in business at Wilmette, has returned to Los Angeles after spending a fortnight here on matters connected with the expansion of his operations there. Mr. Rober is wholesaling geranium cuttings from a place at Sawtelle, close to the new establishment E. C. Amling is building up there.

Edward Amerpohl, of Janesville, Wis., was here September 16. One of his quests was for coal.

Arthur Graves, well known Bloomingtonian, was here last week on his way to Cleveland, where he was to take the Masonic thirty-third degree.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Conditions are gradually improving. Outdoor flowers are less abundant. Indoor ones are rather more abundant. There are many weddings and the retail trade has been quite active of late. The outlook is distinctly better and everyone is much more optimistic. We continue to have frequent drenching rains and this has spoiled many outdoor flowers.

Roses are in good supply, but the demand has been good at $3 per hundred and up. Some fancy stock reaches $18 and $20 per hundred, but the best call is for flowers selling from $6 to $10 per hundred. White roses have been in particularly good demand of late. There are some carnations coming in and they sell at $1 to $3 per hundred; as yet, they are short-stemmed, however, and not much in demand.

ity declines as the price advances. Asters have suffered severely from drenching rains; prices on them vary from $1 to $3 per hundred. A few fancies may sell a little higher. Lilies are good, but the demand for them is weak. Chrysanthemums are more plentiful and prices are down to one-half what the earliest ones brought. There are too many everlastings and many have sold as low as 5 cents per bunch. Plenty of cosmos, dahlias, coreopsis, bachelor's buttons, delphiniums, sweet sultans and other flowers are seen.

Valley is scarce and up in price to $15 per hundred. Coal economy is responsible for a reduced supply. There is some nice white bouvardia, eagerly bought for weddings. Cattleyas and other orchids continue quite scarce. Asparagus, adiantum and hardy ferns have been selling better and pot plant trade, with the passing of summer, has become much more active.

Various Notes.

All were pleased to see Harry Nicholson, of Helena, Mont., at the gardeners' convention. He is the younger son of William Nicholson, of Framingham, and is enjoying a short vacation in the east. From what he says, it is uphill work growing crops at Helena, and nothing is possible without irrigation.

There were numerous visitors in town last week, attending the sessions of the National Association of Gardeners, and some of them found time to visit the ranges of Thomas Roland, the W. W. Edgar Co., Wollrath & Sons and other plant establishments, to see the wonder-

The first frosts of the season occurred on the nights of September 17 and 18. Many tender plants were killed on low land.

The news of the sale of the lease of the New York store of Thomas F. Galvin, Inc., for $100,000, interested local retailers last week. The lease has ten years more to run.

W. N. Craig and W. H. Golby acted as judges and later presented the prizes awarded at the children's home garden show in the Municipal building, Roslindale, September 16.

Charles Lynch, of the staff of the Park street store of Thomas F. Galvin, Inc., left last week on a vacation to be spent in New York and Montreal.

Fred Holbrow, of Brighton, is getting some nice Bouvardia Humboldtii now, which is being eagerly bought for weddings.

Visitors to the Arnold Arboretum are numerous these days, the great attractions being the wonderful displays of trees and shrubs in fruit; among these the malus, cratægus, symplocos, viburnum, lonicera, symphoricarpos and rose species are handsome. Many of these are much more handsome in fruit than in flower. The grand collection of cotoneasters in the Chinese shrub section near the "look-out" are also beautiful now.

No finer lilies come into the wholesale market than those from Mrs. John J. Fee, of Jamaica Plain. They are of the formosum type and the stems are long and the flowers of extra large size.

Three new houses are being built by the Arnold Arboretum for members of its staff: One for E. H. Wilson, assistant director, on South street, Jamaica Plain; one for William H. The Market.

The market is in better shape than it has been in the last few weeks. The demand is much greater and the supply is smaller. Roses have shortened considerably. White roses are scarce and in many cases other white flowers are substituted. Carnations are in heavier supply and on longer stems, at fair prices. Asters and gladioli are still in the market. A few good asters can be had at fair prices. Dahlias are fine and are selling at good prices; the demand is good. Golden Glow and white mums can be had at $2.50 and $3 per dozen, with only a medium supply. Cattleyas are coming in more heavily at a little lower price. Lilies and valley are scarce. The market is in good shape, with no oversupply, such as there has been in the last few weeks.

The Picnic.

Over 800 florists and gardeners attended the third annual outing and inspection trip to the nurseries and seed gardens of Henry F. Michell Co., at Andalusia. The guests assembled in the Broad street station and took the Evergreen Special. They were entertained on the train by the Liberty band from Richmond. After leaving the train, the party was served with luncheon. After the inspection of the grounds, speeches were made by M. J. McDermott, an inspector of the United States customs service; Robert Craig, of Norwood; John McCleary, of Philadelphia, and B. F. Barr, of Lancaster. The athletic program consisted of a 100-yard dash for men, which was won by N. C. Sharp; a 50-yard dash for women, won by Miss Anna Adams; a wheelbarrow race, won by Messrs. Huttison and Sharp; egg and spoon race, won by Miss Elizabeth Shields; 3-legged race, won by Joseph Mehring and James Bolard; sack race, won by N. C. Sharp; suit case race, won by Joseph Mehring; running broad jump, won by N. C. Sharp; potato race, won by D. Cordona; tug of war between the Chestnut Hill and main line gardeners, won by the Chestnut Hill gardeners.

The band entertained during the afternoon. The day was ideal and the cannas, which were at their best, excited the enthusiasm of everyone there. The reception committee was as follows: Frederick J. Michell, Jr.; Frank B. Michell, H. J. Michell, A. A. Powell, J. A. Smith, W. F. Moore, D. J. Keohane, Philip Freud, J. N. Allison, L. A. Catherey, W. G. Arader, C. F. Schermerhorn, L. A. Roth, David Wallace, Charles A. Goudy, Fred C. Gloeckner, F. G. Foster, A. F. Eilers, J. H. Bockmann and Robert Halliday.

Quick Service.

Howard S. Royer, the representative of H. Bayersdorfer & Co. in the south, had a novel experience last week. He took an order while in Atlanta, Ga., for a case of metal baskets from Stallings' Flower Shop. Just before Mr. Royer left that city and while he was on his way from the hotel, the express man happened to have a case of these same baskets for Mr. Royer as a sample. He told the express man to deliver this case of baskets to Stallings' Flower Shop. Mr. Stallings immediately asked Mr. Royer what the case just received contained. Mr. Royer informed him that this was the case of baskets Mr. Stallings had given an order for an hour previously. You can imagine what Mr. Stallings said about such quick service—place an order in Atlanta, Ga., and having it delivered from Philadelphia inside of an hour. This certainly is quick service.

The Market.

The beginning of early autumnal activities has started business a little and florists are receiving their share. The month has been unusually active with small weddings and numerous prenuptial gatherings, while funeral work has been better than average.

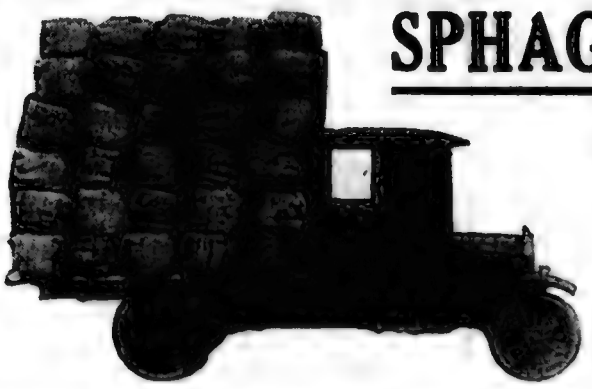
Continued good weather has given outdoor asters opportunity for full cropping, which has been taken advantage of by the commercial growers. First cuttings of roses and carnations are showing daily improvement at normal prices.

Various Notes.

Edward Brooke, of T. J. Johnston & Co., was in Boston and vicinity last week.

William A. Bowers, of W. A. Bowers, Inc., made a business trip through Connecticut last week.

William H. Fitts has been appointed administrator of the estate of the late Joseph D. Fitts.



William Doel, of Pascoag, was in the city last week looking for fall supplies. He reports a good business this summer.

Use It With Flowers!

One fern is for hope and one for faith,
And one is for love, you know;
Then add another one for luck
To make the finest bouquet.

Flowers: As spangles in the sunny rays shine round the silvery snow, the pageantry of earth's bright army glitters in thy praise.

A PAGE OF HINTS AND HELPS FOR THE RETAIL FLORIST

COLLECTION LETTERS.

Few retail florists do a large enough business to make it worth while to employ one person to give his entire time, or the major part of it, to collections. In consequence, this important part of the business is slighted; either accounts are merely turned over to a professional collector when they have reached a certain age or, if the proprietor makes an effort to get the money himself by letter, the time he usually devotes to it is an hour or so at the close of the day, when he is far from being in his best mood.

Perhaps it is for this reason that a good many collection letters make customers angry, or at least irritated, by their tone. Some of them merely take the form of a polite "bawling out," either for not remitting promptly or for not answering the florist's previous letters. Such communications do not facilitate the collection of the florist's account, nor do they leave the customer in a frame of mind such that he is likely to revisit the store when he may wish to buy flowers again. The florist who has kept track of the expense involved in getting a new customer is not willing to let one go easily. In his collection letters he wishes to keep the good will of the customer at the same time that he tries to collect the money for flowers already sold.

It is not always true to say that a customer who does not pay his bill in sixty or ninety days is not a desirable customer. He is not if such delay is customary on his part. But the adage that "circumstances alter cases" is never so true as in the case of delinquent patrons. For this reason it is not desirable to send a form letter to everyone whose account is more than so many days in arrears. The florist should keep in touch with his customers, so far as possible, noting in his card index or on his ledger page facts concerning their business or standing which will enable him to differentiate one from another. Thus he will know whether one man's delinquency is merely the result of current business conditions in his line or whether he is an incorrigible procrastinator, either from habit or financial condition. If the florist knows these facts, he can write understandingly and maintain the friendship of his customers at the same time that he urges settlement of accounts.

Occasionally there is reason, from the customer's viewpoint, for the nonpayment of a bill. Perhaps the customer has been displeased and wishes to get the attention of the proprietor to his or her case in order that the cause of the dissatisfaction may be made known. For this reason it is desirable to word the first collection letter in such a way as to take account of such a possibility and receive a reply from the customer which will lead to a hearing of the complaint and to adjustment, if it is necessary. A good collector should be not only a money-getter, but a diplomat as well. He should be an adjuster and a mollifier; and he can, if he knows the way, be a salesman as well.

Many collection letters are without the human touch. They are bare statements of fact, no better than messages rubber-stamped on a statement. If you are writing a collection letter, read it over; then see if you cannot give your statements a twist that will get the interest of the customer. Phrase it so that it will carry a human message to him, not merely a statement of account. Bear in mind the fact that you wish to sell the customer more flowers. Try to resell him, not coerce him. Bring him back; don't drive him away.

COMPARING COSTS.

Though the stock handled is of an entirely different character and the rate of turnover is decidedly different, the retail jewelers' trade is one of the closest to the florists' type of business transacted. Some of the facts set forth in a bulletin issued by the bureau of business research of Harvard University, therefore, offer interesting data for comparison by retailers with their own costs during the year 1921. The bureau received reports from 250 retail jewelers; out of these, 190 permitted sufficiently close adjustment to the standard classification of accounts to allow their being used in the summary of costs.

This summary showed that during the year 1921, because of the business depression, operating expenses, in percentage of net sales, were substantially higher than in the preceding year. Only approximately one-third of the firms from which reports were received showed a net profit for the year; the average figure for net loss in 1921 was greater in the retail jewelers' trade than in any other trade from which the bureau has received reports in 1921 or previous years.

In 190 retail jewelers' stores in 1921, the relation of operating expenses to net sales or merchandise, excluding all repair work, is shown in the following table, total expenses having been forty-three and one-half per cent of net sales:

	Per cent
Wages of sales force	12.8
Advertising	2.5
Boxes, wrappings and other selling expense	1.5
Total selling expense	16.8
Delivery	0.2
Buying, management and office salaries	6.2
Office supplies, postage and other management expenses	0.8
Total buying and management expenses	7.0
Rent	5.4
Heat, light and power	1.1
Taxes (except on buildings, income and profits)	1.3
Insurance (except on buildings)	0.8
Repairs of store equipment	0.3
Depreciation of store equipment	0.9
Total interest	7.0
Total fixed charges and upkeep	16.8
Miscellaneous	2.2
Losses from bad debts	0.5

The average figure for the wages of the sales force will be seen to be 12.8 per cent of the net sales. The lowest figure for this item shown by any firm was seven-tenths of one per cent and the highest 40.2 per cent.

The average amount spent for advertising is seen to be two and one-half per cent of net sales. Several firms reported no advertising expense. The highest shown by any firm was 11.4 per cent of net sales. Jewelers who had total sales below $20,000 average two and a fifth per cent of net sales for advertising. Firms with sales from $20,000 to $50,000 showed a slightly lower percentage, but a majority of the firms with sales over $50,000 had an advertising expense greater than three per cent of net sales. It was noted that the advertising expense was greatest for the firms with the highest volume of sales.

The expense for rent showed a remarkably wide margin. One jeweler reported a sum for rent that amounted to only six-tenths of one per cent of his sales, whereas, as the other extreme, one firm spent for rent an amount equal to twenty and one-half per cent of net sales. Several other firms had rent figures nearly as high. The average in 1921 was five and two-fifths per cent. The percentage was less in the case of firms with a larger volume of sales.

One-fourth of the jewelers who reported included no losses from bad debts, though the average for this item was one-half of one per cent of net sales. The highest figure for this item was seven and one-fifth per cent. Since few reports were received from installment houses, these figures may be taken as representative of ordinary retail jewelry firms.

The precise effect of the business depression of 1921 is indicated by a comparative table of expenses in 1920 and in 1921, prepared from the reports of 119 firms. In 1920 total expenses amounted to thirty-four per cent of net sales and in 1921 to 43.6 per cent. As in the case of several other trades for which the bureau made studies of the costs of doing business in 1921, most of the items of expense seemed to have been substantially higher in 1921 than in the preceding year. As sales dropped and the prices fell, it was found possible to make a corresponding reduction in expenses. This task of bringing expenses into line with lower prices has been as difficult in the jewelers' trade as in the florists'.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Last week the quality of stock was improved considerably; the cool weather caused this. The expected revival of business for the retailers has showed itself; a considerable quantity of flowers was used for Labor day. Consignments are increasing, with increasing shipping orders for wholesalers.

Roses are looking better every day and last week prices advanced a little on choice stock. Premier, Columbia, Butterfly, Ophelia and Double White Killarney had an excellent call. There are fine prospects for a large crop of carnations for the season. Asters still hold the fort and sell well for use in funeral work. The supply of gladioli has decreased greatly and is short of the demand for stock of first quality. Dahlias are arriving all right and their

The meeting was held on the lawn in front of Mr. Rowe's home. All officers were present.

The trustees reported that the club picnic, held in July, was a success and that $15 had been returned to the treasurer. The trustees said they had found the books correct, and that the next club meeting would be held October 12, at the home of Phil Goebel, in Kirkwood, and that it would be the last outdoor meeting of the season. Several communications were read, discussed and ordered filed. Bills to the amount of $157.40 were presented for payment and ordered paid. Applications for membership were filed by Andrew Meyer, Jr., St. Louis, and Herbert Amling, Pana, Ill. Several members paid 10 cents each for failing to wear a flower during the meeting. After the chair had appointed H. G. Berning and Frank J. Fillmore installing officers, the following officers were placed in office: President, Frank A. Windler; vice-president, Oscar Ruff; secretary, J. J. Beneke, and treasurer, William C. Smith. J. J. Bentzen was placed as chairman of the trustees, along with A. W. Gumz and Louis Baumann as holdovers. This is Mr. Smith's thirteenth term as treasurer.

The chair appointed H. G. Berning, Julius Schaeffer and Frank Fillmore a committee to draw up resolutions on the deaths of the three members mentioned in the secretary's report and to report at the next meeting of the club. The fall flower show was discussed.

The meeting adjourned with a rising vote of thanks to ex-President Rowe and Mrs. Rowe for the afternoon's entertainment. The members and the ladies were photographed at the big lily pond. After this the men folks were invited by Mr. Rowe to partake of lunch, with refreshments and cigars, while Mrs. Rowe entertained the ladies on the lawn with ice cream and cake. After this the members inspected the two large greenhouse ranges, a block away. These were found in first-class condition for the coming season. Manager Gerard Dengs acted as guide. Before leaving, three rousing cheers were given the host and hostess.

will have charge of the big fall flower show, which opens in the Coliseum, November 7, held a general meeting September 12, in the Coliseum building. When Chairman Ammann called the meeting to order, seventy-five responded to the roll call. Chairman Ammann, who is also manager of the show, in a few brief words told each chairman what is expected of him and his committee to make the show a success. All promised to begin activities at once. Then came the call from each chairman as to the amount of his appropriation needed. The guarantee committee reported that $9,176 had been subscribed to date, but that the prospects were good for the $10,000 before the next meeting. After all the chairmen had reported, it was found that $25,000 was asked for the use of the various committees. The publicity committee reported that they had engaged W. A. Freere as advertising manager for the committee and the show. W. J. Pilcher, chairman of the trade's display committee, showed plans for the various trade displays, which would amount to 3,700 square feet, and he said that the booths would be ready for the exhibitors the day before the opening of the show. Mrs. F. W. Bruenig, who is chairman of the ladies' reception committee, will take care of all lady visitors attending the show from outside of the city. The meeting adjourned for an inspection trip through the building, headed by Fred Grossart, who drew the floor plans for the exhibition. The executive committee will meet again October 3. After that time weekly meetings will be held until the opening of the show.

No order too large nor too small to receive our prompt and courteous attention

Monday in each month. The first one was held Monday, September 18, in the American hotel, at a noon luncheon. Important questions came up for discussion on F. T. D. matters, including the coming meeting of the association at Baltimore, October 12. There are now seventeen F. T. D. members in St. Louis. A large delegation is promised from here to Baltimore and, according to our district manager, Fred C. Weber, they will try to land the 1923 convention for St. Louis.

Julius E. Schaeffer announced last week that his firm will open a branch store in the new Hotel Chase, which has just been completed in the fashionable district of the west end. This branch store will be in charge of Virginia Mussey, classed as one of the best lady floral artists. This branch and the one at Boyle and Maryland will be operated by Julius Schaeffer, Inc. A new automobile delivery truck has been ordered for the new shop. Roland Breidmeyer is the secretary and treasurer of the new corporation.

Young's new west end branch, according to E. H. Harvey, will be delayed until October 15. The delay is caused by the finishing of the interior work in the new building.

Since the last meeting of the Florists' Club, Ernest Muckle, Adolph Steidle and Edward H. Harvey have filed applications for membership.

Gene Kuehner, of the H. G. Berning force, was on the job last week in securing a large number of baseball tickets for the New York-St. Louis games. One hundred tickets were disposed of among the trade for the three games.

Charles Kuehn, who has fully recovered from his recent automobile accident, says he will be able to join the bowlers by October 1. He is a member of the Carnation team.

Charles Wors, well known in the trade, was badly hurt by an automobile when crossing the street at Broadway and Olive and has been unable to attend to business. From reports, he will be able to be out by the end of this week.

The St. Louis Seed Co. has mailed its fall catalogues.

The Bourdet Floral Co. had a busy week packing and shipping poinsettia and cyclamen plants to outside points.

The results of the florists' bowling league, September 12, were as follows: The Roses won three games from the Sweet Peas. The Orchids won the odd game from the Daisies and the Violets the odd game from the Carnations. Captain Bentzen's Roses are now leading, with five games won and one lost.

The Market.

The market was cleaned up several days last week and was completely clean Saturday, September 16. Stock was short and demands were heavy, especially for funeral work. Only a few gladioli are left uncut here, but some good varieties are being shipped from Colorado. Roses are good and prices are somewhat higher. Asters are good. Celosia is being cut in large quantities.

It appears that the turning point has now been reached and business is again on the upward grade. Of course, it will not take the proper stride until after a frost. Business in general for the summer of 1922 has been fairly good. While in some instances it did not equal that of last year, we must remember that a good bit of the business of last year was inflated by the return of so many of our soldier heroes. of the week was slow, but as the week ended there was a demand especially for gladioli and American Beauty roses. Just last week there were so many gladioli in the market that the wholesalers did not know what to do with them. The demand for lilies and valley has kept up and each day finds the supply just about ample to take care of the demand. There are, however, plenty of roses in the market at the present time and each day finds some roses left over. The varieties and quality seem to be improved every week. Columbia is the leading rose, although Butterfly, Priscilla and Ophelia are good. Carnations are again to be had in almost all colors and they are short in stem and move out pretty well. The aster supply continues to increase. While the quality is much better than the early crop, the demand is limited. A new novelty flower, Chinese wood flower, grown by one of our local growers, was seen in the market last week. Delphiniums still come into the market, but the public is tired of these flowers. Dahlias are making their appearance every day and their quality is getting much better.

Various Notes.

The great question among the growers at the present time is the coal situation. Even though we are right in the heart of the soft coal region, nevertheless the dealers are asking prices that are almost out of the question and this naturally causes the majority of growers much anxiety. Few of them have done anything towards getting their winter supply. They are in hopes that State Fair a Success.

Never within the memory of the oldest fair patron was the display of cut flowers, ferns and foliage plants more varied or beautiful than this year. Not only was considerably more space occupied by the exhibit, but the quality was superior to that shown in other years.

The flowers were shown on long tables across the Manufacturers' building. Gladioli, asters and dahlias predominated, but the display of other annuals and perennials was much larger than in previous years. Practically every flower that can be made to bloom during the fall months was represented. The Syracuse Rose Society had a fine display of roses. This was especially creditable, because of the extreme rainfall of the last month. In addition, there was a splendid display of cut roses from greenhouses. Table decorations, bridal bouquets and corsages added to the interest of the exhibit.

The Syracuse florists are noted for their hospitality, but never was this demonstrated more clearly than at the

The Gang's All Here," and Werner Bultmann, as "champion light weight," led the seventy-five members and guests to the dining room, where the tables were lively with frogs' legs and other delicacies. Earl Bates, as "champion heavy weight," brought up the rear of the procession and was also right there at the end of the "eats." There was also plenty to drink of "the cup that cheers but not inebriates." Between courses, songs were sung and the evening was full of wholesome wit and good cheer.

Federation Meets.

The tenth annual meeting of the New York Federation of Horticultural Societies and Florists' Club was held in the office of the commissioner of agriculture at the New York state fair grounds, in Syracuse, September 13, 1922.

The meeting was called to order at 2 p. m., with President F. R. Pierson presiding. In the absence of Secretary A. H. Nehrling, who was in Europe, E. A. White acted as secretary. Sixteen delegates were present from the affiliated societies. C. E. Haw and Professor H. W. Schneck were delegates from the New York State Vegetable Growers' Association.

The minutes of the winter meeting, held at the College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y., were read and approved. In the absence of the treasurer, the following report was read and accepted:

the conference held by the federal horticultural board, in Washington, D. C., May 15, 1922, and presented the resolutions then recommended by the S. A. F. for consideration by the federation.

As the federation has already gone on record regarding its attitude towards quarantine 37, no definite action was taken.

David Lumsden, horticulturist of the F. H. B., outlined the activities of the board and explained restrictions imposed by quarantine 37.

The need of the horticultural interests of New York state for a building on the fair grounds adequate to display the varied products, was discussed. Dr. Erl Bates stated the history of the project of the building program in years past and it was the opinion of all present that the horticultural interests should urgently request that the fair commissions insert in the forthcoming financial budget an item sufficiently large to provide for a building to house the fruit, flowers, vegetables and other horticultural exhibits, as well as the exhibit of the National Association of Beekeepers.

Professor Schneck and Mr. Haw stated that the New York Vegetable Growers' Association would heartily support such a request and said their organization planned to take definite action on the project at the annual meeting, September 14, 1922.

A motion was carried providing for a committee of six, whose duty it is to get in touch with all other state horticultural organizations with a view to and that a meeting of the federation be held at the time of the annual meeting of the society.

Dr. E. M. Mills made a report of progress on the organization of amateur floricultural societies. The chain of such societies has been formed across northern New York and it is now proposed to add an additional link at either end and form societies in Buffalo and Albany. Such societies act as advance agents for the commercial floricultural interests of the state.

W. F. Bultmann, on behalf of the Syracuse Florists' Association, extended an invitation to the delegates for a dinner at Barnum's hotel, Three Rivers, N. Y., for 5:30 p. m. The federation extended a hearty vote of thanks to the Syracuse association for this hospitality. The meeting adjourned at 4 p. m.

E. A. White, Acting Sec'y.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

A spell of hot weather put a damper on trade last week. There was the usual lull after the industrial exposition and the horse show. There were a number of weddings, however, that kept the trade busy, together with funeral work. Gladioli are not so plentiful now as they were, but asters are a drug on the market and are selling for a song. Zinnias, montbretias, dahlias, lupines, gaillardias, scabiosas, calendulas, cactus dahlias, snapdragons and cornflowers are all plentiful and much in demand. Early chrysanthemums in the large, yellow Golden Glow and smaller pompons, in yellow and white, are arriving in small quantities.

There are a few flowering plants, such as Primula obconica, Begonia Vernon and potted asters.

Various Notes.

Felix Alberts had the decorations for the fall opening of B. Forman's store. The decorations consisted of birch bark

The Market.

Business has been none too brisk during the last week, although the exhibition has helped things considerably by bringing hundreds of thousands to the city. With the opening of schools, the return of vacationists, and continued rains, which will probably destroy the garden flowers, business should be better. Garden flowers have been especially luxuriant this year, though the regular amount of summer business seemed to be done.

Flowers this fall, such as gladioli, sweet peas and asters, have been plentiful and especially beautiful this year. There have been numerous flower shows, all well patronized, both by exhibitors

The Market.

For the second week in September business was dull last week. The florists had hoped that with the opening of the schools and the return of the vacationists, business would begin to improve. This has not been the case. The abundance and excellent quality of garden flowers is, without doubt, the fundamental cause of the dearth in trade. The only salvation for the retailer is that there has been a considerable abundance of funeral and wedding work.

The quality of roses was none too good last week, owing to the extremely hot weather. In some shipments nearly fifty per cent of the roses had opened.

The prices of cut flowers are at the same low level as in the last two months. Columbia, Premier and Pilgrim vary from $1 to $10 per hundred. Crusader, Hoosier Beauty and Ophelia are bringing from $5 to $10 per hundred. Asters and gladioli bring from $1 to $3 per hundred.

Various Notes.

The Robert Burroughs Seed Co. has received an import of forty cases of bulbs.

Edward Gernaey, who for many years has been in the florists' business at 108 St. Catherines street, east, has sold out to Victor Lemieux. Mr. Lemieux is a newcomer in the trade. He was formerly in the export business in the city.

The Rouville Greenhouses, at Rougemont, are now sending their first shipments of carnations to the market. The quality is exceptionally good for this time of year.

The store of McKenna, Ltd., at Quebec, has been taken over by Harry McKenna and is now under separate management. Mr. McKenna has built up a fine business in Quebec, and his friends wish him every success in his new undertaking.

The Mount Bruno Floral Co., at St. Bruno, is already beginning to show the results of the new management under Robert P. Holmes. Nearly four times as many roses were shipped in the month of August as compared with last year. With the exception of one house of carnations, everything is now in roses. Mr. Holmes is the son of Eber Holmes, the noted rosarian who manages the Halifax Rose Gardens, at Halifax, Mass.

The Hay Floral & Seed Co., of Brockville, Ont., is constructing an attractive 2-story brick building to meet the needs of its increasing business. The upstairs floor is to be divided into three rooms.

In the front room Mr. Hay is going to have a complete display of bulbs, seeds and supplies. Fancy fern dishes, vases, pottery and novelties will occupy one of the rear rooms, while in the other Mr. Hay is going to have an extensive line of canaries and foreign birds. The carrying of birds is a new venture for Mr. Hay, and he is looking for any information that can be given him on the subject. The downstairs floor will be used for an office and display room for cut flowers and plants. Mr. Hay expects to move into his new quarters about the middle of October. When he gets settled he will have one of the most up-to-date stores in Canada.

The Market.

Business last week had improved slightly, but not enough to make a great deal of difference. The opening of schools was expected to affect the trend of business, but it has been hardly noticeable. The weather this summer has been so fine that many flower buyers are still away, but it is expected that they will soon return; then business should take a decided turn for the better.

The rose crop has decreased considerably, due to the few dark days last week. Columbia and Premier are extremely scarce, while Ophelia and Butterfly have been a little more plentiful. White Killarney and other white roses have not been moving so fast as might be expected.

Asters have fallen off in quality and quantity and the few poor ones coming in are hard to move. Good stock moves quite readily. Good, large, long-stemmed marigolds are still arriving and are moving well. This is also true of large zinnias. Dahlias are increasing in supply. Gladioli are only fair. Carnations are increasing in volume, but the quality still is poor. Orchids are extremely scarce. There is a steady demand for valley. Easter lilies are much in demand, but the supply is limited.

Mums have not made their appearance, but they are expected soon. Herbaceous flowers, such as calendulas, coreopsis, delphiniums, buddleias, cosmos, ageratums, bachelor's buttons and hydrangeas, are still among those present and, when of good quality, move nicely.

Various Notes.

Various Notes.

The William Walker Co. has moved into its new store, which is one of the prettiest in the city. Mr. Walker is proud of being the first florist in the city to install a cooling system, which he is finding satisfactory.

The Kunzman Floral Co. has reorganized and is now under new management. Harry Kunzman, son of the late Mrs. Robert Miller, is now owner and manager of the establishment. Having bought out Robert Miller's interest and that of Miss Quarrles, former bookkeeper, Mr. Kunzman will undertake to run the business single-handed.

A good number of Louisville florists are getting ready for the F. T. D. convention. It is thought that enough will attend from this city to warrant a special car being obtained. That's the spirit! "We can, we will, in Louisville!" All those contemplating going will please get in touch with Miss Edith Walker, so that the correct number of reservations can be made.

The E. G. Reimers & Son Co. has enlarged its display room, making it again as large.

The F. Walker Co. held a flower show in its store on Chestnut street last week. Dahlias were shown mostly. The display attracted considerable attention.

have been numerous during the last week and the grower has had hard work to meet the demand. Mums have appeared in the market, with a poor demand for them.

Boston ferns are on the counters in all the big department stores. This does not help the florists any. Many growers are getting dissatisfied with supplying such houses, as they want them at ridiculously low prices. We have again been visited with heavy rains, playing havoc with late asters. Outdoor stock is looking good, with a short supply of many things in view. From now on, the growers will have little or no difficulty in disposing of all the stock sent in. The season remains favorable for all outdoor work in the way of planting, sowing, etc. E. A.

Buy Another Book Today

Many of the most successful business men in the trade had little schooling—but they practically all are readers—they read The Review each week and they buy books frequently. Such men are self-educated—theirs is knowledge gleaned by reading.

It is the mission of The Review to assist its subscribers in every way to improve their knowledge of the trade and their knowledge in other fields of human interest. As a measure of co-operation The Review has added to its services to subscribers a book purchasing service. This department, of course, specializes on books pertaining to the business of florists, nurserymen and seedsmen; but in addition will secure for subscribers, without charge for its service, any book they want, of any nature.

If you want a book of any given title, The Review will get it for you. Or if you want a book on any certain subject, The Review will send you the titles, with prices, of all the books on that subject.

Look over the list in the appended coupon. Most of these are standard books by well known authors. Order the one which seems, from its title, most nearly to concern your special interests. When you have read it carefully, order another.

Put a cross opposite the books you want. Clip the coupon and send it to us with a check to cover cost. Books will be forwarded, postpaid, without delay.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Los Angeles, Cal.—K. Hiraizumi, proprietor of the Yokohama Nursery, 821 El Sereno avenue, died last February and the estate is now being settled up. T. Takahashi is in charge of the business and will carry it on. The Yokohama Nursery was established in 1896. Rose growing is a specialty.

Fullerton, Cal.—At Robertson's Nurseries everything looks fine and clean, and business has been good right through, according to T. D. Robertson. Mr. and Mrs. Robertson have just returned from a trip to San Diego and Camp Kearney. Mrs. Robertson is associated with the Woman's Auxiliary of the American Legion and they visited the tubercular hospital at the camp. Mr. Robertson had a pleasant time among the trade at San Diego and says things are booming there.

CALIFORNIA DAHLIA SHOW.

At Los Angeles.

The annual show of the Dahlia Society of Southern California was held in the Ambassador hotel, Los Angeles, September 14 to 16. Dr. Archer, of Alhambra, president of the society, and his officers worked hard in preparation of the show, while, as manager, the doctor proved himself an executive of no mean merit, so that the exhibits were staged exactly on time, the judging finished and the show thrown open to the public. The crowd of interested spectators must have well repaid the officers for their work.

Right at the south end of the show was the exhibit of Howard Turner Co., which took first place and a silver cup for the best general display arranged for effect. Not only were the flowers individually of great merit, but they were exhibited in large numbers and the general effect was excellent. For the latter, Mrs. Kenny, sister of the Turner brothers, must be congratulated, as the work was well done and the color scheme admirably worked out. A new variety of their own raising won in strong competition. The pompons, too, were particularly good, especially a beautiful yellow, Baby Marie Osborne.

Second place in this class was taken by the Superior Dahlia Gardens for an exquisite exhibit. A dahlia cornucopia at one end of the table and a most beautifully arranged basket at the other were leading points in this exhibit. It may be mentioned in passing that this superb basket was arranged by that past master of the florists' art, Harry Hansen, of the Dostal-Wolters Co. staff. The leading tint was orange, but so beautifully blended were the different tints and so graceful the arrangement, that nothing like a description can be given. In this exhibit was also the first-prize exhibit for six show varieties. Mr. Gutting's pompons, too, were delightful, every flower perfect in form, fresh and exquisite in color.

Dr. Archer did not enter the competition classes, but put up a superb group of flowers in all varieties, beautifully staged and perfect in all respects. The display put up by the Huntington Beach Nursery was another splendid show, though Mr. Vavra said that in another two weeks their flowers would be better than now. Frank C. Mulkey, of Hobart boulevard, Los Angeles, and the Du Bois Dahlia Gardens, of Watts, Cal., both put up excellent displays, the flowers fresh and beautiful. Two other fine exhibits were from the Advance Dahlia Gardens, of Compton, and J. D. Richard.

Besides the commercial growers, the amateurs made a fine showing, the flowers being quite as good as those of the professional brethren. Altogether some 3,000 feet of table space was filled, and in the setting of the beautiful hotel grounds the show as a whole was most attractive. Practically every class was filled, the number of entries being far in excess of expectations. Among the judges were Messrs. Switzer and Vavra, of Huntington Beach; Foerster, of El Monte; Mulkey and Lawshe, of Los Angeles, and Alec Walder, of Santa Paula.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Business picked up considerably last week and a good clean-up every day was reported from the exchange. Mums are getting to be a feature in the retail stores and the wholesalers are handling them, but most of the stock comes from the north. Roses are daily improving in quality and length of stem and there are other indications of fall quality and fall business. Speaking generally, there has been little fault to find with business during the summer. Dahlias are improving, but asters are losing out, while gladioli seem to go on for ever, though in smaller quantities. Carnations are greatly improved. Greens are plentiful. Valley, orchids, gardenias and similar stock are not too plentiful and some days there is a shortage. Peas are good for the season. Small flowers generally are poor.

Various Notes.

The many friends of James Taylor, formerly superintendent at Laughlin park and now in the landscape and nursery business in Hollywood, will regret to hear that he has been seriously ill with acute dysentery in the hospital. He is out again now and getting around, though still weak and far from a well man.

Douglas Fraser, of Fraser & Son, Pasadena, says they have harvested an especially fine crop of seed of their ranun-

Have You Finished Shifting Your Cyclamens?

That was about the first question that I asked after getting home from the mountains.

We always plan to have our Cyclamens in their flowering sizes as early in September as possible. It makes better stock. However, you can safely put 4-inch Cyclamens into 5-inch, and 5-inch into 6-inch, for a couple of weeks yet, and have them make fine Holiday plants.

Don't put off the ordering a minute longer.

Strong, 4-inch, ready for shift . . . $30.00 per 100
Strong, 5-inch, ready for shift . . . 50.00 per 100

We have had a phenomenal run on Red Cyclamens, and can only supply 10% of this color. We can supply any other color desired, including all the new and rare shades of Pink and Salmon.

We have never had the mite in our Cyclamens and our plants are an exceptionally clean, thrifty lot.

Plants shipped in Paper Pots, in Light Crates.

If you have never ordered from us before, get a few dozen as a sample shipment.

After you open up the first crate you will wire the big order to—culus-flowered portulaca, one of the finest varieties extant of this popular annual. As already noted, a big percentage of the flowers come double and in long enough stems to be used in a variety of work, while even the singles are of most beautiful shades and colors. Trials of their Winter Pacific Beauty strain of stock are now going in. The firm's new establishment at 1000 East Colorado street will probably be ready for occupancy by the time these notes are read and enough can already be seen to show that it will be a most attractive place and in a first-rate location. Although the land here is so valuable, a large space has been set aside for a garden, and when it is said that Mr. Fraser, Sr., is going to be closely interested in the arrangement, something good can be looked for. In fact, the whole place has all the earmarks of a successful undertaking.

James Grant, of Eagle Rock, says he has been so busy with the landscape work which has come to his nursery this summer that he has not had to solicit a single job. He is continually adding to and improving his place.

E. Schaefer, of Figueroa street, reports a big demand for zonal geraniums ever since early spring, stock having been scarce all the season. He has just returned from a trip to Mexico.

S. Murata left last week for a motor trip to the Yosemite valley with friends. At the store business has taken a jump the last week and it looks like a busy time ahead.

Everybody connected with the L. A. Evergreen Co. is expecting venison. J. Perotti is going to his old hunting grounds for deer and he is a "go-getter."

At the Cudahy ranch, Gorini Bros. are producing excellent stock, and G. B. Gorini is showing some of the best America and Pendleton gladioli of the season. The soil at this ranch is light and sandy and a lot of fertilizer is used and this makes a condition hard to beat for bulbous stock. The flowers are sure winners.

Walter Armacost has returned from his fishing trip minus about seventeen pounds avoirdupois, but with the pleasantest recollections of a good time among the golden trout. "Tickling trout" used to be a great game—mechanically, that is. Walter is said to tickle them by telling them funny stories. This may be libel, but anyhow he gets them. Brother Williamson and family, at Fourth street, say business is surely on the up-grade.

Burns the Florist, at 123 West Third street, has just returned from a fishing trip at Catalina. The stories he tells about his catch would make interesting reading—understand? Interesting.

Flower Shop, has not forgotten how to make those excellent displays and a basket of dahlias, as the piece de resistance last week on Hill street, was surely a winner. Everybody, from Fred Dostal down, is well satisfied with the way business is coming, while the store is attractive in the highest degree.

Especially fine maidenhair ferns are now being sent in from the Artesia Nurseries and J. Gorini says the supply will be good all through the season.

Andrew Bruce reports business in funeral work good at the Alexandria.

B. F. Gillies, of the Park Floral Co., Denver, has been visiting at Los Angeles.

A. F. Borden, of the Redondo Floral Co., says that telegraph business has been particularly good at the store. He is preparing for a visit to Baltimore on the occasion of the F. T. D. meeting.

Miss Oberg has just returned from a visit to Bear valley to her place at the store of the Athletic Club Florist. She is even more delighted with the mountains than ever. Fine dahlias grown by J. Rolleri are being used in this store, including many of the large decorative types and the pretty little anemone-flowered varieties.

George Eischen reports business good, especially in mums from the north.

A look through the greenhouses at the Cedar Nurseries shows the cyclamens coming along in splendid order. About 20,000 plants in all sizes are grown, and the same fine health is shown in all, from the large specimens in 10-inch and 12-inch pans, to the smaller sizes. The plants have splendid foliage, hard yet large and attractive, while the centers are a mass of flower buds. The few early flowers open show the types to be the best possible, large, excellent in color and form, a magnificent strain. H. R. R.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

Last week chrysanthemums took their place in the market. A good deal of summer stock remained, however, which will not disappear until after the first rains. A large number of dahlias were seen, the pompons being popular for decorations and other purposes. Cosmos was in and there were good supplies of cut cyclamens, delphinium, snapdragons, mignonette and pink gypsophila. Asters were in the minority. Gladioli are nearing the end of their season. There were some carnations grown under cloth, but these are seldom so good as the greenhouse carnations. Growers were just beginning to cut their roses, but really good roses were scarce in the general market. Greens were plentiful. Potted begonia and cockscomb were a feature of the market. was being used a good deal for decorative purposes and so were oriental pods, which are in season. The chrysanthemums were of excellent quality and were plentiful. Violets will not be good for shipping for a month or so, as they need the first rains for a good crop. Plenty of strawflowers were coming in and the growers were busy drying them.

Various Notes.

An account of the accident in which L. W. Wheeler, the well known seed grower, sustained several injuries is found in the Seed Trade department of this issue.

C. Kooyman, proprietor of the C. Kooyman Co., has sold his wholesale and retail flower business at 431 Bush street, San Francisco, and announces that he will devote his entire time and energy to bulb growing at his bulb farm, 2721 Buena Vista avenue, Alameda, Cal. Mr. Kooyman, who is widely recognized as one of the best bulb experts in the state of California, will grow all the varieties of bulbs suited to the soil and climate. He also plans to import some bulbs from Holland.

R. Coombs, the purchaser of the C. Kooyman Co., is a capitalist who has arranged for F. W. Davis to carry on the business of the Bush street house. Mr. Davis, who is a graduate of the Royal Horticultural Society of England, has been with Mr. Kooyman for some time and is well and favorably known to the trade.

The Alameda County Floral Society is preparing to hold its annual dahlia exhibit. The show will take place at Hotel Oakland, Oakland, Cal.

J. A. Axell and E. Delaney took September 12 off and spent the day visiting Mr. Axell's chrysanthemum growers. It was found that they have a fine bunch of stock and, taken in conjunction with the fact that weather conditions are ideal, the stock is well grown and abundant. Mr. Axell feels justified in anticipating a large business in chrysanthemums during the latter part of this month and the whole of October.

Mrs. and Miss Turner, of L. Turner & Sons, Kenosha, Wis., are visiting this city, and September 13 S. Enomoto, of Enomoto & Co., showed them over the Redwood City nurseries of his firm and explained how the big chrysanthemums are grown. Enomoto & Co. are busy with their mums and are also drying a quantity of strawflowers.

The United Flower & Supply Co. is devoting much attention to its crop of strawflowers from the growers down the coast.

Domoto Bros. find that business is picking up, an opinion that nearly everyone in the florists' business seems to echo.

W. J. McLellan, son of E. W. McLellan, is receiving congratulations on being the father of a fine baby boy. This is the first grandchild on both sides of the house and what added to the general delight of the family was the fact that no one was told the stork was expected till the advent of the baby was announced.

F. C. Jaeger stated emphatically that the railroad strike has not in any way affected the express car situation. "Flowers are going through without any interruption and our customers say that the goods are arriving in splendid condition," declared Mr. Jaeger. In addition to the wholesale shipping business, the firm of Jaeger has been busy in the retail store with funeral and other work.

Frank D. Pelicano, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., is cutting some fine begonias at his farm, and these are being used with artistic and striking results in decorative work.

Theodore Bell, one of the best known men in California political life, was killed a few days ago in an automobile accident. His funeral, at St. Helena, was the occasion for a great outpouring of flowers. Pelicano, Rossi & Co. sent five men with two trucks laden with floral offerings, and the people of St. Helena almost gave them the freedom of the town, so royally were they treated. The California Aerie of the Eagles sent a star eight feet in height and three feet in spread to the Bell funeral. This was made by Julius Eppstein, the St. Francis hotel florist. Brown & Kennedy had a good deal of work in connection with this funeral.

Julius Eppstein, who has returned from deer hunting, got a fine three-pointer and some of his friends enjoyed venison.

W. D. Kennedy, of Brown & Kennedy, is away on a vacation. He motored to Richardson's Springs with his family.

Miss Delphia Reilly, of the Palace Hotel Flower Store, has made some changes in her staff. Her assistant is now Joseph Baumgard, formerly with Julius Eppstein and more recently assistant manager of the San Francisco Coöperative Flower Market.

Mrs. Darbee has written to General and Mrs. Gooch that she has taken seats for the Passion Play at Oberammergau, Germany. Darbee's is rushed with its chrysanthemum business and its shipments are stated to be arriving in good condition on schedule time.

Joseph's has added to its staff Alfred Robinson, formerly of the Redondo Floral Co., Los Angeles, and Llewellyn Price, recently of Alfred Serveau's Fillmore street flower store, who will be on the floor. Joseph's, according to George Wagner, will be about the only store in town during the coming winter to deal extensively in American Beauty roses. A grower is handling them especially for Joseph's. Some of those coming on now have 36-inch stems and those coming Podesta & Baldocchi are so busy that they may be compelled to increase their staff. The boys of this firm are just starting a collection for the families of victims of the Argonaut mine disaster and began with $60 contributed on the spot. Last Saturday, September 2, they had a banquet at a downtown hotel. George Ventura with his banjo and recitations helped to make things hum.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, Alexander Forbes, Newark, N. J.; secretary, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

L. W. WHEELER, head of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, Cal., sustained serious injuries in an automobile accident September 12.

UNUSUAL numbers of seedsmen have made the Pacific coast trip this season, not less than a dozen being now on the road, going or coming.

IF a man still owed you for last year's bulbs, would you ship him some this year? It still is being done, but not so frequently as in olden times.

THE St. Louis Seed Co., St. Louis, Mo., has already mailed out its fall catalogue. Recently the Aquarium Society of St. Louis held a goldfish exhibition at this store, increasing the sale of goldfish to a large extent.

IN anticipation of a record year's business, no doubt, the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, is having an expert make a few changes in the firm's ledger system, so as to facilitate matters for the bookkeeping department.

WHETHER or not C. D. Coventry, manager of the wholesale department of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, will take a trip to California this year depends to a great extent upon the condition of the firm's western bean crop, in Idaho. "If conditions in Idaho are such that they demand my attention," said Mr. Coventry, "I shall doubtless continue the trip into California."

THE 1922 crop of red clover seed is estimated to be about one-third larger and the alsike clover seed crop one-sixth larger than the respective crops last year. The increased production was due both to a larger acreage and better yield per acre in most of the heavy producing sections. The weather prior to and at harvest time was generally favorable, but in some regions hot, dry weather, similar to that of last year, reduced yields considerably.

AT the annual meeting of stockholders of Beckert's Seed Store, Pittsburgh, Pa., held last month, the following officers were elected: President, A. F. Frischkorn; treasurer, W. S. Walsh; secretary, Robert D. Edwards. These three officers also constitute the board of directors for the year 1922-1923. This firm is now entering upon its forty-sixth year of business, having been established in 1877 within one block of its present location. For more than twenty-five years it has been situated at its present location, 101-103 Federal street, north side.

HOW WE BUY OF FRANCE.

The dependence of French seedsmen on the United States as a market is shown by figures as to the exports of seeds to this country, Germany and Great Britain before the war, in 1913, and in 1920 and 1921. Here are the statistics, in tons:

	1913	1920	1921
United States	4,428	6,180	9,501
Great Britain	5,502	4,070	2,940
Germany	10,296	896	1,345

From being the third of these three customers of France, in size of purchases, the United States has become first, more than doubling its pre-war imports, while Germany, from first, has dropped to a much lower place. Great Britain, it is noted, now buys in France about half her purchases in 1913.

Though statistics are not given, the consul at Marseilles reports that the exports of bulbs to the United States from his district showed an increase in 1921 over the year 1920.

It would pay our former ally to serve this market with consideration, in view of its position of importance as a customer.

HASTINGS EXPAND TRIAL WORK.

The H. G. Hastings Co. is preparing to expand its trial ground work on the Hastings farm, near Lovejoy, Ga., about twenty-six miles from Atlanta.

Donald M. Hastings, youngest son of H. G. Hastings, an honor graduate of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, will be in direct charge of the largely increased trial ground work. His entire course of study in college, combined with practical work on the trial grounds of prominent seedsmen and florists of the north during vacation periods, eminently fits him for this enlarged work.

The Hastings farm, or plantation, as it is often called, is rapidly becoming an agricultural educational institution, incidental to its main purpose of seed, bulb and plant production. Situated as it is on the main Dixie highway, as well as on the Central of Georgia railroad, many thousands of travelers pass through daily. The motorists stop daily in large numbers and are always welcomed cordially and all questions as to varieties and cultural methods are answered.

The Hastings farm contains approximately 1,500 acres, about half of which is under cultivation in seed crops this year. Its location is splendid and the sandy loam soil underlaid with clay is exceptionally well adapted to seed growing. Both the Dixie highway and the Central of Georgia railroad run for two miles through it.

The operations on the Hastings farm are under the general supervision of

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

"A healthy, gradual increase has occurred in both our Florida and home establishments," observed Lyon H. Williams, president of the Williams Seed Co., Norfolk, Va. Richard S. Orr, manager of the Norfolk house, recently returned from a European trip. He commented upon the interesting conversations with many leading lights in the seed trade and their willingness to adopt practical suggestions. A heavy shipment of Dutch bulbs of high grade and an early distribution of an attractive catalogue are expected to stimulate early planting.

George Tait & Sons, Inc., Norfolk, Va., find their slogan, "Thoroughbred Seeds," hard to improve upon and, by keeping stock up to the standard set, find satisfactory business.

The Diggs & Beadles Co., Richmond, Va., reports satisfactory business, following a rather late and wet season. In fact, the seaboard has had more than its usual quota, according to Mr. Diggs.

T. W. Wood & Sons, Richmond, Va., are more than ever convinced of the advisability of advertising, even with so old-established a house as theirs. The result is seen in a steady increase all along the line, a waning season finding stock pretty well cleaned up. The bulb catalogue is out and the bulbs are in fine stock.

The Asheville Seed Store, Asheville, N. C., is among the southern seedsmen who, by impregnating vegetable seeds with sulphur fumes, aid in keeping the weevil in check. This concern has a large dark room in which the operator works, wearing a gas mask. The firm

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Archias' Seed Store, Sedalia, Mo.—Illustrated fall catalogue of bulbs, perennials, hardy roses, general nursery stock, strawberry plants, seeds, mushroom spawn, poultry supplies, implements and sundries. Clover, alfalfa and other forage seeds are included.

Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O.—Illustrated catalogue of bulbs, roses, plants for the house and conservatory, hardy herbaceous plants, seeds for autumn sowing and a full line of general nursery stock; seventy-two pages, in a distinctive black and white cover.

Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, Ill.—"Vaughan's Book for Florists," offering bulbs, roses, greenhouse plants, hardy perennials, nursery stock, flower seeds, baskets, wire designs, tools and other supplies; an illustrated 32-page catalogue, in an attractively designed cover, which is printed in red and dark green.

Rock's Flower Gardens, Independence, Mo.—"Spring-flowering Bulbs," a finely illustrated 22-page catalogue, printed with ink of a sepia tint and bound in an attractive and appropriate cover, which is printed in the same shade. Enclosed is an illustrated circular which draws special attention to the company's landscape department.

Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—Illustrated wholesale fall catalogue of seeds, bulbs, plants and extensive assortments of implements and supplies for florists and gardeners; forty-eight pages, besides inserted colored illustrations of lilies, cyclamens and primulas, and a full-page pink insert devoted to Wedgwood jardinieres and vases.

Walter E. Cook, Inc., Cleveland, O.—"Bulb Garden Beautiful," an artistic, well illustrated catalogue of bulbs; twelve large pages, clearly printed on enameled paper and bound in an exceptionally tasteful cover, the light groundwork of which forms a good framework for a colored panel which shows the company's "prize-winning bulb garden at the Indianapolis show, March 25, 1922."

Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, Pa.—Autumn wholesale catalogue, offering a "complete line of seasonable bulbs, plants, seeds and sundries"; forty-eight pages, illustrated; compiled in the accurate, characteristic Dreer style and well printed on paper of good quality. An introductory paragraph states: "Recent reports indicate that owing to unfavorable weather conditions bulbs may not be so large as usual, but will be of the proper age and well matured, so that results should be entirely satisfactory."

John A. Evans Co., Richmond, Ind.—"Ventilating Apparatus and Greenhouse Fittings; the Challenge Line," an attractive, excellently printed 24-page catalogue, fully illustrated. The cover, which is green, with a design and lettering in darker green, black and red, is both substantial and tasteful. "This catalogue," says the company, "illustrates our line of lifters, as well as a major portion of greenhouse fittings manufactured by us. While it by no means represents our entire stock, it is as complete as any in its line."

McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.—"How About Your Fall Needs?" is the question that makes its outstanding appeal on the front page of a large, fully illustrated McCallum folder, which is said to be "brimful of bargains" in florists' supplies. The stock ranges from tiny articles like cards and pins to large wreaths, prepared palms and McCallum Universal, adjustable plant stands. Baskets do not appear in this list, but the customer is advised, in big type, to "watch for our basket folder."

Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa.—An 8-page special wholesale list, "intended for those in the trade only," and offering such stock as hardy shrubs and vines, perennials and roses, with a few varieties of evergreens.

H. A. Hyde Co., Watsonville, Cal.—A well illustrated, 44-page catalogue of both fruit-bearing and ornamental nursery stock, vegetable seeds and plants, flower seeds, callas, irises, freesias, Dutch bulbs, miscellaneous flowering plants, etc.; an excellently printed, comprehensive book, offering much stock for general American planting, as well as the species that thrive particularly well in California conditions. Among the specialties for nation-wide use might be mentioned berry plants and "northern-grown" seed potatoes.

ZVOLANEK'S NOVELTIES FOR 1922-23

The Best Blue Sweet Peas Ever Produced to Date

Zvolanek's Blue Sensation—A self of clearest blue. Similar to Zvolanek's Blue and twice as large. The best blue ever produced. Four flowers to a long stem; they hold their color to the very last.

Zvolanek's Blue Wonder—A large clear blue flower upon opening, but changes to a light violet as it ages. Slightly larger than the above.

Zvolanek's Blue Chief—A blue self which is slightly darker than Zvolanek's Blue Sensation, but in all other respects is the same.

Zvolanek's Comet—A large salmon on cream ground. A good bloomer and holds color very well. If well grown, majority of flowers produce four on a long stem and with double standards or wings—very large.

Price—¼ oz., $4.00.

Zvolanek's Pink—Practically the same as Zvolanek's Rose, but shorter grower. Color of more intense pink, which holds color to the very last.

Price—1 oz., $2.50; 4 oz., $8.00; 1 lb., $25.00.

Zvolanek's Rose—This is the very best commercial Sweet Pea ever produced to date. Every one who has ever tried it cannot say enough for it and wants it again in larger quantities. The flowers are of the most beautiful self-rose color, double the size of Mrs. Skach; holds its color to the last and is a free bloomer, also unexcelled for outdoors.

Price—1 oz., $2.00; 4 oz., $6.00; 1 lb., $20.00.

Zvolanek's Perfection—Dark pink or old rose of very largest size; similar to Zvolanek's Rose in shape and size. Holds color to last; short crop.

Price—1 oz., $2.00.

Zvolanek's Xmas Gem—Same color as Xmas Pink, only double the size. One of our 1919 introductions. Short crop.

Price—1 oz., $2.00.

White and Blush Colors

Zvolanek's White—The largest white-seeded white in existence; flowers are wide apart with nearly all fours; majority with double wings or standards. The very best commercial white to date.

Zvolanek's Swan—The very best black-seeded white; rather short grower, with very ruffled flowers. One of our 1920 introductions.

Ed. Zvolanek—Purest lavender, similar to Mrs. Chas. Zvolanek in color, but very large. A good bloomer in darkest winter. If well grown the majority of the flowers produce four to a long stem, with double wings or standards. This variety is a great improvement over all other lavenders. May revert to some extent, but we guarantee it about 90 per cent true.

Price—1 oz., $2.00; 4 oz., $6.00; 1 lb., $20.00.

These are the best commercial varieties and all of largest size. There are none better. Send for complete list.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

THE demise of John McCleary, a retired nurseryman of Sewell, N. J., is reported on the obituary page of this issue.

THE Elizabeth Nursery Co., Elizabeth, N. J., was one of the more prominent exhibitors at the Greater Newark dahlia show, held at Newark, N. J., September 13 to 16.

The summer meeting and outing of the New York State Nurserymen's Association were held at the Rod and Gun Club, on Seneca lake, Geneva, N. Y., Saturday, September 9. There were in attendance about seventy nurserymen from different parts of the state.

A short business meeting was held, at which an interesting address was given on "Trade Organizations and Their Value," by Vincent Welch, secretary of the Geneva Chamber of Commerce. The remainder of the time was devoted to social enjoyment, consisting of a ball game and other sports and ending with a bountiful dinner. All those in attendance voted the occasion a most enjoyable one, due credit for which should be given to John P. Rice, of Geneva, N. Y., president of the association.

SOUTHERN NURSERYMEN MEET.

At Lexington, Ky.

When the song writer penned the lines of "My Old Kentucky Home," he must have looked forward to the twenty-fourth convention of the Southern Nurserymen's Association, for the sun shone bright from the first to the last day.

Members began to arrive in Lexington Tuesday, September 12, and in spite of delayed trains, the La Fayette hotel was the center of the southern nursery industry long before the opening session Thursday morning, September 14.

President C. A. Simpson called the convention to order promptly at 10 a. m. Dr. Benjamin J. Bush, pastor of Second Presbyterian church, offered an invocation. This was followed by greetings from the city of Lexington given by W. G. Dunlap, commissioner of public property, to which response was made by Charles T. Smith, of Concord, Ga.

President Speaks on Shipping Rates.

The president's address referred to the work of the association during the previous year, scored the present express and freight charges and referred in strong terms to the injury done to legitimate nurserymen by farmers and small operators who enter the business for a season or two.

The president recommended that an of standard trade terms, customs and grades for the association.

"Part Cash in Advance with Order" was treated in a paper prepared by Paul C. Stark, of Louisiana, Mo. This paper was read by Secretary Fraser, in Mr. Stark's absence.

"Closer Coöperation with the A. A. N." was discussed by Paul C. Lindley, of Pomona, N. C., president of the A. A. N. Mr. Lindley showed that only a small percentage of southern nurserymen were members of the A. A. N., and urged that during the coming year efforts be made to increase the membership, with the object of affiliating with the American association.

Nursery Trade Laws.

Charles T. Smith, of Concord, Ga., gave a careful and thoughtful digest of the laws governing nursery firms doing business in the southern states. Because of these conflicting laws it is becoming increasingly difficult to make interstate shipments of nursery stock. The subject was referred to the committee on legislation, with power to take such action as may be deemed best.

"The Ethics of the Trade" was the topic of a straight-from-the-shoulder talk by O. J. Howard, of Hickory, N. C., on fair and honorable practices between seller and buyer.

A paper of unusual interest and value to southern landscape men was prepared by L. M. Jenney, of Roseacres, Miss., on the "Broad-Leaf Evergreens of the South." Such a wealth of this material is available that a designer may lay out a reasonably large plan without using deciduous trees or conifers.

Outlook in My State.

Under the heading of "The Nursery Outlook in My State," brief reports on general conditions were made by members from each state represented in the southern association. Spring business was entirely "to the good," weather and growing conditions good in the early part of the season, with dry weather from the latter part of July. There seems to be a plentiful supply of peach trees, and a statement was made that a farmers' organization in one state was advising against planting for a year or longer.

Summer Planting.

W. W. Hillenmeyer's discussion of "New Methods in Summer Planting" brought out some points that will go far toward bridging over the slack period between spring and fall. For several years his firm has been experimenting with wire baskets instead of burlap as binders for the ball. Plants are set in these baskets a year or more before being offered for sale; then the whole root system is reset in the nursery row and grown on. At digging time the ball is lifted intact, a solid ball of fibrous roots and soil. The basket is easily removed at the transplanting operation. The cost is slightly greater than the older methods, but a customer can buy a tree or shrub in full leaf and bloom, and be as sure of future growth as when stock is moved dormant.

Resolutions and Officers.

Friday morning's session was fully as important as those of the preceding day. The first address was by V. D. Hill, of Dundee, Ill., on "Evergreens for the South." Mr. Hill said it was almost useless to grow evergreens, or other stock, unless they could be sold; therefore a large portion of his address was given over to various sales plans and publicity suggestions.

Papers on insects and diseases were presented by J. A. McClintock and Dr. C. D. Sherbakoff, of Knoxville, Tenn.

A resolution endorsing the plan of the Illinois association to boost the slogan "Plan to Plant Another Tree" was unanimously adopted, thus making the Southern Nurserymen's Association the first of the sectional organizations to approve the plan.

A resolution to the effect that the southern association become affiliated with the A. A. N. was adopted. Again the southern men are first in such action.

A special committee consisting of J. R. Mayhew, H. B. Chase, C. T. Smith, Thomas Stark and Lee McClain was appointed to coöperate with the various state entomologists in their efforts to secure adequate and just legislation.

Charles T. Smith, chairman of the nominating committee, presented for president the name of O. J. Howard, Hickory, N. C.; for vice-president, Walter W. Hillenmeyer, Lexington, Ky.; for secretary-treasurer, O. W. Fraser, Birmingham, Ala.; all of whom were unanimously elected and duly installed.

Atlanta, Ga., was selected as the convention city for 1923, with date as the third Wednesday and Thursday in August.

Various Notes.

Southern nurserymen are under obligations to W. W. Hillenmeyer, Louis H. Hillenmeyer and the management of the Hotel La Fayette for the excellent arrangements made for the convention. Walter and Louis are typical old-time Kentucky hosts.

Robert Chase was missed at this session, but most of the men envied his good fortune in getting a trip to Europe. Mr. Chase says that France is no place for him—"Old Alabam' is good enough."

Visiting rotarians were guests of the Lexington Club at luncheon Thursday, September 14. As a special mark of regard, President Frank Carter, William Dunn and Scott Breckenridge, of the Lexington Club, were initiated into the "Yellow Dogs" by Chief Bow Wow Chase and assistants, John and Ollie Fraser.

Trains on the southern roads were greatly delayed. Some of the men were ten hours behind schedule, and consequently the first day's program was somewhat disarranged.

Friday, September 15, at the closing session, the association expressed in a most generous and enthusiastic fashion its love and esteem for its three oldest members, H. F. Hillenmeyer, W. T. Hood and A. A. Hewson, by making these veteran nurserymen honorary members for life.

Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Scarff, of New Carlisle, O.; Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Bollender, of Tippecanoe City; Mr. and Mrs. W. B. McDonald and C. W. Reed, of Vincennes, Ind., motored from their homes to the convention. Mr. and Mrs. E. Fred Rowe, of Harrisburg, Pa., also motored through.

the Hillenmeyers conducted early arrivals to some of Kentucky's stock farms, then on a tour of inspection of the nursery and fruit orchards. In the evening a special session of the officers and members was held, at which time several important subjects were opened and discussed.

Through the generosity of the Hillenmeyers, who really were the hosts of the convention, more than three score members and visitors were given an automobile trip Friday, September 15. The journey covered the greater part of the city, then to some of Kentucky's famous stock farms and to the stable of that great runner, Man O'War, who looked his finest for the visitors. After a drive around the nursery, Kentucky hospitality in its best form was served on the lawn at the home of Louis Hillenmeyer. In expressing the good wishes of the guests, C. T. Smith said that it was not only the close of a perfect day, but the close of one of the most successful meetings of the Southern Nurserymen's Association. E. F. R.

EVERGREENS FOR THE SOUTH.

Surveying the Situation.

Before the war, it was, of course, customary to import many of the different varieties of coniferous and broad-leaved evergreen trees and shrubs. It was generally understood that a great many things could not be grown here in America through lack of skill or soil or climatic conditions. It was thought that the propagation of some of the junipers, thuja, taxus, cedrus, cupressus and biota varieties required some secret process such as only foreigners possessed. Rhododendrons, azaleas and boxwoods were out of the question. Magnolias, camellias, abelias, ligustrums, viburnums, etc., were a downright impossibility for American growers even to attempt. One writer even went so far as to say that American growers did not have the intelligence to grow certain needed articles of stock formerly imported.

Gentlemen, I am glad to say that these myths were soon exploded. The central and eastern growers are getting into their stride. All through this great south land, your leading growers, big and little, are equipping themselves to produce trees and plants formerly imported from Europe and Asia. Some of the most important tree and plant pro-

Greenhouse Heating

Subscribers are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

REPLANNING SYSTEM.

I have sent a sketch of my heating system and greenhouses. As you will notice, the flows rise to a height of seven and one-half feet above the two boilers; these are all 3½-ich pipes and connect with a 3½-inch pipe running the length of five houses, each 20x100. The flow pipes run into multipliers and return on the gutter posts, except in house No. 2, where they are under the benches. Because the pipes in No. 2 are nearly level with the top of the boiler, the heating at times works unsatisfactorily. All return ends are connected to both boilers. The temperature I desire to obtain is about 55 to 60 degrees in the daytime and 50 to 55 degrees at night. C. B.—O.

From the sketch it appears that there are fifty-eight 1-inch returns in the five houses, the number varying from ten to thirteen in each house, in addition to the two overhead flow pipes. This is considerably more than is required for steam, but is not enough for hot water heating. Besides, it is not advisable to attempt to use 1-inch return pipes for hot water, especially if the pipes are more than twenty-five feet in length. Fairly good results might be obtained with hot water under pressure, except that the main returns should be of the same size as the flows.

While the use of two 2-inch flow pipes in each house is not particularly objectionable, one flow pipe would be enough for steam heating and with nine 1-inch returns and two additional returns in the houses having exposed side walls, good results can be secured with a gravity system if the returns are three feet above the boiler. If this elevation cannot be secured, use a steam trap or an electric pump.

HEATING ADDITIONAL HOUSE.

We have sent you an end view of our greenhouse range, showing a proposed addition. We should like to have information regarding the heating of the place. The range, as it now is, comprises the shop and garage, with the lean-to house shown. This is set four feet in the ground and has a 6-inch wall of concrete. The heating plant we now have consists of a Wilks heater and four sets of coils under the benches. The north bench has six pipes; the second bench, three pipes, and the south bench, five pipes. This is ¼-inch pipe fed by two 2-inch mains, with one 2-inch return.

If we should desire to change to steam heat, would it be necessary to make any change in the pipe arrangements? The heater is placed at the northwest corner of the present house and two feet lower, which would make it six feet lower than the floor of the new house. We intend to get a heater of about 7,000 feet capacity. We should like to heat the place to 60 degrees above zero, when the outside tempera- when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero. J. C. & S.—Neb.

It is noted that sixteen 1¼-inch returns are used in the house now heated. It is understood that this house is only 20x30 feet, with the side walls against other houses that are heated. It would be advisable to use only seven 1¼-inch returns in this house, in addition to one-overhead 2-inch flow pipe, with low-pressure steam. Unless the returns are at least two feet above the water level of the boiler, it will be necessary to install a steam trap or pump with which to return the water to the boiler.

For the new house, 36x70 feet, with four and one-half feet of glass in the 7-foot side wall, one 2½-inch flow pipe and sixteen 1¼-inch returns will be needed. Without knowing how the benches are to be arranged, it is not possible to give definite advice regarding the location of the returns, but it would be well to place four on the exposed wall or under the side bench on that side of the house and distribute the others under the remaining benches.

Each pipe which supplies a coil should have a gate valve after it leaves the flow and there should be another on the return or drip pipe at the other end of each coil. Sometimes valves are placed at each end of several of the individual pipes in the coils, but where there are so many coils this is not really necessary, although it is often desirable to be able to shut off the steam from one pipe in each coil.

There should be a check valve in the main return near the heater and, if a single flow is used for each house, it is often convenient to be able to cut off the entire house with one valve located near to where it leaves the main flow pipe. Of course, all the pipes in the system should run downhill, when this is possible.

HEATING PARTITIONED HOUSE.

Kindly inform me how to heat a greenhouse, 32x180 feet, with side walls five feet six inches high and eight feet high at the ridge. There are three feet of glass in the east side, four feet of glass in the west side, while the ends have three feet of woodwork and the remainder glass. A glass partition in the center of the house divides it. I wish to maintain 55 degrees in the south end, which is the lower end, and 75 degrees in the north end. I have six raised benches in the north end, but the beds in the south end are solid. I wish to heat with steam, using a 10-horsepower vertical steam boiler, which will be placed in the north end of the house. I am using oil for fuel. The temperature goes to 32 degrees above zero here. E. R. H.—Cal.

It is noted that a 10-horsepower steam boiler is to be used for heating. It would be preferable to use a 15-horsepower boiler, although with oil as fuel it will, doubtless, be possible to provide the steam needed for the house.

The fact that one end of the house is to be kept 20 degrees warmer than the other complicates matters to some extent, but we are confident that the following arrangement of the piping will give the results desired: Run a 1½-inch lead on each side wall plate the entire length of the house and at the farther end connect each of them with a coil of four 1¼-inch return pipes, to be carried on the walls. This should provide 55 degrees throughout the house in freezing weather. In order to have 75 degrees in the north end of the house, it would be well to run an additional 1½-inch flow pipe about six feet below the ridge to the partition between the two rooms and use this to feed six 1¼-inch return pipes, locating two under each of three benches.

HEATING HOUSE AND LEAN-TO.

I have one greenhouse, 21x40 feet, and a lean-to, 9x40 feet. There are three feet of concrete and four feet of glass in the side walls. The boiler will be required to heat the dwelling house as well. What are the heating requirements for this range? How large should the boiler be, how many flows and returns will be required and how should they be placed? C. J.—Ia.

From the sketch it is learned that there are four benches in the even-span house and two in the lean-to. This indicates that there are thirty 2-inch returns in the two houses, all of which are supplied by the 3-inch main flow pipe.

There is nothing to indicate what temperature is desired in the houses or the minimum winter temperature, but it is presumed that about 60 degrees will be right for the greenhouse and 50 degrees in the lean-to, with a minimum outdoor temperature of 20 degrees below zero.

While the 3-inch main would answer for the 40-foot houses, it would be well to use a 4-inch main if the houses are to be lengthened to seventy feet. Our choice would be to use three 2½-inch flow pipes in the greenhouse, but if plenty of 2-inch pipe is available, this may be used for the flow as well as for the return pipes. If this plan is followed, four 2-inch flows and twelve 2-inch returns should be used. Place two of the flows on the side wall plates and the two others on the purlin posts, and arrange a coil of three returns under each of the four benches.

In the lean-to, for 50 degrees place one flow pipe on the outer wall plate and another on the inner wall a foot below the glass. In addition to the mains, four 2-inch returns will be required. If more than 50 degrees is desired, one or two additional returns may be put in.

The piping may be arranged for the present houses with the idea of extending the houses next year.

Another way of arranging the flow pipes in the greenhouse would be to retain the 3-inch main to supply the return coils in the middle of the house and in addition use a 2-inch flow on each of the side wall plates to supply the other coils.

USING OLD PIPE ON HAND.

I have mailed you a blue print of a greenhouse which I have just completed. Kindly sketch and describe with pen and ink a diagram on the blue print, giving the location, the sizes and the number of flows and returns which will be required to heat this house to 55 degrees when the outside temperature is at 25 degrees below zero. State the size of boiler required also. I have on hand 800 feet of 1¼-inch pipe, 200 feet of 3-inch pipe and 400 feet of 2-inch pipe, which I should like to use if this is practical. I have a Capitol Winchester hot water boiler, rated at 1,075 feet of radiation, with two 3-inch flows and two 3-inch returns.

W. L. W.—N. Y.

The blue print shows the house to be 28x50 feet, with three and one-half feet of concrete blocks and the same amount of glass in each of the walls. There are three benches, approximately five feet wide, in the middle of the house and two narrow benches along the walls. There are gas pipe posts under each of the purlins and the ridge.

To provide radiation for 55 degrees when it is 25 degrees below zero, it would be well to run three 3-inch flow pipes through the house, locating one on each side wall plate and one on the middle row of posts. Connect the middle flow pipe direct with the boiler and unite the other two flows to the second 3-inch main from the boiler. In addition to the mains, eighteen 2-inch returns will be required for the best results, and the 2-inch pipe on hand will be sufficient for eight lines. To take the place of the remaining ten lines of 2-inch pipe, fifteen lines of 1¼-inch pipe may be substituted. It will give fairly good results in a house fifty feet in length, provided it is several feet above the top of the boiler. Run the eight lines of 2-inch pipe under the side benches and connect the fifteen lines of 1¼-inch pipe with the middle flow pipe and locate five under each of the middle benches.

EVERGREENS FOR THE SOUTH.

ducing units in the country are located in the area embraced by the Southern Nurserymen's Association. On a trip to the important growing centers a year ago last winter, I was amazed at the great progress as well as the push, enthusiasm and confidence displayed by southern growers in the work of producing plants formerly shipped in from abroad. You have the skillful and experienced growers and your leaders stand foremost in accomplishment. This, combined with every needed variety of soil and climate, will produce the stock wanted by the American consuming public.

The Pacific coast, with its especially favorable climatic conditions, also offers wonderful opportunities for the growing of varied lines of nursery and florists' stock, and these are being taken full advantage of by the growers there. There is in process of production a vast amount of needed stock that will help to fill the gap, and put American horticulture on the map. After two months spent last winter among Pacific coast growers, not a word of discouragement was heard. Everywhere they were throwing themselves into the work with renewed energy and confident determination.

What Result Will Obtain?

With all this intense activity in the production of nursery stock going on all over the country, what will be the outcome? For a few years the market will, undoubtedly, absorb what is produced, but after that, unless something is done, there will unquestionably arise the old problem of overproduction and brush piles, useful only for bonfires, also ruinous prices, both wholesale and retail, with cut-throat competition.

The nursery industry is composed roughly of about 4,000 nurserymen, with annual sales of about $20,000,000. These figures are from the 1920 census. Leading members of the nursery industry agree that $20,000,000 is less than one-fifth of the present potential market. One hundred million dollars in sales should be reached or substantially approached by the nursery industry in the next ten years. This advance in sales is entirely within the range of practical accomplishment. The consuming public of 110,000,000 people of this nation will gladly pay an average of $1 each to the nursery industry for the utility and beauty of trees and plants. We, however, as a nursery industry must develop tree planting into a national habit. This can be done by reminding this vast audience again and again throughout the year to plant trees.

The nursery industry has neglected to promote the idea of a tree planting habit. The nursery industry has been playing its tune on the piccolo, while other industries have been beating the bass drum. It is time to kindle the fire beneath the boiler, get up steam, blow the whistle and go ahead. Failure to do this means that the nurserymen will be left waiting at the depot.

The American Association of Nurserymen has never gone far in national publicity work, although several conscientious starts have been made. Some of the sectional and state associations have used one plan or another, but the point is that some one plan and one slogan must finally be adopted, that all nurserymen in the industry, whether member of an association or not, can tie up to.

We all know what success the florists have had in their "Say It with Flowers" campaign. As a result of this publicity, the live florists are getting rich, and even the sleepy florists make money and sell goods in spite of themselves, because of the tremendous demand created by a unified activity. One of the members of the American Face Brick Association stated that his firm was assessed for national publicity last year the sum of $22,500 and that they considered this money one of the most cheerful checks written during the year. Whether the nursery industry has national publicity or not, we shall pay for it. Pay for it in unsold goods, surplus stock, fire piles, overgrown trees, low prices, ruinous competition, etc.

The message I bring, then, to the Southern Nurserymen's Association and to the industry at large, is a plea for the adoption of some kind of organized national publicity. A publicity that will be on the job twenty-four hours each day, seven days in the week, and 365 days in the year. A publicity that will bring to the attention of the millions of prospective buyers the benefits of tree planting. Individual efforts cannot cope with the situation. Organized coöperative national publicity is the remedy.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

Business in the florists' line had an increase last week. Many weddings, several of great prominence, took place, which helped to make it the busiest week for some time. The few cool days have shortened the crop and the quality of the stock is improved. Carnations are arriving in limited quantities and the stock is short-stemmed. Some fine orchids are now to be had. Cattleya labiata, Oncidium varicosum and Cattleya Bowringiana are the varieties on the market at present.

Some large chrysanthemums were shipped in from the California growers and arrived in fine condition. S. N.

The twenty-third annual ball of the Newport Horticultural Society was held Thursday evening, September 14, at the Beach dance pavilion, with an unusually large number in attendance. Like all of these fine affairs in the past, the one this year was enjoyable and a marked success. The committee in charge worked hard and was well rewarded for its efforts. Each dancer received a neat and attractive program. During the intermission refreshments were served in the convention hall. The Newport banjo band rendered a delightful program of music. The committee in charge of the affair consisted of the following: Floor manager—William G. Taylor; assistant floor manager, Colonel Herbert Bliss; aids—Bruce Butterton, Frederick Carter, Andrew Dorward, Richard Gardner, William Gray, James Hooper, William MacKay, Alexander MacLellan, Andrew S. Meikle, James Robertson, William F. Smith, John B. Urquhart and V. A. Vanicek.

Robert Dunn has just completed the widening of one of his houses on Freeborn street, to make room for cyclamens.

Cards have been received from Nova Scotia from V. J. Vanicek, who is on an automobile tour of Canada; he states that gasoline sells at 50 cents per gallon there.

The famous Leeds estate here has been sold to James B. Duke, of Somerville, N. J., the tobacco king. It is understood that William Gray, the superintendent, who is secretary of the American Sweet Pea Society, will remain as superintendent.

Fred P. Webber gave several dramatic readings at the meeting of Aquidneck Grange in the Middletown town hall last week.

John T. Allan and John Mahan were among the guests of former Governor Beeckman on his power boat, Shark, to the Kingston fair last week.

The Newport County Agricultural Society opened a four days' fair at Portsmouth September 19, where several additional buildings have been erected this summer, including a large horticultural hall.

Leikens announces that the firm will have an enlarged establishment in New York this winter, having leased the building adjoining the Madison avenue store, and the whole will be thrown into one. W. H. M.

WHITE HYBRID DELPHINIUMS.
Several years ago Wm. Toole, Sr., discovered a plant among some Delphinium Formosum which bore pure white flowers. Since then he has crossed them with choice hybrids and selected from the best of these.
In general habit of growth they are like a good strain of hybrids of the blue color. Some of them are double though most are single, some have dark centers but most are pure white.
The plants we offer have all been selected and marked while in flower and no inferior specimens are sent out.
Price for strong selected plants, carefully packed, 35c each, $3.50 per doz., $25.00 per 100, $225.00 per 1000.
WILLIAM TOOLE & SON,
Garry-nee-Dule, Baraboo, Wis.

For many years we have given special attention to the betterment of Delphiniums and we feel confident that no better plants or better strain can be had anywhere. Ask the florists who have forced our stock.
Belladonna, strong 1-yr., $7.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; Belladonna, strong 2-yr., $10.00 per 100, $75.00 per 1000; Bellamosum, strong 1-yr., $7.00 per 100; English Hybrids, fine strain, $10.00 per 100, $75.00 per 1000.

Imagine a Daisy of a rich red or a soft pink, or any other color, borne on long stems and 2 to 3 inches across. Try a few of my field-grown plants at 25c, 35c and 50c each, according to sizes.

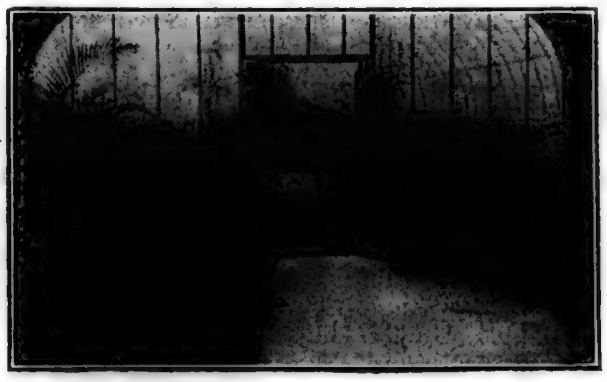
Butterworth of Framingham, Mass. One of Our Oldest and Youngest Customers

None of us here can remember when it was that J. T. Butterworth first became a Hitchings customer.



Even McArthur, our heating expert, who has been with us a quarter of a century at least, says Butterworth was buying heating equipment before he came on the scene.

Just this Spring he bought from a private estate that was being settled, this Hitchings curved end house. He had us take it down and erect it as a show house attached to the flower shop.

As things now stand, Butterworth himself is doing a lot of smoking his pipe and enjoying life, while his son and daughter do the rustling. But don't you think for a minute that "his Nibbs" doesn't know what's going on. Or that as long as he can walk through his orchid houses, that he won't do it.

This lean-to orchid house is, without doubt, the oldest greenhouse in the U. S. next to the one of The Lyman Estate at Waltham, Mass. That one was built about 130 years ago. This one 74.

Strange, isn't it, that more don't wake up to the sales value of a show house opening off their flower shop? Doesn't take long for them to pay for themselves.

Why, man alive, these orchids are like folks to him. Real folks that converse with him by sign language.

If you are near Framingham don't miss dropping around to see him. A party of four who recently stopped just for a few minutes to look around, stayed hour after hour, and then were peeved because the day wasn't longer.

Is Your Cost Right?

You can't set the selling price, but you can set the cost. Is your cost right?

You may have more orders than you can fill, and yet be losing money. It is not what you get for flowers, but what they cost you. There are many growers that have gone out of business because of too great an overhead. As competition increases the margin of profit between the cost and selling price is narrowed. A time will come when only the most progressive growers will be able to stand the gaff of competition.

He will be the man who watches for every new means of saving, and when he builds, he sees to it that his greenhouse is built, having the largest planting space at a minimum cost. He makes use of the best planting methods, and consequently makes good.

AGMCO can build that house for you. The most prosperous growers, are AGMCO growers. Why? Because our houses are planned and built to conserve space, and save in heating. We also have new planting methods that will make your work easier and more productive.

Are you interested? Just drop us a line, and we will be glad to show you, with no obligation.

33 Working Days

Put Up These Two Houses 60x400 for the St. Louis Rose Company

On the morning of June the twelfth our gang of men landed on the ground and started sorting out the materials and commenced erecting.
On July eighteenth, only thirty-three days later, the photographs were taken showing both houses all up and ready for the benches and installation of the steam heat.

Unless you have been on the ground and seen our men lay out a house, sort the materials, place them in their erection order, and then put them up section after section, you can have no idea of the speed with which it happens.
However, it doesn't just happen.
Everything is carefully laid out and planned at the factory to happen the way it happens.
All possible assembling of parts is done at the factory, so there will be but little putting together of individual members on the job.

For example, the entire rafter and trussing from the column to the ridge is shipped completely assembled and on the job is bodily lifted, as one piece, into place.
The wrought iron posts have their double gusset plates all hot riveted on, so it's simply a matter of dropping the rafter into place and slipping in the bolts.

Instead of depending on a herd of huge wooden horses, we use a flying scaffold which, once the rafters and purlins are in place, can be used to complete the rest of the work.

It leaves the house practically free, so if desired, the benching and heating can be going on without interference.
In one of George Stumpp's recent ad. talks in the Review's "Pink Sheet" he mentioned how some folks only think things out and stop.
Others both think them out, and think them through.
The larger success and satisfaction is for the man who does both.

We like to think that to a certain extent we have done both in connection with the construction and erection of our houses.
Of course we will never be through thinking it out and thinking it through, because if we ever should be through, that very day our bell would be rung. We would fast become back numbers.
If you incline to talk building, say when and where, and we'll be there.

Of course no matter how carefully and thoroughly our construction may be thought out and thought through, if a sufficient number of mechanics cannot be secured, the work won't progress. We turned 17 loose on this job and how they have made things hum.

Speaking of this photo, the head of the St. Louis Rose Company, Mr. L. A. Hoerr, remarked that "the large roller and pair of horses looked like peanuts in these huge iron frame houses."

How to Handle Formosum Lilies

(From the writings of Fritz Bahr)

"I consider the so-called Formosum Lily the ideal one to force for the retail grower; for what you need in the way of Lilies from the end of February on, even up to Easter, stick to the Formosums. Even bulbs planted of this variety as early as September may be had in flower as late as Easter, not all of them, but a good percentage, if they are grown in a carnation house temperature. Here you will find some of the plants set buds by the middle of February and be thirty inches in height, while others are only twelve inches and won't set buds during the next five or six weeks, but they will all come along nicely if given time.

"While the least check to the Giganteum Lilies may have bad results, no matter how good and sound the bulbs may be, you will hardly ever experience serious trouble with the Formosums, as long as you do not want the plants to come into flower for a certain date. Give the bulbs a liberal sized pot, good drainage and a fair soil and place the freshly potted bulbs in a frame; a 3-in. or 4-in. layer of soil over the pots will prevent drying out and keep the soil cool. Don't let the pots dry out and place a little shade over the frames until active growth begins. Before danger of frost, bring the plants to a Carnation house; some may be 6 inches tall, others just coming. Place on a light bench and keep them clean at all times. If you want to hustle some of the more advanced plants at any time, after they have become pot-bound, they can stand 10 degrees more, but they can be successfully handled in a 50-degree house."

The Ball Calendula

¼ oz., $3.00; oz., $5.00.

We gladly announce the arrival of another supply of hand-picked seed, permitting us to care for all orders promptly. This is another coal saving crop and, in the case of our strain, a profitable one. It is of extra strong growth, producing long-stemmed, large, uniformly double flowers, of a rich, clear, orange color.

To make certain these characteristics were not due to our local conditions we placed trials with a number of growers; the following experiences being typical of all:

Terre Haute, Ind.,
July 18, 1922.

Mr. Geo. J. Ball,
Glen Ellyn, Ill.

My dear Mr. Ball:

We consider your new Calendula quite remarkable, particularly as to its doubleness. The plants which you furnished us last year bloomed much longer and with a greater number of blooms than any other Calendula we have ever used.

Yours very truly,
J. W. Davis Company,
By O. K. Owen.

Geneva, Ill.,
Feb. 11, 1922.

Mr. Geo. J. Ball,
Glen Ellyn, Ill.

My dear Mr. Ball:

In answer to your inquiry as to how I like your Calendula, I can say without fear of contradiction that it is the finest Calendula on the market. The color is perfect, flowers large and very prolific. I have grown it for two years and feel more than satisfied with it. If I could get as many dollars out of the rest of my glass as I do out of the Calendula, I would be more than pleased. Wishing you the greatest success.

Very truly yours,
RIVERBANK GREENHOUSES,
Charles S. McCauley, Manager.

Nashville, Tenn.,
July 5, 1922.

Mr. Geo. J. Ball,
Glen Ellyn, Ill.

Dear Sir:

It gives us great pleasure to recommend your new extra large and double Calendula, which we tried out for you last year. This Calendula is much better than the ordinary type, as it not only produces more blooms, but they are of so much better quality. It is a very great improvement in the Calendula family.

Thanking you for the seed and with best wishes, we are

Yours very truly,
JOY FLORAL CO.

New Carnation SUPER-SUPREME

Super-Supreme is a sport from Enchantress Supreme. It is the same as the parent in every particular excepting the color, which is much livelier and more pleasing. Super-Supreme should not be confounded with the several deep salmon colored sports of Enchantress Supreme, from which it is totally distinct. We have already booked many orders from growers who have seen it growing here. Delivery will begin in December of this year. If you need to buy in that color, by all means order Super-Supreme. If you are growing Enchantress Supreme, order enough to change over to Super-Supreme the second year. Let us have your order early.

Remember Them?

—at the Indianapolis Show

There were 12 of those big fellows, some with 140 flowers on them as big as your head. They all came from here. That Cleveland expert, Lars Anderson, grew them.

Our last year's stock was very good. Some claimed, "Not a blind shoot in them," and this year's stock looks just as good if not better. No secret in growing them, just common sense. Your favorite variety by the thousand from 4-inch, 5-inch, 6-inch and 7-inch pots at 25c, 40c, 60c and 75c. Some larger plants from $1.00 to $3.00 each. Get our list, it is the most complete.

Order now and get them shipped while the weather is warm.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

BALTIMORE BECKONS F. T. D. MEMBERS

Next month the florists of Baltimore will act as hosts to the F. T. D., the first time that organization has met so far east. Their invitation is warm, as here expressed by a patriarch of the Baltimore trade, who tells about the florists you will meet there.

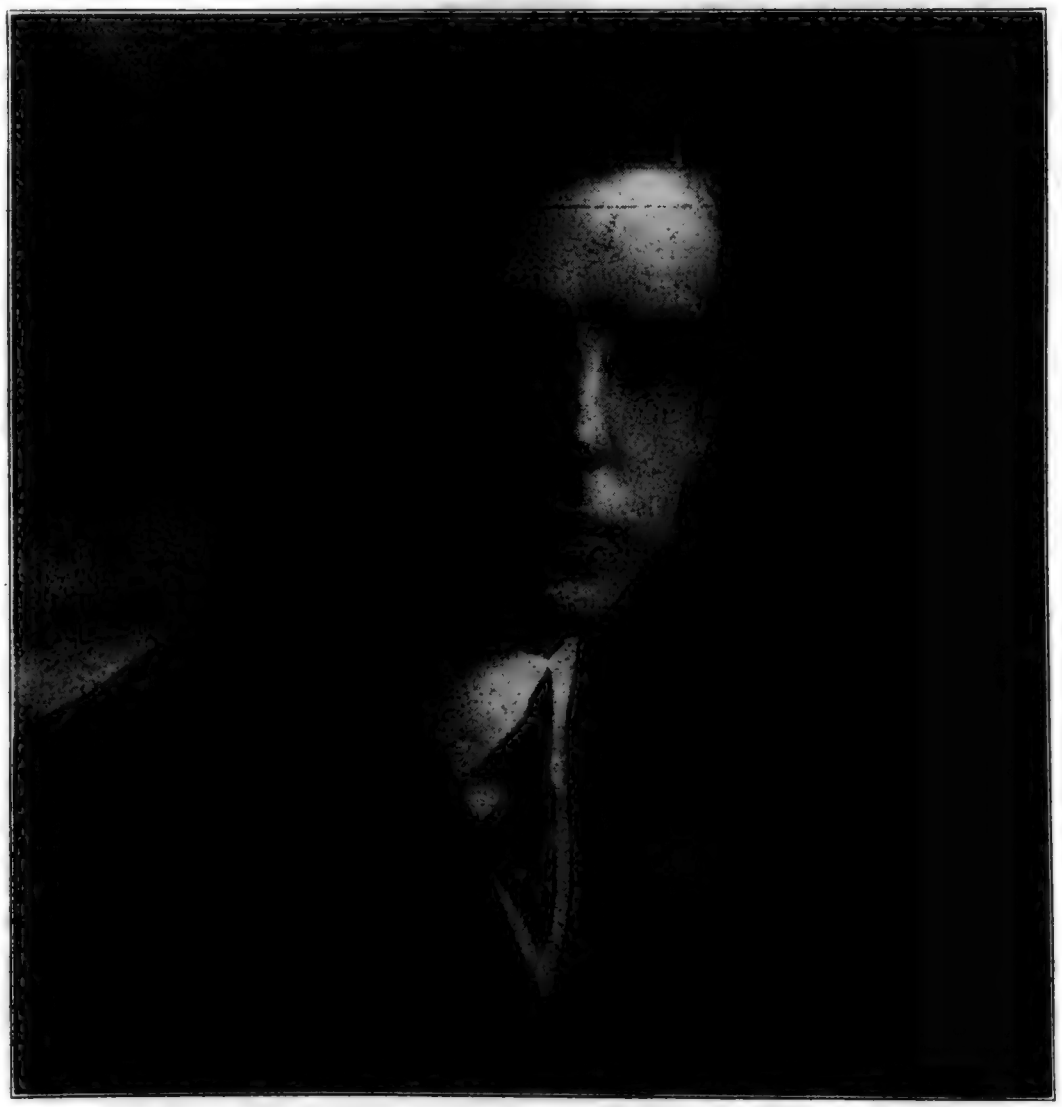
By ROBERT TATE PATERSON.

OCTOBER 10 to 12 the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association will hold its annual business meeting at the Emerson hotel, Baltimore, Md. It is a well recognized fact that in the last decade no other organization in the trade, if we except the S. A. F., as sponsor of the national publicity campaign, has so increased the sale of flowers as has this. It was in Chicago in 1912, when its membership totaled fifty-seven and its liabilities were greater than its assets, that the association was rejuvenated. Today it has a membership of 2,400, transacting a yearly volume of business estimated to be in the neighborhood of ten million dollars.

The association is made up of leading retail florists of this country and Canada, men who have forgotten all about that old quotation, so much used in every other industry, "Competition is the life of trade."

Coöperation.

The F. T. D. has awakened to the fact that big business transactions are only accomplished through coöperation. The Review has continually preached to its readers that only through organization and coöperation would the florists' industry come into its own. The amount of business transacted annually by this organization is prima-facie evidence that only through coöperation can any industry hope to succeed in these days of modern business efficiency.



The board of directors realized the need of a more perfect organization at their meeting last May, when the services of J. F. Ammann as a field man were secured. Mr. Ammann is fast organizing the florists in the different parts of the country in district units. In the short six months of his labors the results of this move are already apparent.

In Its Infancy.

The F. T. D. is growing each year. Its service is becoming better known, and the demand for flowers by telegraph is bound to increase. Accordingly, it will be necessary ere long for the florists to get together to see that the supply is properly adjusted, for there is never an order over the wires by which the product of some grower is not being sold. Let us not lose sight of the fact that the members of the organization are not the only ones benefiting by its success. Every grower in the country reaps his share, as do the supply men, greenhouse constructors and, in fact, every allied tradesman.

In spite of the enormous business transacted by this organization, two-thirds of the public have never heard of the F. T. D., to say nothing of what its service is. This service is still in its infancy. Its possibilities are unlimited, yet we hear of florists today, in the large cities, transacting a telegraph business ranging from $25,000 to $100,000 annually. It is the desire of the officers and the members to have every retail florist in this country and Canada in its membership, in the shortest interval of time, in order that every section of the country may be covered by F. T. D. service.

The organization, in its short span of life, has outgrown this country and Canada. At the Baltimore meeting members will be present from England, and it is hoped some from the continent of Europe. This business meeting is going to be a most important one.

Vice-President Charles L. Feast Leads Baltimore Florists in Welcome to F. T. D.

Expansion.

We can well understand, when we consider the mushroom growth of the organization, that emergencies have arisen which were unprovided-for in its original constitution. Its by-laws will have to be made more stringent. We must not lose sight of the fact that we are members of a gigantic public service corporation, that we are handling vast sums of the public's money, and this money must be safeguarded.

It was formerly the custom of members to look after their own collections. The business has grown to such an extent that this has become a burden and an unnecessary expense. It is now proposed to have a clearing house, through which all F. T. D. transactions will be liquidated once each month by the use of a single check. This will obviate overdue accounts, and all F. T. D. actions will be on a cash basis.

But I could go on writing indefinitely and then not half the story would be told. If you are a retail florist, attend the Baltimore meeting; it will be time and money well spent.

Samuel Feast & Sons.

There you will meet, among others, Charles and William Feast. The foundation of their business was laid by Samuel Feast in 1832, at the corner of Franklin and Gilmore streets. In 1840 Mr. Feast took his two sons, Samuel, Jr., and J. Edward, into the business, which was then moved to the 300 block on North Charles street. For eighty-two years three generations of the Feast family transacted business in this block. This firm has just moved to a new location, at 527 North Charles street, where William and Charles F. Feast, the present proprietors, have just completed a new store that is the last word in efficiency for handling the retail florists' business. Samuel Feast & Sons were the original F. T. D. members in Baltimore. Charles F. Feast is vice-president of the organization and general chairman of the arrangements committee at Baltimore. William Feast is chairman of the finance committee.

Robert L. Graham.

In 1892 Robert L. Graham started a retail store for the sale of flowers at the intersection of Aisquith and Gay streets. Mr. Graham loves to tell the story how, after he had paid his first month's rent of $12, he had $15 left with which to stock and equip his store. From the first this little shop prospered. Mrs. Graham, who looked after it, was a born business woman, quick to make friends, and soon a fine trade was built up. After the children had grown, a branch store was opened, at 854 West North avenue, which is in charge of Robert, Jr., and Mrs. Margaret Graham. Both of these young people are full of the F. T. D. spirit, and this store has its full share of the orders sent and received by wire in Baltimore.

Robert L. Graham, Sr., is chairman of the hospitality committee for the Baltimore meeting, and Robert L. Graham, Jr., is chairman of the publicity committee.

Mary Paterson Johnston.

In 1873 Robert Paterson, the father of the present proprietor, founded the business now conducted by Mrs. Mary Paterson Johnston at 223 and 225 West Madison street, in the early days right on the outskirts of Baltimore's most exclusive residential section.

Mary Johnston was born in the florists' business and has spent her entire life in managing the business she now conducts. By her courteous manner and square dealing she has built up a clientele of the best flower lovers in Baltimore. Telegraph business is a hobby with this woman, and her business with other florists is growing by leaps and bounds. Her husband, William J. Johnston, is chairman of the hotel reservation committee.

William J. Halliday.

Halliday is one of the oldest names in the trade in Baltimore. In 1890 William J. Halliday married Miss Katie Brackett, a young lady who had spent her entire life in the flower shop of his father. This young couple opened a store on North Charles street, and the public who were in the habit of having Mrs. Halliday attend to their flower wants soon transferred their patronage to this new store. Sarah C. Groves, at the age of 16, entered the employ of Mr. Halliday, to learn the business, and on the death of Mr. Halliday, Mrs. Halliday having died a number of years before, Miss Groves took the business over and is still conducting it under the name of William J. Halliday.

Miss Groves is chairman of the ladies' committee arranging for the Baltimore meeting.

Isaac H. Moss Co.

In 1882 Isaac H. Moss, a young man who had served his time with William D. Brackenbridge, a gardener of the old school, determined to launch out in the florists' business on his own account. Without capital, Mr. Moss erected, in the yard of his father's residence, a small lean-to. That humble beginning has now grown into the Isaac H. Moss Co., with two ranges of modern houses and twenty-two acres of ornamental nursery stock. The company, now within the corporate limits of Baltimore city, transacts a large business at retail as well as wholesale. Mr. Moss was quick to see the possibilities of telegraph service, and his company is transacting a large volume of business by wire.

Mr. Moss is chairman of the decorating committee for the Baltimore meeting.

J. J. Cummings.

J. J. Cummings, a young man from New York, some years ago opened a retail flower store at 1131 West Baltimore street. Though this was first a humble beginning, his little store prospered from the start. Its proprietor was ambitious and soon made an arrangement with St. Mary's Industrial School, which had a large range of houses. These he conducted, and from them he obtained his stock. This range was finally abandoned by the school, and Mr. Cummings erected a range for himself. At this time his four sons, who had reached manhood, were taken into the firm.

The Cummings store and range are in the west end of the city, where they have one of the largest funeral order trades in the city. Mr. Cummings is an enthusiastic F. T. D. member and is pushing this branch of the business energetically.

There are, of course, other florists in Baltimore whose establishments you will wish to visit, perhaps. Space is too limited to describe all of them in detail. William F. Keys, Jr., is one of the leaders. J. A. Ritter & Son, Charles E. Smith & Co. and the Schuler-Thomas Co. are other F. T. D. members. One might lengthen the list of retailers, and then add the wholesale houses of the S. S. Pennock Co. and William McKissick, as well as the growers, many of whom have interesting places in the vicinity—John Cook, the rosarian; Richard Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., the famous dahlia and geranium specialists, and others nearly as noted.

CANADIANS RECEIVE CHARTER.

Emery B. Hamilton, chairman of the legislative committee of the Canadian Florists' and Gardeners' Association, announces that a Dominion charter has been granted the organization. The application for incorporation bears the signatures of E. B. Hamilton, London, Ont.; William E. Groves, Hamilton, Ont.; James McKenna, A. C. Wilshire, E. J. Hayward and John Walsh, Montreal, Que.; John H. Dunlop, Walter Muston, S. A. McFadden and Alexander Simpson, Toronto, Ont. These form a provisional board, which will meet at a future date to conduct an election as set forth in the by-laws, voting for the officers and directors elected at the Montreal convention of the association, last August, thus bringing the C. F. G. A. into existence as an incorporated body.

The by-laws of the organization provide for a president, first and second vice-president and secretary-treasurer, to be elected by ballot at the annual meeting; a provincial vice-president for each province, to be appointed by the president-elect; an assistant secretary, to be appointed by the board of directors, from the town where the annual meeting of the year is to be held. The board of directors will consist of nine members elected by the association, three each year for a term of three years, and one elected by each subsection of the association. The board may appoint an executive committee of five, to include the president and secretary-treasurer, to deal with matters arising between meetings of the board.

Upon the request of fifteen paid-up members of the association, the board of directors will provide for the formation of a subsection covering a particular line of business, provided there are not more than ten subsections. Members of subsections must be members of the association in good standing.

Dues are $3 per year. Life membership is $25. Any member who fails to pay annual dues for two years shall forfeit his membership.

MOVE FOR STANDARDIZATION.

Ohio Organization Takes Lead.

Suggestions and plans for the standardization of grading cut flowers and plants have been presented with increasing frequency in recent years, though united action has never been achieved. That is the aim, however, of a move made by the Ohio district organization of the National Flower Growers' Association. Letters have been sent out to all the florists' clubs in the country, presenting a set of grades, for adoption or for modification, so that a common standard can be arrived at for later adoption by the National Flower Growers' Association, the Society of American Florists and the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association.

The letter sent out by L. C. Vinson, executive secretary of the Ohio district of the National Flower Growers' Association, is as follows:

At our recent meeting, June 21, our members unanimously asked that we, as an organization, take action towards the standardization and grading of cut flowers and plants.

We believe that this is one of the biggest and most vital questions that affect our industry.

Accordingly, at the quarterly meeting of our board of directors, the resolutions which are attached to this sheet on the grading of cut flowers were adopted, and I am instructed to send these standards to every florists' club in the country and ask that they appoint a committee to consider and adopt these rules at the earliest possible moment, or if they see fit to modify them to inform us. We are anxious that your organization go on record favoring the universal adoption of these standards at the earliest possible moment.

We would like to have you inform us as to any action that you may take in regard to this, as a year hence we want to have the various florists' clubs back us so that we can present these standards for universal adoption by the National Flower Growers' Association, the Society of American Florists and the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association.

Our organization is commencing to collect data for the standardization of the grading of a few of our most important pot plants. No standards will be adopted in this direction until after consultation with the leading growers in their respective lines.

The grades proposed and set forth on the sheet accompanying the above letter are as follows:

ROSES shall be graded both as to length and color and shall be sold by the inch system, according to the length of stem, and shall be graded "A" and "B" as to quality.

First quality to have good buds, no bullheads or crippled flowers, clean foliage and straight, strong stems.

CARNATIONS shall be graded under the following headings: Fancy, Good, Fair and Common.

Fancy, to be extra large blooms possessing all the qualities of a first-class flower, good keeper and shipper, good stiff stems and no splits.

Good, to have all the qualities of fancy, but smaller in size.

Fair, to be fair in size and quality, of even blooms and stems.

Common, to be all others, shorts, crooked stems and splits.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS, to be graded as Fancy, Special, Large, Medium and Small.

First quality of the different sizes to be a well finished bloom, good foliage and stem.

POMPONS, to be sold by the spray and graded the same as the larger chrysanthemums.

All other varieties of cut flowers to be graded similar to the above suitable grade, but under no circumstances should crooked stems and crippled flowers be included in the best grades.

ST. PAUL AND MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

This section was visited by a fine rain early last week. The rain was followed by real Minnesota September weather. Business is picking up. There have been a large number of weddings, some requiring elaborate decorations. Parties of various sorts have been more numerous than usual at this time of the year. Flowers of some kinds are scarce. Roses are coming into crop nicely. California chrysanthemums have been on the market for some time here.

Florists' Club Meets.

The annual meeting of the Minnesota State Florists' Association was held in the Midway Club, September 21, with a good attendance. Reports of officers and committees of the year were made and officers for the coming year were elected. The secretary's report showed a membership of 130, with the organization in a good financial condition. This report showed a good growth during the year. The officers elected were as follows: President, Max Kaiser; vice-president, R. A. Latham; treasurer, A. Lauritzen; secretary, LeRoy Cady. The following-named men were elected to serve on the executive committee: Hans Rosacker, Theodore Wirth, O. J. Olson and Hugh Will.

The general flower show committee made an interesting report to the Minnesota State Florists' Association at the annual meeting. A premium list of about $5,000 has been prepared. Nearly $1,000 of this consists of special premiums given by firms and individuals. The show will be held in the Kenwood Armory, Minneapolis, November 11 to 16. Dr. Allen, an experienced show manager, has been secured to act as general manager. Louis Boeglin, city horticulturist, will be superintendent of the show. Some half-dozen nurserymen are going to make exhibits in the annex. An interesting style show will be staged and music and other features will be added. It is proposed to sell a large block of tickets to each florist and others before the show, instead of raising a guarantee fund. If a good block of tickets can be disposed of in this way, the guarantee fund will not be needed. These will make good publicity, whether sold by the florists or given as premiums with purchases, as has been suggested. Some fine exhibits have been promised, and this list is growing every day. All that is needed now is the booster spirit. A booster banquet is to be held at the Elks' Club, Minneapolis, October 3, to which all members of the trade in this locality are invited, whether they are members of the association or not. There will be some fine talks, and the eats are always good there.

Various Notes.

Will Bros. Co. and Robert C. Stern have new delivery wagons.

The Lyndale Floral Co. has about completed the addition to its greenhouse.

Superintendent Theodore Wirth is spending a short vacation in Omaha, Neb.

O. J. Olson and LeRoy Cady have been named to serve on the advisory committee of the commissioner of parks and play grounds of St. Paul. L. C.

FORT COLLINS, COLO.

The announcement is made that the Espelin Floral Co. has sold its retail store at 111 East Oak street to O. B. Robbins, who has established business of the same kind at Loveland and Longmont. The Fort Collins store will be in charge of Leon C. Robbins and Miss Helen Robbins, both of whom are experienced in this line.

It is stated that the Espelin Floral Co. will continue its greenhouses on West Mountain avenue as heretofore, with perhaps some enlargements to meet the growing trade of the locality. Such retail business as comes to the greenhouses will be given attention as in the past. The firm opened in Fort Collins just fifteen years ago and has built a substantial and satisfactory business, this through fair and courteous treatment of its patrons. It is planned by Mr. Espelin to extend the landscape gardening, which has been made a feature of the work here.

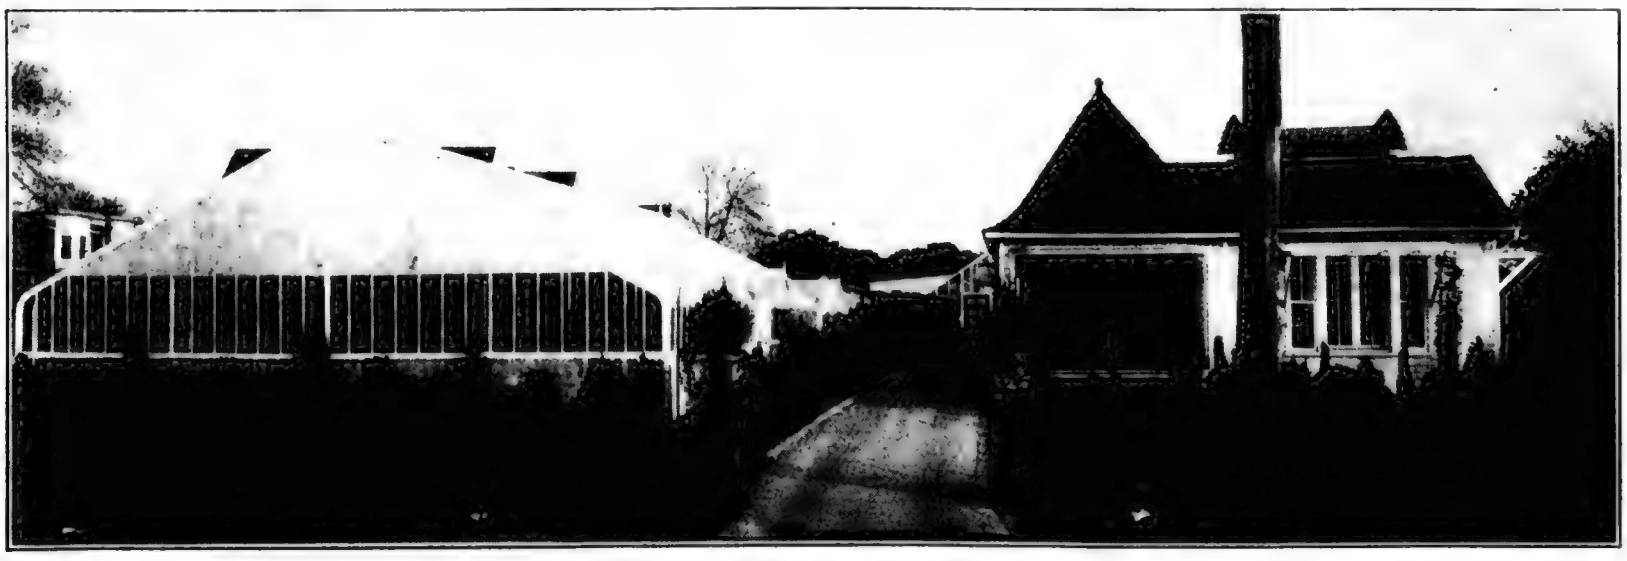
The members of the Robbins family were former residents of Fort Collins, leaving about ten years ago and since then locating in Loveland. The Robbins Flower Shop will be the name under which the flower business will be conducted at the Oak street stand. The Robbins firm has developed quite a large business. The Longmont store is in charge of Robert Leonard. The Loveland store is in charge of O. B. Robbins and now Leon C. Robbins and his sister Helen will have charge of the Fort Collins store. Mr. Espelin has not been in good health for several months and disposes of the store to avoid too close attention to business.

ATLANTA, GA.

Weinstock's Flower Shop broke all records in deliveries September 20 by sending a truck, loaded with eleven large funeral pieces, to Copper Hill, Tenn., a distance of 120 miles through the mountains. Mr. Gilson, with two drivers, started at 7 p. m., arriving at 7 o'clock the next morning. The roads, especially through the mountains, were exceedingly bad and we wonder what some of our northern florists would say if they had to make such deliveries.

Stallings' Flower Shop will close the store at 41 Peachtree street October 7, moving the sales force to the main store, at 138 Peachtree street. The lower Peachtree store will be torn down.

Miss Carrie Chance, of Joy's, is on a motoring trip through northern Georgia and Tennessee.



The Southern Nurserymen's Association at its recent meeting voted to hold the next annual meeting at Atlanta.

H. G. Hastings, of H. G. Hastings & Co., has been made a director of the Whitehall street branch of the Citizens & Southern bank, the largest in the south.

Grady Powers, formerly with the West End Gardens, is now connected with the Westview Florist.

The Lakewood Nurseries are rearranging their entrance drives and making other improvements.

The monthly meeting of the Atlanta Florists' Club will be held October 2; at this time the election of officers will take place. Mrs. Lula C. Anshulz is chairman of the nominations committee. An attractive program has been arranged, and Mrs. Anshulz promises several surprises for this meeting. It is especially urged that all members be on hand and that they notify Ralph Deans, secretary, so that full provision may be made for all.

Buford Brown, of Joy's, was taken suddenly ill Saturday, September 23, and at noon was operated on at the Davis Fisher sanitarium for hernia. At last reports, Mr. Brown was doing as well as could be expected.

Four florists are congratulating themselves over the small losses incurred in the disastrous fire that occurred Saturday night, September 23. Joy's suffered slight damage and Weinstock's roof was on fire several times. The Letton Seed Co., whose store was in the heart of the fire, escaped all damage, notwithstanding the fact that buildings on both sides and in the rear were badly damaged. During the fire, which did about a million and a half dollars' worth of damage, the birds in the windows of the seed store kept singing.

Stallings' Flower Shop was closed Monday, September 25, because of the death of Daniel Webster, a brother of Mrs. M. W. Stallings. J. S. H.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

There are some who notice a slight improvement in the condition of the flower market, but it cannot be said that there is any material change. The Jewish holiday, September 23, caused a little flurry, but it amounted only to the business of an ordinary good Saturday. With the delightful weather prevailing for many days, not much real improvement is to be expected.

Asters and dahlias dominate the market arrivals and clean-ups are made of all varieties. The quality of the former is not good, but the latter are better than they were earlier in the season.

Roses are in only moderate supply, but, apparently, there is a sufficiency, and clearances cause no concern. American Beauty is in good supply, but is moving well and prices of special grades have advanced to a range of $25 to $50 per hundred. Hybrid teas are strong at the advanced prices of $2 to $12 per hundred.

Cattleyas arrive freely and move slowly, with prices unchanged.

Carnations are not in good supply, but the demand for them is poor, owing to the quality, which is of the advanced season sort.

White lilies are in good supply and move well. Valley has fluctuated for a few days, but is down to the price range last quoted.

Herbaceous flowers are more than plentiful and move slowly, mainly at buyers' prices.

Hold Dahlia Exhibition.

The Horticultural Society of New York held its annual dahlia show in the Museum building, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx park, in coöperation with the garden, September 22 to 24. The exhibition was larger than that held last year, and the exhibits in general were creditable. Commercial growers were more than usually prominent. The following won the awards made in the commercial and open classes:

The show of the American Dahlia Society opened Tuesday afternoon, September 26, on the roof of the Pennsylvania hotel. President Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., and Secretary W. J. Rathgeber, of New Haven, Conn., were on hand the first day, making preparations for the event.

Joseph S. Fenrich is back at his desk after several days' illness with pleurisy.

The vacation period is over and staffs of all florists' establishments are on the job once more, hopeful for a good season.

NEWPORT, R. I.

There was a good attendance at the meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society last week, with Vice-president James Hooper in charge. The principal feature of the evening was the awarding of the prizes to the winners in the recent annual city garden contest, the judges of which were members of the society. It had been expected that the committee on entertainment of the Chamber of Commerce would be in attendance to award the society the special silver cup its float won in the Labor day parade. The committee was unable to be present, but will be at the next meeting of the society, when the cup will be formally presented. A committee, consisting of Past-presidents William G. Taylor, William Gray and Frederick P. Webber, was appointed to draw up resolutions on the death of William Allan, a member of the society, who recently died.

Mrs. Elisha A. Peckham had charge of the decorations for the Goddard-Lake wedding last week. W. H. M.

WANT TO GO DUCK HUNTING?

Members of the trade who find time to play as well as work will be extremely interested in the suggestion by R. S. McCook, Bayou Farms, Lake Charles, La., who has graciously written The Review for publication the following statement:

"In view of the fact that this section of the country is, without doubt, the greatest duck hunting country in the world, it is entirely possible that members of the trade would enjoy spending some time here shooting ducks. I should be glad to supply all details regarding this sport, and in the event that any persons care to come here for that purpose, I shall be glad to make all arrangements for them in advance, and will, when possible, go with them on the hunts, if they will communicate their desires to the above-mentioned address. I also wish to mention that there will be no charge made for making these arrangements."

HOME-MADE GLAZING BOARDS.

How can I construct a glazing board and attach it to the greenhouse roof?

H. F. C.—Utah.

Glazing boards for use on greenhouse roofs are of various sizes and may be constructed in many different ways. A board twelve inches wide answers well for patching purposes, but when glazing a new house it is preferable to use two boards, eight inches wide, and to space them one inch apart. The boards for this purpose should be light, but of some material that is stiff, so that there will not be much spring. Southern pine answers well, except that it is rather heavy. Cypress has too much spring.

The glazing board should be of about the same length as the rafters on which it will be used. If this distance is more than twelve feet, it will generally be advisable to use a second board, long enough to reach to the ridge with one end resting on the upper end of the first board.

To the upper surface of the board cleats about 1x2 inches should be securely fastened at intervals of eighteen inches. These should be as long as the width of the glazing board. On the underside fasten other strips of the same size, but long enough to rest on four sash bars. For 16-inch glass this will be over five feet, and they may be spaced from three to four feet, according to the stiffness of the boards. There should be one strip about one foot from the lower end and another at the top. The others should be spaced as mentioned above. On the upper surface of the board fasten a strip at each end and space the others.

On houses with gutters, the houses can be used to hold the lower end of the board, blocked in place if necessary. On houses without gutters a 2x4-inch piece can generally be tacked to the plate for the board to rest against.

WARDING OFF EARLY FROSTS.

Would it be practicable to use smudges to keep early light frosts off my half acre of dahlias? These are usually killed about three weeks before really killing frosts come. Could smudges be used to protect young peach trees in blossom from frost in the spring?

T. S. L.—O.

Orchardists, particularly the growers of citrous fruits in California, use smudges or portable stoves to ward off the effects of frosts. The object is to cover the cultivated area with a cloud of smoke or warm vapor. If the job is not done thoroughly, it is useless, since too thin a cloud fails of the object. If the work is done thoroughly, it is a matter of some expense, especially of labor and time, and a crop may not be worth the cost of smudging.

A smudge may be made by burning shavings, prunings, manure, etc.; if they burn too rapidly, spray them with water to produce more smoke. The smudge should be set to the windward of the patch to be protected. If the wind changes, the smudges must be moved or new ones made.

Portable sheet-iron stoves have the advantage of being easily shifted as the wind changes. In them is burned either oil or coal. In California, coal is most generally used; in the southwest, oil. Ten to twenty pounds of coal will supply each stove for a night, and forty such stoves, placed at intervals about an orchard, will raise the temperature 4 or 6 degrees. Thus approximately a ton of coal per acre is used each night the stoves are used.

SPACING HEAD LETTUCE.

Kindly advise me how close together head lettuce can be planted in the greenhouse, and about how long it will take for the plants to mature.

F. S.—Wash.

After the seeds are sown it generally takes about four or five days before the young shoots begin to appear. These are allowed to grow where they are for about three weeks, when they will be ready for transplanting. At the first transplanting they should be placed about four inches apart and allowed to grow for three or four weeks. Then they are transplanted a second time and are placed about eight inches apart. Head lettuce should be ready to pull within six or seven weeks after the second transplanting, or in about thirteen weeks after the seeds are sown.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

PLANTSMAN'S WORLD TOUR

WILSON TELLS OF TRAVELS.

Trip Around the World.

Ernest H. Wilson, for many years a collector of plants in India, China, Japan, Korea and Formosa for James Veitch & Sons, of London, England, and the Arnold Arboretum, Jamaica Plain, Mass., and for several years assistant director of the latter world-famed institution, left July 4, 1920, for a tour of the world in the interests of the institution with which he is identified. He arrived home August 24, 1922, after an absence of over two years, during which period he had traveled over 100,000 miles.

In the course of an interesting address before the Horticultural Club of Boston, of which Mr. Wilson is president, he gave an account of his long and arduous journeys. He arrived in England July 10, 1920, and left his wife and daughter there during his journeyings. He spent some time visiting places of horticultural interest in Great Britain, including a considerable time at Kew Gardens, of which institution he is a graduate. He left England September 7, via Paris, Boulogne, Marseilles, Colombo and Fremantle to Perth, the capital of Western Australia. This territory is over 2,000 miles long. The southern portion is extremely rich; in fact, it is one vast botanical garden. The old name for Western Australia was New Holland, and many present day cultivators will well remember that years ago New Holland plants were enthusiastically cultivated in Britain. Many of the plants could not be successfully grown in Great Britain, owing to the lack of sunshine, and would have done much better in the United States and Canada.

Australian Plants Strange.

All the plants seen in Australia appear strange. The broad-leaved evergreens all have their foliage on edge and not flat, as here, and the prevailing color is a grey or yellowish green, in contradistinction to the dark, lustrous green of the temperate regions of America and Europe. The eucalypti, of which there are many varieties, growing all the way from two to 300 feet high, are the predominant trees in Western Australia and other parts of the antipodes. They are the loftiest trees in the world, although not the largest. Mr. Wilson saw one specimen cut down, 260 feet high. Many growing were much taller, running up 150 feet clear to the first branches. He said the eucalypti carried a great variety of flowers. One form attaining a height of but twelve feet carried flowers eight inches in diameter. Eucalypti, oaks and pines show the greatest extremes of any of the trees. The Jarrah tree, which grows luxuriantly in one limestone section, cannot be acclimatized elsewhere. All attempts to do so have resulted in failure. The splendid wood resembles mahogany and it seems a crime to note its use for railroad ties.

The Australian forests are more open and parklike than ours, and the long, clean, smooth stems, white in color, look like the marble columns of a cathedral. In the arid regions no cacti are found, as in Arizona and New Mexico. Instead, vast numbers of chorizemas, dwarf grevilleas and other similar plants are seen on every hand. Where swamps occur, Boronia elatior and B. megastigma occur in great numbers. Acacia acuminata, called the raspberry-jam tree, somewhat puzzled him. He said he saw nothing suggestive of raspberries, but on cutting the wood, got a pronounced odor of the delectable jam. No barren arid wastes are seen from the railways, nor is there any shifting sands, as there are here. Water is carried over 400 miles from Perth in pipes for the great gold diggings in Coolgardie and elsewhere. While only seven inches of rain falls in the drier portions of Western Australia, many good trees are to be seen and some day these will be extremely valuable.

The next important city to be visited was Adelaide. He said the railroad makes a straight run of 600 miles to this city. Great numbers of Clianthus Dampieri, the glory pea of Australia, were seen growing in the sands. Hardenbergias seemed to be popular climbers here.

The next city of importance visited was Sydney, which has one of the most magnificent harbors in the world. Here also is a splendid botanical garden. From Sydney, a steamer was taken to New Zealand, which seems like a combination of Vancouver, Washington and Oregon. Auckland, the leading city, is extremely beautiful and has a most delightful climate. While there are no rich people in New Zealand, poverty is practically unknown. Where the forests are cut down, bracken, ferns and leptospermums spring up and soon form a dense jungle. Typical plants seen on every hand are Phormium tenax, the New Zealand flax; Cordyline australis and C. indivisa and great numbers of Areca sapida, practically the only palm seen.

Tree Ferns in New Zealand.

The giant tree ferns are dominant features in the New Zealand forests. The finest is Cyathea medullaris, of giant size. In drier land comes Cyathea dealbata, while in the thick forests occur vast numbers of Dicksonia antarctica, D. squarrosa and D. Smithii.

E. H. Wilson.

In wet spots in the forests, almost in semi-darkness, are many acres of beautiful filmy ferns, like Todea superba. Seeing the conditions under which they grew, he could appreciate the struggles made to grow them under glass in England.

At Wellington Mr. Wilson found one fine garden where were wonderful Himalaya rhododendrons thirty or more feet in height, great numbers of Lilium giganteum ten to twelve feet high and numerous fine South American conifers. In the south island, a great sheep raising land, were to be seen many snow-capped mountains and great glaciers.

Going back to Sydney from New Zealand, Mr. Wilson next visited Tasmania. Great quantities of Centranthus ruber were seen naturalized on every hand, and Rosa Boursaultii was seen everywhere. In Hobart the rainfall averages twenty-four inches per annum, while only fifty miles away as much as 100 inches falls. Hop growing is a thriving industry. Tasmania is a great fruit country and, strange to say, Rhode Island Greening and McIntosh Red are the most popular apples.

Reminders of Home.

Melbourne, the leading city of Australia, is most beautiful. There is much jealousy between Sydney and Melbourne, but Mr. Wilson's preference was for the latter city. A new race of watsonias was noteworthy, growing six feet tall and almost wild, embracing about all imaginable colors, such as red, orange and salmon, in addition to pink and white. He observed Hadley roses flowering splendidly in Australia. A call was made on Thomas Pockett and a pleasant day spent with the noted chrysanthemum hybridizer.

Gladioli are now less popular in Australia than they were. Dahlias have, however, forged to the front and, with roses and sweet peas, are the most popular flowers, while many beautiful varieties of hibiscus are seen. Everyone in Australia appears to grow flowers reminiscent of the home land. The many beautiful native plants are classed everywhere as "weeds."

The splendid zoölogical gardens have no cages, as in America and Europe. There are covered sleeping abodes, but all inmates have a free range. The word domain is used in Australia in lieu of park or common. Ficus macrophylla is the most prominent street tree in Sydney and Melbourne.

Near Ballarat, Pinus insignis, common near San Francisco, thrives amazingly. Trees 40 years old have a girth of as much as thirty-eight feet and are 110 feet high. Pinus ponderosa and the Douglas spruce also thrive well. Platycerium alcicorne is most abundant on trees, and in the wetter sections P. grande is quite plentiful.

To Dutch Indies.

Brisbane has a fine botanical garden. Mr. Wilson took steamer from there for Java, after nine months spent in Australia. A short time was spent in Java to see what are justly considered the finest tropical botanical gardens in the world. Wonderful orchids and other plants luxuriate here. From Java Mr. Wilson went to Singapore and Penang. Over twenty hours of riding on a train through eternal forests of rubber became somewhat tedious.

Rangoon, Calcutta and Lucknow, in India, were each visited. At Simla were seen some wonderful stands of Cedrus Deodora of great age, and a distant view of the Himalayas was obtained. Most interesting and alluring is the famed Vale of Cashmere. Here are many fine old gardens, which must have been laid out by skilled landscape architects. A 30-mile avenue of Lombardy poplars was a grand sight. Millions of these trees are seen in Cashmere. Extremely beautiful are the lakes of Cashmere, with millions of nelumbiums flowering. Every available foot of open land is cultivated, and on the lakes are to be seen numerous rafts covered with soil on which are growing melons, cucumbers, lettuce and other crops.

India Extremely Hot.

Lahore, like many other cities in India, is extremely hot, as are Delhi and Agra. The famed Taj Mahal gardens are among the most beautiful and impressive in the world. From Madras, the journey was south to Ceylon. The southern tip of India, warm as it is, grows Dianthus chinensis in profusion on the barren sands. After a tour of Ceylon, Mr. Wilson left Candy for a trip over the Neilgherry hills and back to Bombay, which seems like a decaying city. Bangalore has a fine botanical garden. Here were seen beautiful specimens of Ficus religiosa over 300 feet across. From Bombay, the city of high prices, steamer was taken to Nairobi, Africa. The name of Theodore Roosevelt is venerated by everyone in this section of Africa. This is the great region for big game and while considerable poaching goes on in spite of stringent game laws, he passed many herds of zebras, antelopes, spring boks, hartebeests and other animals, as well as a few rhinoceri, but he did not happen to see any lions, although many frequent that region.

On the Equator.

Right under the equator are three ranges of mountains on which are perpetual snow, Kilimanjaro, Mount Kenia and the Mountains of the Moon. There are to be seen the most wonderful junipers in the world, 150 feet high and as much as thirty feet in diameter. He went up the mountains, through the forest and bamboo zones, to study the alpine flora. Instead of primulas and allied subjects were to be seen numerous species of lobelias, some six feet in height, woody senecios up to twenty feet in height and many tree heaths. A tree having a close resemblance to Alchemilla vulgaris was the only real tree in this region.

At Uganda motor bicycles are much used for travel. Lake Victoria Nyanza, like all the tropical lakes, was thick with papyrus and nelumbiums of several colors. At Mombasa great baobab trees, twenty-five feet through the trunk, were seen. The wonderful Victoria falls on the Zambesi river differ much from Niagara. While less water falls than over Niagara, the falls are one mile across and 400 feet deep. The spray from the falls ascends to a height of 3,000 feet, and there are wonderful rainbows formed. Right under the spray he noted great quantities of Gladiolus primulinus growing luxuriantly.

South Africa.

From Bulawayo he went to Pretoria. Ligustrum lucidum in standard form he found popular everywhere. Next came busy, hustling Johannesburg, Maritzburg and Zululand, where were noted memorials to many British soldiers who fell in the Zulu war. While Natal is well wooded, it is otherwise in Cape Colony. Agapanthus umbellatus, wild in the swamps, seemed like an old friend of years ago, as did Sparmannia africana. Watsonias thrive splendidly in sour soils. On the other hand, the original species of pelargoniums all prefer good land. In South Africa are 500 members of the heath family, and he saw over fifty ericas in bloom. There were great hillsides of Erica melanthera, mostly five to eight feet in height, smothered with bloom. Yellow, white, red and pink colors were noted.

Protea cynaroides, aloes and some remarkable euphorbias were seen, but no cactaceæ at all. Crassulla coccinea is abundant in rocky places, while Richardia africana is plentiful, as indeed it is from Uganda south to the Indian ocean. Amaryllis belladonna was, he said, a delight to see. He was informed that after severe fires the plants always made remarkable growth and bloomed with great profusion.

ant. This he considered one of the most beautiful species of orchids in the world. In Cape Colony he also noticed many species of gladioli, and it seemed good to see the original species of geranium on its native heath.

From Cape Town he sailed for England, and after some weeks spent there and in France, he sailed for America. While away he was treated with the utmost kindness and consideration everywhere, and in some cases he was given free passes on the railroads. In Australia, India, Africa and every place visited he found many big, broad-minded men studying the same problems we are studying here, and as a representative of the Arnold Arboretum he was always warmly welcomed. While in the course of his travels he had to pass hundreds of custom officials, not until he reached Boston, U. S. A., were his trunks opened and all the contents examined.

FLOWERS FOR MILL HANDS.

If one looks back over the last fifteen years, the progress made in building up the flower business in the south shows wonderful strides. Fifteen years ago the only florists were the ones in the large cities; now they can be found in almost every town with a population of 3,000. Where parks were unknown in those days, it would be hard now to find even a village without its breathing space. Northern Alabama villages are made up principally of cotton mill workers, who gave little thought to their surroundings and were satisfied if they could have what passed for a shelter and enough work to keep them from starvation. But all this is changed. Huts have been torn down to make way for modern homes, ill kept yards have disappeared, and pretty lawns with flower beds and vine-covered porches have taken their place. Credit for these changed conditions belongs to the mill owners and their representatives, who have done all that money and example could do to bring about these better conditions.

Chief among these owners is the Merrimack Mfg. Co., of Boston and Lowell, Mass., which has the largest mill in northern Alabama, employing several thousand people, located in the village named Merrimack, about two miles west of Huntsville. Fifteen years ago the mill consisted of a 1-story building surrounded by a board fence. The watchman's office was similar to a railroad crossing shanty, the office a frame structure in a dilapidated condition. Today the pictures on this and the opposite page speak for themselves, as it is now the show place of northern Alabama.

The present condition of the place is due to the unselfish, untiring efforts of the agent, Joseph J. Bradley, who has given both of his time and money to the uplift and prosperity of his people and who is ready day or night to help them. He is ably seconded by his superintendent, Mr. Lovill, seen standing on the office steps in the foreground of the view, which includes part of the grounds and the school building. The landscape department comprises about 3,000 feet of glass, with about 4,000 feet of hotbed sash, where the plants are grown for the use of the mill yard and village. The plants are for the use of the villagers only and are given to them free. No plants or cut flowers are sold outside. The cost of labor to keep the grounds in shape is about $6,000 per year, and the cost of plants, seeds and bulbs is about the same amount each year. But the cost is small compared with the happiness and contentment of the people who have taken the place of the former inhabitants. There are no foreigners in the mill and there is never trouble. One of the best equipped school buildings in the state is here, with a corps of eight teachers, who are paid partly by the state and partly by Mr. Bradley for the company. These teachers are the pick of the best instructors obtainable, and their efforts have been so successful that illiteracy is almost unknown.

The achievements of this company in the improvement of its locality and workers have been so noteworthy that their methods are being copied by every mill village in that section of the state. And each year shows a satisfactory increase in the demand for more and a better variety of seeds and plants.

The Market.

Considering the state of industrial conditions throughout the country for the last few months and their detrimental effect upon the trade, which was exceedingly pronounced here during August and the first part of September, the fall business acceleration is beginning early. The demand for practically everything last week was splendid. Roses are easily the leaders and some fine, almost winter-quality, stock is to be had. Carnations are coming in a little more heavily and are improving in length of stem daily. The dry days and cold nights have reduced the asters to a poor quality. Gladioli are still in abundance. Good Easter lilies, valley and greens complete the list of offerings at this time.

Various Notes.

The Elitch Gardens Co. reports having received many favorable comments from its customers on Angelus, the new white rose.

John Roberts, of the Roberts Rose Co., returned from Buffalo, N. Y., coming by way of Richmond, Ind., where he stopped to see the new roses of the E. G. Hill Co. He was especially impressed with a new red.

The Denver Wholesale Florists' Co. is going into larger quarters, although it may be the first of the new year before the refrigerating plant can be installed and the entire business moved. The new place of the firm is directly across California street and takes up the basement floor of the Home Public Market building, with a floor space 60x220 feet. The lighting system of this large floor is especially fine, as it was originally intended to be used as an auditorium. This makes the floor remarkably adapted to the handling of a complete line of florists' supplies. When the new place is completed the firm will have the distinction of having the largest business of its kind in the country on one floor. Karl Gross, who needs no introduction here, is to travel for this firm.

Conrad Lengenfelder and Fred Maler have returned from a trip to Glenwood Springs.

T. H. Trimmer & Son have completed their new boiler room.

Ben Boldt, Sr., is on a business trip to Laramie, Wyo. The new heating system being tried out by this firm shows a saving of about forty per cent.

Mr. Oberlander, with D. S. Grimes & Sons, who has been on the sick list for some time, is able to be about again.

Notice of the death of Oliver Wheatley, proprietor of the Curtis Park Floral Co., appears on the obituary page of this issue.

William Kash, of the Bright Spot Floral Co., is planning a trip to Cuba this winter.

Visitors last week were Mr. Johnson, of Sterling, Colo.; W. O. Robbins, of Loveland, Colo., and Mr. Erickson, of Greeley, Colo., together with his grower, Mr. Osborne.

Groveland, Fla.—The Groveland Plant Co. has been taken over by the Holm Plant Co., the latter firm purchasing the interests of the former. The Holm Plant Co. propagates all of its stock, under lath houses and also in the open. The mild climate of Florida makes it possible for the firm to do this without worrying about coal.

In wet spots in the forests, almost in semi-darkness, are many acres of beautiful filmy ferns, like Todea superba. Seeing the conditions under which they grew, he could appreciate the struggles made to grow them under glass in England.

At Wellington Mr. Wilson found one fine garden where were wonderful Himalaya rhododendrons thirty or more feet in height, great numbers of Lilium giganteum ten to twelve feet high and numerous fine South American conifers. In the south island, a great sheep raising land, were to be seen many snow-capped mountains and great glaciers.

Going back to Sydney from New Zealand, Mr. Wilson next visited Tasmania. Great quantities of Centranthus ruber were seen naturalized on every hand, and Rosa Boursaultii was seen everywhere. In Hobart the rainfall averages twenty-four inches per annum, while only fifty miles away as much as 100 inches falls. Hop growing is a thriving industry. Tasmania is a great fruit country and, strange to say, Rhode Island Greening and McIntosh Red are the most popular apples.

Reminders of Home.

Melbourne, the leading city of Australia, is most beautiful. There is much jealousy between Sydney and Melbourne, but Mr. Wilson's preference was for the latter city. A new race of watsonias was noteworthy, growing six feet tall and almost wild, embracing about all imaginable colors, such as red, orange and salmon, in addition to pink and white. He observed Hadley roses flowering splendidly in Australia. A call was made on Thomas Pockett and a pleasant day spent with the noted chrysanthemum hybridizer.

Gladioli are now less popular in Australia than they were. Dahlias have, however, forged to the front and, with roses and sweet peas, are the most popular flowers, while many beautiful varieties of hibiscus are seen. Everyone in Australia appears to grow flowers reminiscent of the home land. The many beautiful native plants are classed everywhere as "weeds."

The splendid zoölogical gardens have no cages, as in America and Europe. There are covered sleeping abodes, but all inmates have a free range. The word domain is used in Australia in lieu of park or common. Ficus macrophylla is the most prominent street tree in Sydney and Melbourne.

Near Ballarat, Pinus insignis, common near San Francisco, thrives amazingly. Trees 40 years old have a girth of as much as thirty-eight feet and are 110 feet high. Pinus ponderosa and the Douglas spruce also thrive well. Platycerium alcicorne is most abundant on trees, and in the wetter sections P. grande is quite plentiful.

To Dutch Indies.

Brisbane has a fine botanical garden. Mr. Wilson took steamer from there for Java, after nine months spent in Australia. A short time was spent in Java to see what are justly considered the finest tropical botanical gardens in the world. Wonderful orchids and other plants luxuriate here. FREESIA BULBS

FREESIAS IN CALIFORNIA.

Kindly give me some information on the growing of freesia bulbs on a commercial scale in central lower Florida. I should like to know in particular what size bulbs to use for the planting. How deep should they be planted? Should they be broadcasted in the beds or planted in rows? When should they be dug and how should they be cured? How are they sorted when lifted?

Q. N.—Ill.

The culture of freesias in California has greatly increased of late years. In the southern part of the state, in particular, the growers have given much more attention to quality than formerly, and the slipshod methods of earlier days are going out of date. It has usually been thought that the soil for freesia bulbs had to be light and sandy, but this has been proved a mistake by the many fine bulbs turned out in quantity and of excellent quality from entirely different soils. Recently growers have experimented with the chocolate-colored loam in San Diego county and some marvelous bulbs have been grown, which are an advance on anything grown in the Los Angeles, San Jose and other centers. This shows, apparently, that careful and well considered culture and suitable climatic conditions have more to do with growing good bulbs than soil alone.

Stock for planting, as generally understood by growers, consists of bulblets below the ⅜-inch size, but eliminating the smallest or "seed" bulbs. When stock is plentiful, these latter bulbs are often thrown away, but when greater propagation is desired, they are sown fairly close together in drills, as described below for stock bulbs. For these the drills are drawn about three inches deep and broad in proportion. The time of planting depends upon conditions, but any time from August 1 to September 15 may be chosen. Some of the coast growers who cater to the trade in bulbs for Christmas-flowering sow them in July, but the season indicated is more general.

Except in soils naturally subirrigated—and these are not used for freesia growing—it will be necessary to irrigate the soil thoroughly either before plowing and drawing the drills or after the drills are made. In the case of soils that need much cleaning and cultivation, the usual method is to irrigate thoroughly beforehand. After planting the sets, cover them at once. In a few weeks the little green spears will be showing above ground, when cultivation should begin and be kept up during the whole season when weather permits. It should have been mentioned that the drills should be far enough apart to allow whatever sized cultivator is used to pass freely. In small and medium-sized plantations hand cultivators are used, but when horses or power cultivators are in use, the rows must be proportionately farther apart.

Irrigation is, of course, an important matter. Freesias must be kept growing from first to last, if the best results are looked for, and whenever the rainfall is insufficient, irrigation is needed. For this reason, in California the land must be selected or graded so that there is a gradual fall, preferably to the south or west, to allow the water to reach all parts of the rows. Cultivation must always follow irrigation.

At the end of the growing season, usually from the end of May to the end of June, the bulbs must be lifted. Careful men can be trusted to plow them out, but in other cases they must be forked out and the soil allowed to dry a little, if it is wet, before the bulbs are picked up. The bulbs are laid on trays under the trees or in sheds, or in some place where they are slightly protected from the hot, midsummer sun. They remain here, being turned over from time to time, until thoroughly dried and cured, when they are placed on the sorting frames. These are simply rectangular wooden frames with screen netting of various sizes of mesh tacked on. After the bulbs have passed through the screens, some hand picking has to be done to remove cut or broken bulbs, lumps of soil, small stones and similar material, but if the bulbs are carefully harvested, there is little trouble with them after they pass over the screens. Some little grading also is necessary; for, no matter how carefully the screening is done, some immature and small bulbs will remain on top in the respective screens. It may be noted, too, that in shipping freesias, no matter how well they appear to have been dried, porous bags should be used and provision made for air to circulate through the shipping boxes.

CORN BORER IN ONTARIO.

As a result of reports from the Department of Agriculture announcing the appearance of the corn borer in the province of Ontario, Canada, the Post Office Department, pursuant to a regulation by the federal horticultural board, has issued an order prohibiting the importation of numerous plants and vegetables from that province.

The following cannot be sent in the mails to the United States unless certified by the Canadian Department of Agriculture: Celery, green beans in the pod, beets with tops, spinach, rhubarb, oat and rye straw as such or used as packing, cut flowers or entire plants of gladioli and dahlias, except the bulbs, chrysanthemums, asters, cosmos and zinnias. Other provinces of Canada are not affected by this order.

CARNATION BACTERIOSIS.

We have sent you three Harvester carnation plants. What is the matter with them? We planted them from the field August 14. They started all right, and then showed signs of this trouble.

I. G.—Mich.

To begin with, the plants you sent are not Harvester. They are Matchless. The writer has never before seen such a severe case of bacteriosis as you have here. Send a sample of the soil to your state experiment station for analysis. The source of the trouble may be in the soil, but if the plants started off all right and if other varieties are doing well, it must be elsewhere. Overwatering before the roots had become reestablished might cause trouble of this nature, as would premature feeding. These yellow leaves will not take on a healthy color, but will gradually dry up. Under proper treatment, the young growth may come out healthy and a profitable crop result.

But, before deciding on the proper course, you must find out the source of the trouble. If you think it is from overwatering, then we suggest that you reverse the conditions. Let the soil gradually dry off and carry it moderately on the dry side, but do not let it get dry enough to cause suffering. Give the plants all the ventilation possible and start your firing a little earlier than you ordinarily would, for the purpose of giving additional ventilation on cool nights. If the trouble originated in the soil, a dose of lime or leaching the soil may be in order. Your state experiment station will advise you along that line.

TROUBLE WITH CARNATIONS.

I have sent a Ward carnation plant, which is in some way diseased. The leaves turn yellow; then the entire plant dies. I have a bench of Matchless likewise afflicted.

R. D.—Ga.

The specimen submitted was so badly wilted and dried that it is difficult to establish the trouble. The lower portion of the stem is quite hard and dry, indicating that your trouble is with the stems dying and causing the plants to die for want of support from the roots. Just where the trouble originated, cannot be determined, but it is suspected that the plants were allowed to become stunted in the small pots before being planted in the field, thus causing the stems to become hard.

When root action started and the plants began to grow, the bark on the stems, being hard, cracked open and gave an opening for the fungus to enter. You can do but little now, except to give them clean culture. When cool weather sets in, the fungus will be less active and those that survive will probably get through the winter. If too many plants have died to permit a profitable crop from the space, it is not too late to replant. If you do that, either sterilize the soil or put in new.

HEATING WITH OIL

OIL FUEL FOR THE GREENHOUSE.

Problems of the Florist.

The constantly increasing use of oil for fuel in greenhouses brings many questions to the fore among florists. In addition to the oft-recurring queries, "How does it work?" "What is the cost?" "Where can I see it in operation?" one often hears also the question, "How is oil burning especially adapted to this industry?"

That the use of oil fuel is especially desirable in greenhouses is a fact which the writer will not attempt to cover herein; he will, rather, try to cover specific inquiries which come to the mind of the greenhouse owner. It must be borne in mind, to begin with, that the installation of a fuel oil burning system in a greenhouse calls for the exercise of the most careful and intelligent, scientific work, for the reason that the florist's stock is a particularly delicate and perishable one, its welfare depending greatly upon the overcoming of adverse and suddenly changing weather conditions, necessitating a heating system which is capable of caring for loads which at times may be of a greatly fluctuating nature. It will be seen that the problem is a quite different one from that which would be encountered in a manufacturing establishment, for instance, where a steady load of average constancy would be required month after month.

The idea is greatly prevalent that hot oil produces more heat than oil of a low temperature. This is not, however, the reason for heating the oil; primarily, it is heated to lower the viscosity, allowing a free flow and requiring less steam for atomizing.

Types of Burners.

Some discussion has been carried on with reference to the comparative merits of steam-atomized and air-atomized burners. We can do no better with relation to this subject than to quote from an excellent standard work on "Steam and Its Uses," issued by the Babcock & Wilcox Co., as follows: "Where there is no necessity of saving raw feed water [as on ocean liners or in places where steam of over fifty pounds' pressure cannot be had] the greater simplicity and economy of the steam spray atomizer is generally the most satisfactory. The air burners require blowers, compressors or other apparatus which occupy space that might be otherwise utilized and require attention that is not necessary where steam is used. The only method by which successful mechanical atomization has been accomplished is one by which the oil is given a whirling motion within the burner tip. With burners of the mechanical atomizing design, the method of introducing air for combustion and the velocity of this air are of the greatest importance in securing good combustion and in the effects on the character and shape of the flame. This air so admitted does not necessarily require a whirling motion, but experiments show that where the air is brought into contact with the oil spray with the right 'twist,' better combustion is secured and lower air pressures and less refinement of adjustment of individual burners are required." The burners used at the greenhouses of Stielow Bros., at Niles Center, Ill., embody the spray atomizing and mechanical rotary type combined.

On Low Steam Pressure.

The element of fluctuation with respect to greenhouse heating, as referred to in the second paragraph above, makes it most essential that an oil burning system operated for greenhouses shall be of such type that it can operate on as low a steam pressure as possible, but with the same results as when the steam pressure is high. For the protection of his perishable stock on hand, the florist should see well to it that his system possesses this absolute essential. In the average greenhouse, when a downward change of temperature takes place, it is often most necessary to get the heating system into operation in an exceedingly short time, and with a low steam pressure, which means that, if the oil burner is not especially adapted to this class of work, the results may be extremely disastrous for the owner.

The pumping system which is used in a greenhouse must also operate under the same conditions as the burner; namely, at both high and low pressure, this desired regulation being obtained by what is commonly known as a pump governor.

The question of storage is one which will not bear cursory attention, but requires the most careful consideration, in order that, when the outside temperature is low, the oil flow may be easy and uninterrupted. The best way of attaining this result is so to arrange storage facilities that the tank may be brought to the proper degree of temperature, when necessary, to continue a satisfactory flow of oil in spite of weather conditions, and that tank cars may be heated, if desirable, while they are being emptied.

Proper Combustion Chamber.

Quoting again from the book of the Babcock & Wilcox Co.: "From the nature of mechanical atomizing burners, individual burners have not as large a capacity as the steam atomizing class. * * * . Too much stress cannot be laid upon the importance of furnace design for the use of this class of fuel. Provided a good type of burner is adopted, the furnace arrangement and the method of introducing air for combustion into the furnace are the all-important factors. No matter what the type of burner, satisfactory results cannot be secured in a furnace not suited to the fuel."

This brings us to the most important factor in connection with greenhouse heating, as follows: Unless a combustion chamber is provided which is suited to the type of burner used, satisfactory results cannot be obtained. Incredulity on this point will only lead to expense and disappointment. The proper type is a combustion chamber wherein and whereby the waste heat of the furnace is used to gasify the oil during the process of atomization, thereby reducing the amount of fuel which would otherwise be necessary to do this work. A second important feature in the construction of the furnace is that fire brick must be used which will stand at exceedingly high temperature without cracking or crumbling, as these processes are most destructive to the efficiency of the furnace, resulting in leaks and the admission of cold air.

We must not overlook the aid to efficient use of oil fuel which is obtained from proper control of the damper. This can be accomplished by the use of a stack thermometer for testing the temperature, and an Orset for the analysis of gases as they come from the furnace.

To sum up the subject in its relation to the best interests of greenhouse owners, efficient use of oil fuel depends upon, first, a proper combustion chamber; second, adequate pressure of heated oil; third, an efficient type of burner; fourth, storage sufficient to care for at least one-third of the season's supply; fifth, a proper coördination of the foregoing factors, to be obtained by careful, painstaking, correct, scientific installation. Thus, your first cost will be your only cost, you will place yourself beyond the pale of experimentation, and your results will be gratifying.

HEAT UNITS IN OIL.

What number of B. t. u. has crude oil? Is it economical to use it for greenhouse heating? F. B.—Can.

Don't you mean fuel oil, instead of crude oil? Fuel oil, as ordinarily understood, is crude oil after the lighter products, such as gasoline, naphtha and kerosene, have been removed in the various refining processes. It is recognized under two general classifications, viz., that which is derived from crude oil having a paraffin base, usually found in the Pennsylvania district, and that which is derived from an asphaltic base, found in the great oil fields of the southwest.

In considering oil as fuel comparatively with other fuels, use is made of the established unit of measurement called the British thermal unit and expressed in abbreviated form as B. t. u. It indicates the amount of heat required to raise the temperature of one pound of water one degree on the Fahrenheit scale. The following tabulated values of fuel oil and coal illustrate clearly the relative merits of the two fuels:

Name of fuel	B. T. U. in 1 lb. fuel	Lbs. water evaporated by 1 lb. fuel
Anthracite coal	13,000	9 to 10
Pocahontas coal	14,000	10 to 10.5
Bituminous coal	13,500	7 to 8
Fuel oil (gas oil)	19,000	14 to 16

Note—Gas oil weighs about 7.2 lbs. per gallon, at 32 degrees Beaume.

The economy, in dollars and cents, in the use of fuel oil, as compared with coal, in greenhouse heating depends upon the local price of oil and coal. In some districts, one, by reason of the distance from a production area, has a decided advantage in price over the other. In some the actual cost of the two kinds of fuel is about the same. In such case the saving in labor is to be considered; this is important, especially in a small range, where the devices for handling coal are too expensive to be installed. It is to be noted that an increasing number of florists are becoming interested in oil-burner installations, and those who have adopted this fuel have not returned to the use of coal.

MIDGE ON MUMS.

I have sent some chrysanthemum leaves, which have, presumably, been eaten by a worm of some kind. I am unable to find worms in sufficient numbers to make me believe that they would have destroyed the number of leaves affected. Do you know of anything that could thus affect the leaves? If so, will you suggest a remedy?

R. B.—Minn.

The leaves submitted are infested with midge, which has been described many times in the columns of The Review. At this season of the year, when the houses are running open, it is somewhat difficult to control this pest. The best remedy is to cover the leaves with tobacco dust, so the insects, when they hatch out, will have a hard time struggling for existence. Take off as many of the infested leaves as you can remove without impairing the efficiency of the plant and the crop of flowers will come through satisfactorily. Be sure to burn the leaves you remove from the plants, as midge is a pest that spreads quickly from one plant to another.

OUTDOOR CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

I should like to have you give me the names of the early Japanese mums which will bloom outside before freezing, preferably the best white, red, pink and yellow. W. H. T.—N. J.

The pompon varieties of chrysanthemums are, generally speaking, the most satisfactory outdoor plants, but early-blooming Japanese varieties like October Frost, Early Frost, Golden Glow, Robert Halliday and some others bloom well if the frost holds off until fairly late. The following pompons have done well with me: Lillian Doty, lavender pink; White Doty, pure white; Yellow Fern, golden yellow; Goacher's Crimson, bronze-red; Bronze Goacher, orange-suffused bronze; Dundee, dark red; Kitty Bourne, canary yellow; Seven Oaks, yellow; Marie Antoinette, pink; Fred J., reddish orange; Harry, bronze-orange; Crawford White, pure white; Gloire de France, silvery pink; Elkton, light pink; Normandie, white, tinted pink; October Gold, bronze-yellow; Pearl Cluster, white changing to pink; Golden West, yellow; Excellence, dark red; Miss Emma, golden bronze.

While these varieties will invariably come safely through an average winter, they are not absolutely dependable and I should strongly advise lifting one or two plants of each desirable variety and wintering them in a coldframe.

OVERWATERING MUMS.

I have mailed you a specimen of our mum stock, which is being destroyed by a pest eating at the roots of the plants. Kindly examine this plant and tell me what the pest is and how to exterminate it. H. A. C.—O.

The trouble with your plants is not that something is eating at their roots, but the trouble is due to sour soil. All of the stem below the soil was rotten and black. This is generally caused by sour soil from overwatering. Any plants such as the specimen sent are beyond redemption and it is useless to bother with them any more, but if there are any of the plants among the batch which upon examination show signs of life at the roots, they can be shaken from the soil and repotted to give them a new start. Care must be exercised, however, not to overwater them directly after they have been potted. If, however, the whole lot is in a bad condition, the best thing to do is to throw them out and purchase some more, because it is getting late for benching mums with the expectation of getting good returns from them. M. P.

WINTZER CELEBRATES.

Golden Wedding Anniversary.

To have the distinction on his golden wedding anniversary of not only being the father of six children, nineteen grandchildren and three great-grandchildren, but also of being the originator of about seventy-seven varieties of cannas, which make up the greater portion of the commercial cannas of today, is an honor which few men have the privilege of enjoying. The fiftieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Antoine Wintzer, of West Grove, Pa., was celebrated by them at their beautiful home Monday afternoon and evening, September 18. Many relatives and friends called to offer congratulations and best wishes to the bride and groom of fifty summers, and they found the happy couple seated in the parlor beneath an arch of cannas and greens.

Mr. Wintzer was born April 1, 1847, in Mülhausen, Alsace, France. Mrs. Wintzer was born in Oxford, Bucks county, Pa., July 31, 1850. They were married in Trenton, N. J., September 18, 1872. Mr. Wintzer came to West Grove, Pa., in 1866, and engaged in growing, specializing in roses, cannas and ornamental shrubs. In 1897 the Conard & Jones Co. was organized with Mr. Wintzer as vice-president, and in this connection and by his untiring zeal he has produced cannas with a nation-wide reputation and of almost every color, and these play an important part among the commercial cannas of today.

Many beautiful gifts in gold, linen and useful articles were presented in honor of the occasion. In spite of their seventy-five and seventy-two years, respectively, Mr. and Mrs. Wintzer are young in spirit and entered into the gayety of the occasion, mingling with their children, grandchildren and the guests, and fully enjoying every minute of the time.

Among the visitors present at the celebration who are members of the trade were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pyle, Mr. and Mrs. William Swayne, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Swayne, Mrs. Henry M. Lynch, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Wintzer, Charles Wintzer, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Wintzer.

Cannas Displayed.

In order to display appropriately all of the different varieties of cannas which he has grown, representatives of these were collected and arranged in rainbow-like sequence in four color classes. The deepest colors were placed at one end and the most delicate tints at the opposite, with the intervening varieties covering almost without break or interruption the gradation of colors from one extreme to the other; in fact, one could travel from the deep, dark-hued Nokomis through the fire-colored scarlets to the oranges of California, and then as the colors broke up into the reds and yellows, one could pass through these variegated colors into the pure yellow shades and from there on to the deep Juanita and Princeton, the newer King Midas and Wilmer Atkinson, to the primrose type and the white Flag of Truce, Mont Blanc and Snow Queen. From here the path led to another shade of red, the cerise, from the deepest American Beauty to the splendid pinks, like the City of Portland and Mrs. Alfred F. Conard, to say nothing of the outstanding Mrs. Pierre S. du Pont and the pale cream Palm Beach and Winsome.

OBITUARY

Frank X. Stuppy.

His many friends in the trade are sad to learn of the death of Frank X. Stuppy, president of the Stuppy Floral Co., St. Joseph, Mo., which occurred Tuesday evening, September 26. Mr. Stuppy had been in poor health for two years or more, and though he went east for an operation, at Boston, a few months ago, he continued to decline. His death was not altogether unexpected, for his condition was so grave that he was unable to attend the S. A. F. convention at Kansas City or to entertain more than a few of the visitors who inspected the great range of glass at St. Joseph on their way to and from the gathering.

The Stuppy Floral Co., of which Frank X. Stuppy had been the head since the death of his father, the founder of the business, operates the largest greenhouse establishment west of the Mississippi river. There are 250,000 square feet of glass and seventy acres of land devoted to the production of flowers. Laurence J. Stuppy, the son of a French pioneer, Francis X. Stuppy, built up the establishment from a modest undertaking comprising only cold-frames. His two sons, Frank X. and John J., joined their father at an early age. The business was incorporated in 1903. At the death of the father, Frank Stuppy became president of the company and his brother, John, was secretary-treasurer. The latter died in 1918, and his place has been taken since by Dr. B. W. Murphy, husband of a sister of Frank Stuppy, who has been especially active in the direction of the business since his brother-in-law's illness began.

Frank X. Stuppy was born at St. Joseph, Mo., March 3, 1877. For a time he was in the wholesale hardware business, but joined his father in 1900. He was married and had four children. He was a life member of the S. A. F. and served as director in other trade organizations. Recently he formed, with Glenn K. Parker, the Stuppy Supply Co., to do a wholesale business in Kansas City. His chief interest was in growing roses. There are nearly 100,000 plants of them at St. Joseph. Recently he developed a double sport of Ophelia, called Annie Laurie, with which five houses are filled. He expected to disseminate it shortly.

The funeral was set for Thursday morning, September 28, at 10 a. m.

Oliver Wheatley.

The latest pioneer florist to leave the ranks of the florists' trade at Denver, Colo., is Oliver Wheatley, president of the Curtis Park Floral Co., Denver, Colo., who died at St. Anthony's hospital after a six months' illness. Mr. Wheatley's death was caused by blood poisoning from an ingrown toenail. Mr. Wheatley had been in the florists' business at Denver for thirty years.

William H. Elverson.

William H. Elverson, president of the W. H. Elverson Pottery Co., New Brighton, Pa., died at the age of 74 at his home, 1415 Third avenue, New Brighton, Pa., Monday, September 18. Mr. Elverson was born at Liverpool, O., and at the age of 15 entered the pottery business, in which he was engaged until the time of his death. The pots made by his company are used by many florists. He was a member of the Masons and attended the Presbyterian church of New Brighton. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Eleanor Elverson; a son, Frank W. Elverson; two daughters, Mrs. Walter MacConnell and Miss Elizabeth Elverson; one brother, T. A. Elverson.

John T. Lovett.

John T. Lovett, of Little Silver, N. J., died last week at his home from a weakened condition of the heart brought about by neurasthenia, with which he had suffered for the past two years. He was 70 years old.

Mr. Lovett had been engaged in the nursery business at Little Silver for the past forty-four years. He was born at Penn's Manor, Pa.

Besides his wife, who was Miss Julia Kennedy, of Deal, N. J., before her marriage, he is survived by six children, Miss Mary Lovett, who is engaged in the missionary field in India; Misses Alida and Elizabeth Lovett, who are attaches of the staff at Yale College; Lester and J. T. Lovett, Jr., who are managing the nursery business, and Dr Irving K. Lovett, of Red Bank.

John Thompson Lovett played a prominent part in the nursery trade in America. He settled at Red Bank in 1872, fifty years ago, when he entered the employ of A. Hance & Son, proprietors of the Rumson nurseries, with whom he served six years. He was then engaged to take charge of a big nursery at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson and later returned to Monmouth county, where, in the autumn of 1878, he went into business for himself. The business rapidly developed, and in 1885 he erected a large greenhouse. In 1888 the J. T. Lovett Co. was incorporated. It was dissolved in 1894, when the Lovett Co. was formed. The Lovett nurseries covered 250 acres of land and 125 workmen were employed.

Mr. Lovett was a Republican in politics and was postmaster of Little Silver under the Harrison administration. He was a charter member of the A. A. N. and first president of the New Jersey Association of Nurserymen.

Wichita, Kan.—Ernest Gillenwater, who has been in the florists' business for two years, is building an addition to his range.

S. A. F. NEWS

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Directors' Meeting.

At the meeting of the board of directors held in Kansas City, August 15, on the first day of the convention, many subjects of interest were discussed, and action taken in matters requiring it.

Correspondence in regard to the society's entering into membership relations with the Federation Horticole Professionnelle Internationale, whose last meeting, or conference, was held at The Hague, was read, and on motion of J. F. Ammann, it was directed that a committee of three be appointed to investigate and report at the next annual meeting of the board.

The matter of the society's contributing its quota towards the building fund of the Washington home for American business, on plans projected by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, was discussed at some length, and, on motion of Thomas Roland, the board decided that $200, the amount expected of the society, be appropriated.

The movement supported by the Garden Club of America to guard the native trees, shrubs and plants of the country was favored by the board and a motion by Mr. Roland that the society coöperate in every reasonable way with the movement, in so far as it had to do with the preservation of wild plants and flowers, was carried.

The matter of express rates for transportation of florists' products entailed some discussion, which resulted, on motion of George Asmus, in a direction that a committee of five be appointed to urge a reduction on the rates at present in force.

Some discussion resulted from the reading of a letter from Henry A. Siebrecht, Pasadena, Cal., recommending a list of flowers which should be known as "birthday flowers," also suggesting the standardization of a set of rules to govern in the judging, at exhibitions, of table decorations, bridal bouquets, baskets and vases of flowers, and a grading table for roses for universal use by growers and retailers. On motion of Thomas Joy, Nashville, Tenn., the matter of birthday flowers was ordered to be referred to the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association and that of the grading to the American Rose Society.

Plant Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that C. E. Majors, Denison, Tex., submits for registration the new variety of coleus described below:

San Jacinto.—Originated from a seedling produced from a cross between Beckwith's Gem and a brilliant-colored unnamed seedling. A strong grower, attaining a height of about two feet. Foliage quite large and of good texture. Color, terminal shoots a brilliant shade of red, with diffused shadings of chocolate, old rose, cream white and yellow, edged golden yellow, tipped with cream white. The foliage, when fully developed, changes to bright rose pink and old rose, cream white and yellow, with various shadings and markings of all these colors intermingled.

Any person objecting to this registration, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the society at once. In the absence of objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date, September 28, 1922.

Correction.

In the report read at the Kansas City convention, covering the reports of state vice-presidents, the report from the Florida official was referred to as from J. W. Fletcher, instead of from F. W. Fletcher, Rosalind Gardens, Orlando, well known to the florists' world as the originator of Asparagus Fletcheri.

John Young, Sec'y.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

A PAGE OF TIMELY AID AND ADVICE TO GROWERS

FORGET-ME-NOTS FOR WINTER.

Some specialists grow whole benches or beds of forget-me-nots and find them a profitable crop. There are several special winter-blooming strains on the market. One the writer has grown for two or three seasons and finds excellent as a pot plant and a prolific winter bloomer is Sutton's Pot myosotis; this is of the real forget-me-not blue and carries stems of good length. There are, of course, other excellent varieties offered and it is well, when one has secured a really fine winter variety, to save some seeds of it; this holds true also in the case of mignonette, annual gypsophila, winter wallflowers and certain other plants. You probably have some seedling myosotis and, if you cannot give them space along the front of a bench, keep them in pots for a time and then either give them such a position or, better still, when your early mums come out, plant some myosotis in their stead. Forget-me-nots are popular flowers and for St. Valentine's day sell especially well, but they have many uses apart from those on that good saint's day.

ENGLISH IVIES.

There is an excellent call for English ivy for many purposes. It is a fine house plant and is useful for window and piazza boxes, vases, etc. It also makes excellent baskets and may be trained into almost any conceivable shape in pots or tubs. Where winters are not too rigorous, it proves to be a splendid climber and is fine for covering stumps, walls, rocks and boulders, while beds in the formal garden composed entirely of ivy, pegged down, are always in excellent taste. It also is much used for cemetery purposes. In addition, ivy wreaths are often called for, and one or two old plants at the end of an old greenhouse, which gets a minimum of sunlight, will furnish large numbers of leaves. If you are low on ivy, now is a suitable time to put in a liberal batch of cuttings. You need not necessarily put in tops; shoots cut in any lengths will root and soon make plants of a serviceable size.

MARGUERITES.

If you want a few marguerite plants of large size, lift one or two of those planted out in the field to yield cuttings. They can be planted with splendid balls and soon fill the pots with active roots. The white variety, which is so much grown commercially, makes a most shapely plant of rapid growth and, if you ever have plants just potted off as rooted cuttings, you can easily grow these along into handsome 8-inch pot stock for Easter, giving several pinchings and keeping the plants potted along.

The white variety makes the best pot plant; the yellow varieties are of little value for this purpose. On the other hand, yellows are in great demand for cutting and you will not go far wrong in lifting some stock and potting it on or, better still, plant the stock in a place where it can have good head room. Some growers consider that yellow marguerites will flower in winter only if kept cramped at the roots in pots or boxes. Others, and they are successful with this plant, set them out in solid beds and have them flowering abundantly all winter long. Whichever way you grow them, remember that while the plants may seem small when planted out, they make remarkable growth as spring advances. If you see any signs of leaf miners on your marguerite foliage, and sometimes this pest will badly disfigure them, spray the plants with a good nicotine solution and you will destroy them.

WINTER-FLOWERING BEGONIAS.

This is the time of rapid growth with all the winter-flowering begonias. Many are already carrying a number of flowers and the plants have been on sale in retail stores since early in September. If you want to grow these begonias well, you must give them some heat at night and on dark, damp, cool days or they will soon show the lack. Melior, Cincinnati, Mrs. Peterson, Peerless, Lorraine and Turnford Hall all need some artificial heat and nothing will more speedily ruin them than an absence of heat for even one chilly night. As time will permit, plants should be staked out. If they are allowed to go too long, it will be most difficult to make them shapely. Keep the atmosphere rather on the dry side and use light shading from this time on.

If you are growing any of the magnificent large-flowered English winter-blooming begonias, you will find that they succeed best grown a trifle warmer than the varieties already named. I am referring now to such beautiful sorts as Clibran's Pink, Altrincham Pink, Optima, Winter Cheer, Emily Clibran and Rosalind. Any grower who has acquired the knack of growing these plants can readily secure fancy prices for them and, by the way, they last much longer in the average home than do Melior or Cincinnati.

RAMBLER ROSES FOR FORCING.

Perhaps you have grown some rambler roses in pots through the summer and these have been plunged to their brims in the soil and have been making luxuriant growth. It is time now to check this excellent growth and, if you want some plants for early forcing, you must dig out the pots, give the plants any necessary support and gradually reduce the water supply, so as to ripen the wood. In two or three weeks the plants can be laid on their sides and, if they are placed where the sun can play on them as much as possible, it will materially assist in hardening the canes. Of course, it is not necessary to grow roses in pots through the summer; however, plants grown in this way are far the best for early forcing.

SCHIZANTHUS.

Schizanthus is a most useful annual for pot culture, better known than nemesia, and succeeds better if grown a little cooler than that annual. Perhaps you have sown the seeds already and have plants coming along; if not, sow the seeds now. They germinate quickly, and the seedlings may be placed in flats or potted off singly before they have become drawn. Always grow the plants cool and well up to the glass, so as to keep the plants stocky. Also, be sure to pot the plants along before they become potbound; they can be flowered in from 5-inch to 8-inch pots. Of course, sometimes 10-inch or 12-inch pots and even tubs are used for show specimens. The popularity of schizanthus as a pot plant dates from the introduction of S. wisetonensis, by Low's, a noted English firm. S. wisetonensis is still a popular sort, but, if a packet of large-flowered hybrids or Garaway's hybrids are sown, flowers of extra size are obtained. Schizanthus makes a beautiful pot plant and the flowers last remarkably well when cut.

FIRE HEAT.

Coal is not plentiful and many growers are still facing the winter with empty bins. The outlook, however, is better and it looks now as though there would be enough to go around before long. We all want to economize in the use of fuel in every possible way and, no doubt, many growers will run their houses cooler, as they did during the war period. Carnations, violets, chrysanthemums, snapdragons, cinerarias, calceolarias, primulas, geraniums, bulbous plants and many other subjects can be successfully carried along for some time without artificial heat. On the other hand, cyclamens wanted for the holidays should have a little heat.

Begonias must have heat or they will suffer. Roses, of course, cannot do without it. Most orchids need a moderate amount, as do such plants as poinsettias, crotons, colored dracænas and other fine foliaged plants. If you want Christmas freesias, a little heat will help them along. To economize on coal, use wood, if you have a supply of it, and especially where hot water heat is used. Wood soon warms the pipes and takes off the damp, chilly feeling so harmful to many plants, especially pot plants. Do not close the ventilators tight where no fire heat is being used. A little air keeps the atmosphere from becoming "clammy."

THE first week of autumn brought a noticeable stimulus to the wholesale cut flower markets.

COLLECTIONS are reported as not having improved as yet, although the florists' business shows the usual autumnal increase.

Now that the bonus bill has been defeated, the tariff bill passed and Congress gone home, the country may settle down and do business for a while.

IF your advertising has not seemed to pay, either directly or through the continued growth of the business, don't stop advertising, but change the way you do it.

ANY retail florist should be able to get his place to stick for a time in the minds of those who look, if, in his show window, he puts Laddie and Lassie carnations, a vase of each legibly labeled.

CLOCKS in Chicago and other cities were set back Sunday, September 24, so that now local time is the same as their standard time, a matter to be noted by those who send orders to that market.

THERE is a demand for flowering plants that can be sold in the early autumn, before chrysanthemum pot plants are ready. Any florist who can supply low-priced plants in bloom at this season can do a good business.

IT develops that the mortality among cyclamens in the middle west has been unusually high this season. Much of the loss was due to the excessive heat in the first few days of September, though the mite did its share of destruction.

AS business becomes heavier, it is of greater advantage to get material into The Review office earlier each week. More time and attention can be given to material which reaches this office on Thursday, Friday and Saturday than to that which arrives at the height of the press-time rush. A word to the wise!

THE Dutch bulbs, in many instances, are not so good this season as last. This is particularly true of narcissi and hyacinths. They seem to have been cured, cleaned and packed in haste, as though to get them into the United States ahead of the signing of the new tariff bill. A goodly proportion made the goal.

THE number of greenhouses erected during the summer just past and the new stores opened indicate confidence on the part of many in a profitable season ahead.

IF you haven't filled customers' window boxes with evergreens in the autumn, you are overlooking a bit of business that is profitable to you and gives pleasure to those you serve.

GENERAL opinion is that the season ahead will be a good one for those who try to make it so. And, acting on this conclusion, many in the trade are planning on a more energetic sales campaign than they have made in the last few years.

A CREDITOR is inclined to be lenient with a debtor who is short of funds by reason of some temporary stringency, though unsympathetic to those who allow their bills to run by sheer neglect. But how can one know which is which when letters are never answered?

NOW that the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has taken out $1,000,000 insurance against the engagement or marriage of the famous Polish movie star, Pola Negri, during her three months' stay in this country, to make pictures for the corporation, her managers don't care how many flowers the Los Angeles florists sell to her admirers while she is at Hollywood.

COAL buyers are holding aloof from the market at present, with the result that the greenhouse owner can get what fuel he wants if he will pay the price asked. In view of the car shortage, it is not likely the supply will increase to the point of sending prices down; rather the reverse is to be expected, now that chilly weather is upon us. It looks as though now was the time to buy.

THAT exponent of business principles of moralistic character, Roger W. Babson, remarked recently, "When both employer and wage-earner honestly believe that we are here in this world to serve others, the labor problem will be solved—but not till then." So will be some other problems that arise in the field of business. But a Carpenter made similar remarks 1922 years ago, and yet not enough of us accept them to have solved these problems.

THERE was great confusion on the dock of the Holland-America line in the weeks just preceding the date on which the new tariff law went into effect. The efforts of all concerned to land as many bulbs as possible before they became subject to the greatly increased duties resulted in piling the dock mountain high, with consignments mixed in great confusion. It was a slow process to sort out any shipper's cases, ten days being required to dispatch some cars to the middle west.

WHAT is believed to be the first price list in this trade printed by the rotogravure process has been distributed by Beebe & Tucker, Mitchellville, Ia. It contains their offer of gladiolus bulbs for 1922. The form is a sheet, approximately 15x20 inches, printed on both sides, which is folded so as to go in a No. 10 envelope, making twenty-four pages. The profuse illustrations show up with the clearness and softness to be seen in the Sunday newspaper rotogravure sections. The work was done by the Alco-Gravure, Inc., which has offices in New York, St. Louis and Baltimore.

GERMAN TRADE SEEKS SLOGAN.

The Germans, too, have recognized the force and business creating power of the American florists' slogan, "Say It with Flowers," for the florists of Germany have recently been casting about for a slogan which would represent their business in their own country. B. Eschner, president of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, calls attention to an announcement in the German trade periodical, Die Bindekunst, published in Erfurt, to the effect that a prize would be given for the most concise statement which would tend to constantly remind the public of flowers. The opening sentence of the announcement read: "Für Deutschland soll ein Werbewert geprägt werden, ähnlich dem amerikanischen 'Say It with Flowers' von gleicher Bedeutung und gleicher Wirkung."

Following this opening paragraph was a description of, first, how the American florists had undertaken the task of selecting a slogan which would easily impress itself upon the mind of the public and draw attention to the flower stores and, second, the means used by the American florists to put the slogan before the public.

An explanation was then given, telling what was wanted; that is, what it was desired the slogan contain, and who the contributors were. Attention was called to the fact that the American slogan only contained sixteen letters.

The contest remained open until August 19, and the following are some of the contributions received by Die Bindekunst. These are given first in the German, as they appeared in Die Bindekunst, and then in a translation of them:

"Lasst die Blumen sprechen!" "Let the Flowers Speak!"

"Lass Blumen sagen, was du fühlst!" "Let Flowers Tell What You Feel!"

"Rede Durch die Blume!" "Speak Through Flowers!"

"Rede der Blume Sprache!" "Speak the Flower Language!"

"Kein Heim ohne Blumen!" "No Home Without Flowers!"

"Den Blumen vertrau es an!" "Trust It to Flowers!"

"Blumen Erfreuen das Herz! "Flowers Gladden the Heart!"

"Durch Blumen zum Herzen!" "Reach the Heart with Flowers!"

There were 226 slogans submitted, eleven of which came too late to be entered in the contest. The decision as to the winner has not yet been made.

BUSINESS IS GOOD.

Perhaps the most common plant in the trade is the geranium; it is doubtful if an equal number of any other plant is handled in any part of the country. Consequently, when the demand for geraniums seems each year to exceed the supply, in spite of some increase in production, it is evident that the trade is growing steadily. That the demand for geraniums is unceasing is shown by letters like this:

Please change my geranium advertisement to correspond with the enclosed copy. You need run this only for two issues, as they are selling good. —Oscar S. Magnuson, Kane, Pa., September 21, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

The Market.

Last week practically ended the heavy glut of asters and gladioli. Asters are still plentiful, but the quality is not of the best. The demand for white asters is heavy, with barely enough coming in to supply the trade. Gladioli are scarce and, even though the quality is not of the best, they are cleaning up daily at good prices. Carnations have made their appearance, but the quality is not of the best and there is little demand for this stock.

Roses, which have been scarce for some time, are arriving now in much larger quantities, with a decided improvement in quality. The market is holding firm, with the supply just about equal to the demand. Easter lilies are in demand, although there are few to be had.

Valley is cleaning up every day and, although the supply is limited, the quality is excellent. Orchids are coming in daily, but the demand far exceeds the supply. The dahlia season has opened and some of the finest show blooms ever seen on this market are making their appearance. The supply at present is limited and they are snapped up as fast as they arrive. They certainly fill a long-felt want for something to take the place of the asters, which, though they have been plentiful this summer, have been of only medium quality.

A few mums are coming in now, but, as the weather still remains warm, there is little demand and the quality is not of the best. Yellow varieties only have made their appearance. Beauties are arriving now in small quantities, but the quality is poor, due to warm weather and late arrival of all trains.

In spite of the unsettled conditions existing here at present, the trade is preparing for one of the busiest seasons in years. Even though the local street car strike seems no nearer settlement than when started, dealers are optimistic and are starting to push ahead for business.

Various Notes.

Roy G. Schell has purchased the Naples Valley Greenhouses, Naples, N. Y., and is making preparations for a busy season.

The local branch of the McCallum Co. has received word from E. J. McCallum, who is in Europe on a buying trip, to the effect that he will sail from Hamburg for England October 1, and will arrive in this country about November 1.

Peter Hoffman has completed summer house-cleaning, and his store in the Washington Market presents a spick-and-span appearance.

Mr. Slattery, of W. J. Palmer & Son, has returned from his vacation, which embraced an extensive motor tour. He is now back in the harness for the season.

S. A. Anderson has been making a fine display of California mums the last week.

Proprietor Colvin, of the Premier Flower Shop, recently opened at Niagara Falls, reports that he is well pleased with his new venture.

G. L. Berger and H. L. Blend, of the McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, were in town last week with their display of baskets and novelties. They report an optimistic business outlook in the territory covered by them.

Max Kozminski, of the Sycamore Flower Shop, is laying plans for the erection of a new store, to be completed in time for Christmas business.

Ralph Galley, of Gardenville, has practically completed the erection of his new greenhouse range, and he expects to have it in operation by October 1. Mr. Galley intends to grow bulbous stock and plants.

J. F. Gould, of Middleport, is breaking ground for the erection of a new greenhouse, to be devoted to the growing of roses. Mr. Gould is one of New York state's most successful rose growers and, with the addition of the new glass, he will have one of the largest places in the state. J. B. M.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

In the latter part of last week there was a considerable increase in demand, and the market took on the appearance of greater activity than has prevailed for many months. It is interesting to note, however, that nearly all the wholesale establishments report that September from the beginning has been better than the same days a year ago, while the gain has been progressive, getting better and better as the month went along. Wholesale houses are showing an increase for September, some of them for the first time since 1922 came in, though others showed gains in some of the spring months. Nearly all the wholesalers had decreased sales in August, in July and some in June; they are pleased beyond measure to find that September either already has recovered the summer losses or seems sure to do so before the week is over.

The acceleration of business has been excellent, but it has not affected quoted prices to any great extent. With the increased demand there has been a fortunate improvement in the quality of stock. A month ago, or even less, only a small part of each day's receipts was of sufficiently good quality so that it could be sold out of town or to the critical city stores. At present it is possible to sell through the legitimate trade channels nearly everything the market receives. With only a slight advance in the prices of the better grades of flowers, therefore, the return to the growers has become not only decidedly better, but thoroughly satisfactory for the season. It may be said that the market now is "going good"; if it will continue as the season has started, everyone will be delighted.

Warm days and cool nights have given a fairly large supply of excellent roses. Even the most critical buyers can supply themselves without much trouble. The proportion of long-stemmed, fine roses is increasing daily and the proportion of short stems is decreasing as steadily. It is easier to fill orders for the better grades than it is for shorts. Prices are moderate, quality considered, but the wholesalers do not believe it would be policy at this time, with the chrysanthemum season rapidly approaching, to advance rose prices; they want to keep the buyers coming. The bulk of the supply at present is Premier. In some houses there are as many Premier as of all other varieties put together. White is scarcest.

The supply of chrysanthemums is increasing every day. Local cuts have not yet become large, but the California shippers are active. Local flowers make $2 to $4 per dozen; California stock, $4 to $6. Pink has come as well as white and yellow. Pompons have begun. It will not be more than a few days before the chrysanthemum will dominate the market.

Carnations are improving rapidly, the weather being just right for them. They have sold well so far and probably will do so until pompons become plentiful and cheap. There is a good demand for sweet peas and the quali y of the stock is improving rapidly, though the quantity reaching the market is not yet large. Valley is in steady request and only moderate supply. Lilies have shortened up and the price has advanced. A few good cattleyas command fine prices.

The supply of gladioli has run down to the point where these flowers no longer are an important factor, although they are still available in good quality and prices are excellent. The local asters also are at a low ebb, but the northern stock is both plentiful and fine. Within the last few days several wholesalers have made trips into northern Michigan to see aster shippers. Their flowers, if they reach the market in good condition, are selling well.

Celosia is being handled in considerable quantity. It is useful in large baskets and in store decorations.

Going to Stielow's?

October 5, members and guests of the Chicago Florists' Club will inspect the range of Stielow Bros., at Niles Center, from 3 to 6 p. m. At 6:30 the first meeting of the club in the new season will take place at Mike Schmitz's Auto Inn, on Lincoln avenue, Niles Center. All members of the trade are invited. The announcement of the event, sent out by Secretary Lautenschlager, states:

"The Stielow establishment is the largest greenhouse range in this part of the country heated exclusively by oil fuel. Approximately 600 boiler horsepower is operated by oil burners. A full season's oil supply is carried on hand by one steel storage tank, having a capacity of over one-half million gallons of oil which is supplemented by a submerged concrete reserve tank of 160,000 gallons' capacity.

"A representative of one of the largest concerns manufacturing oil-burning equipment will address the florists on this interesting and timely subject.

"Be sure to come and inspect the new greenhouses, the oil burners, the four types of large boilers, the ice machine, the Universal thermometer, the new rose varieties. Hear the latest on oil as fuel. Meet the progressive growers of Cook county.

"The range of Stielow Bros. is one of the most up-to-date establishments in the country, and you will be rewarded for the time spent in observing its equipment."

The range of Stielow Bros. can be reached by automobile, elevated train and steam road. Motorists may go out on Lincoln avenue to Niles center or west on Dempster street from Evanston. The Ravenswood branch of the Northwestern elevated road connects with a bus to Niles Center, at the Western avenue station. Only one train is available on the Chicago & Northwestern railroad, leaving the station at Canal and Madison streets at 6 p. m. and arriving at Niles Center at 6:35 p. m. This train

T. E. Waters, chairman of the good of the club committee, is arranging for those who will go out from the loop by automobile to have their cars in the wholesale district at 2 p. m., so that those who have not this most convenient form of transportation may obtain a ride from a fellow florist.

Growers Open Season.

The Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago opened the autumn season with a meeting at the Hotel Randolph, Thursday evening, September 21. It was an auspicious beginning; the attendance was good, and discussion of a number of interesting topics enlivened the evening. Of course, the coal situation was reviewed; the belief was general that coal was in ample supply now if one would pay the prices asked. It is decided to establish a statistical bureau, to collect data regarding the greenhouse trade, a long-desired move. The letter of L. C. Vinson, secretary of the Ohio district organization of the National Flower Growers' Association, regarding standardization of grading cut flowers and plants was discussed; this communication, sent to all florists' clubs, will be found quoted on a forward page.

The flower show to be held October 16 to 21 in connection with the Uptown Chicago exposition, at the Broadway Armory, found good support. President Peter Pearson, who is manager of the display, received fifteen pledges of exhibits from members present; he wants more. It was voted to hold the October meeting, which falls on October 16, at a luncheon on the north side, and after it to attend the Uptown Chicago exposition in a body.

The insurance representative, Mr. Robinson, who addressed the association last spring, reported on the progress made toward obtaining a reduction in fire insurance rates on greenhouses.

American Beauties

From $4.50 to $7.50 per Dozen

We are the only house on this market having regular daily supply of Beauties. The demand, however, for this stock is so great that in order to avoid disappointment orders must be placed at least one day in advance. At present, the majority of these Beauties are in the longer lengths.

If you are not already a "KENNICOTT BUYER" now is the time to get acquainted. See for yourself what our stock is like and we are confident you will then arrange for regular shipments.

President Pearson attended a meeting of the local board of underwriters to present the necessary data. The committee, composed of Joseph Kohout, Henry Neve and George J. Ball, will continue the work. It is proposed, after the lower rates have been obtained, to secure a discount for members of the organization by placing with one company, in combination, the policies of not less than fifty members. A discount can be obtained on automobile liability insurance if it is similarly placed in combination.

Uptown Chicago Show.

The Uptown Chicago exposition will be held at the Broadway Armory October 16 to 21. The management has donated a considerable sum to cover the expenses and premiums for a flower show, which Peter Pearson confidently predicts will be better than last year's. More space for the flower display has been provided, and $200 will be distributed as prizes. The north side florists who were active in promoting last year's show—Herman D. Schiller, George Stollery, Laurent Clody and others—are working in its behalf again, and Peter Pearson will again have charge of the display. He requests that growers who have flowers to display at that time communicate with him. Entries in the premium classes should be made by October 14. A truck will call for flowers for the show at growers' commission houses. Out-of-town growers may ship their blooms either to a commission house or to the Broadway Armory, in care of Peter Pearson. A number of growers have already pledged exhibits, and a repetition of last October's notably successful flower show seems assured.

Various Notes.

One or two of the wholesalers woke up to the fact that we have a new tariff law when, September 22, they found the duty on orchids imported from Canada to have been increased from twenty-five per cent to forty per cent. The Dale Estate has sold considerable quantities of its cattleyas in this market.

or five of the Amling places. In each case the rose is making friends. It is a brighter and deeper pink than Premier. The introducer says that it is practically immune from black spot and mildew and can be flowered the year around. The Amling interests also are growing another Pierson rose, named Mrs. Harding, another bright pink they think well of.

That the flower business in Chicago is bound to show an increase is the opinion of W. Abrahamson, who handles the store fixtures department at Randall's. Mr. Abrahamson says the number of new stores started in Chicago this season exceeds anything in his previous experience, and that the inquiries now in hand indicate that the growth in this direction has not stopped. Mr. Abrahamson points out that every new flower store will add something to the general volume of business in this market.

The Davis interests, the combination representing the largest production of greenhouse vegetables in the middle west and probably in the United States, now is represented in Chicago by Davis Brothers Co., a sales organization with headquarters at 15 West South Water street, G. A. Pride being manager. The selling organization represents only the greenhouse concerns in which the Davis family are interested, but this makes an imposing array of glass, including the J. W. Davis Co., of Terre Haute, Ind.; the Davis-Steiner Co., of Ottawa, Ill., and Morrison, Ill.; the Davis-Kankakee Co., of Kankakee, Ill.; the W. B. Davis Co., of Aurora, Ill.; the Davis-Glendale Co., of Glendale, Cal.; the Davis-Joliet Co., of Joliet, Ill., and the Davis Floral Co., of Davenport, Ia.

Two and a half years ago Herbert F. Youngquist bought the flower store and leased the property of B. J. Sherman, 851 Irving Park boulevard. July 8 he married Miss Lorraine Hall. Now it is reported he has purchased from Mr. Sherman the property in which the store is located, for $25,000, the down payment being more than one-third the purchase price. Mr. Youngquist has earned success by hard work and close attention to business.

George J. Ball, of Glen Ellyn, has been made a director in the reorganization of the DuPage County State bank, founded in 1912 and now having deposits of $481,000.

At the South Shore Country Club last week A. Henderson and A. C. Spencer played a match game, with Joseph Foerster as gallery. The return match, at the Wheaton Golf Club, is scheduled for September 28. James Henderson returned to Boston last week to resume his studies at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

J. L. Raske is at his store now a couple of hours each day, but the effects of the tumor which caused anxiety for his health prevent him from speaking above a whisper. Mr. Raske hopes to recover his full vocal powers in a month or two.

The firm of Leslie & Delamater, which opened a store at 6471-73 Sheridan road in July, is composed of Susan Leslie and Charles A. Delamater. The superior class of residents in Rogers Park supports their belief that this is an excellent location for a flower store. Business has opened up well. Already the prospects for telegraph orders have appeared so propitious that they are joining the F. T. D., expecting a share

A. Papatony, proprietor of the Briggs Floral Co., believes that his firm has two of the best locations in Chicago, though each is different from the other in the nature of its advantages. The south side store, at 1505 East Fifty-third street, is within a stone's throw of several residential hotels of a high social order, all full of flower buyers, says Mr. Papatony. The north side store, at 801 Sheridan road, is on the corner of the road and Broadway, where its conspicuous windows are seen by probably as many automobilists as pass any flower store in Chicago.

Friends of Ed Jacob will learn with regret that Mrs. Jacob underwent a rather serious surgical operation last week at Columbus Memorial hospital. She is progressing well, but under the best conditions will be in the hospital for another fortnight.

At 4226 North Crawford avenue Arthur T. Eichel is building up a nice business, although he says the neighborhood has been notably healthy of late.

The American Greenhouse Mfg. Co. last week received orders for the erection of greenhouses of steel-frame construction for C. Kranz, of Ottumwa, Ia., and George Kranz, of Muscatine, Ia., who are brothers. The former's house will be 37x300 and the latter's 39x200.

Homer Lange intends to be a strong contender for the local trade golf championship next time the Ziska cup is up. He abandoned yachting one day last week to shoot an 88 on the Westmoreland course.

W. J. Smyth, who is a director of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, will attend the annual convention of that organization at Baltimore October 10 and 11. Out-of-town orders constitute an important part of the Smyth business, every day bringing from half a dozen to a dozen of them.

William Lubliner, of Milwaukee, has taken the florist's concession at the Leiter Stores and plans to push for a big business there. He will sell his Milwaukee store. Mr. Lubliner is a brother of Harry Lubliner, former Chicago florist and now motion picture magnate.

George Asmus was at Springfield last week to act as a judge at the flower show which is an annual feature of the state fair.

The variety of roses available in this market this season is increased by the arrival of blooms of Amelia Gude, a well liked yellow, which the E. G. Hill Co. is sending to the Chicago Flower Growers' Association.

H. B. Kennicott is planning an automobile trip to Florida next month. His mother will go by train to their winter place at Clearwater, while Mr. Kennicott and his wife probably will go down by automobile. The ladies will remain for the winter, but Mr. Kennicott will be back in a few days.

as is required at the store managed by his father and mother, so they are large buyers of roses in this market. But Mr. Griffen's quest was for something to grow at this season for low-priced blooming plants; he says there is need for quantity and variety. Mr. Griffen was making a swing around a circle through Missouri, Iowa, Illinois and Indiana, visiting plantsmen and florists situated something like himself.

William C. Hall was here from Montreal last week to close the deal whereby George D. Reid, now with the E. Wienhoeber Co., will purchase the retail store of Hall & Robinson, in Montreal. Mr. Hall believes he has found a successor who will uphold the high reputation of the retail store, and he will now devote himself to his range of 22,000 feet of glass, growing pot plants. Mr. Hall was shown the city during his visit here by Homer Lange, in the latter's car.

George Peterson, of Peterson & Sons, Escanaba, Mich., was here for several days this week, making his headquarters with P. C. Schupp at the store of J. A. Budlong Co. It was something of a vacation trip for Mr. Peterson, as he made the journey via automobile.

Opelika, Ala.—H. B. Hall has started in the florists' business and is erecting 5,000 feet of glass.

The Market.

The demand last week appeared to one new in harness to be better than usual for the third week in September. The Jewish holiday caused the close of the week to be almost brisk. There is a large supply of dahlias. The finer varieties are selling well, at excellent prices. Roses are short of the demand, a most unusual September condition, due probably to the season and partly to the experience gained in previous years. Generally speaking, flowers are quite plentiful and a few more roses would make even these seem abundant. Asters and gladioli are going into the vacation season. Delphinium is still here and cosmos in great numbers. Carnations have come and a few sweet peas, mostly shell pink, with a few of the other colors. There are Beauties and orchids and valley and just a few chrysanthemums, although the market is well supplied for the opening of October.

Schedule for Saturday, September 30, 3 p. m., at Belmont: Bickmore vs. Bayersdorfer. The Craig forfeit to Bayersdorfer closed the regular schedule, as shown above. This left a tie for first place. Chairman Walter Davis, of the baseball committee, has announced that this is to be decided by a game between the leaders at Belmont September 30.

Coal.

The coal situation is steadily improving. Contracts are being made; orders are being accepted. But the cars roll slowly. One point that becomes painfully clear, we are going to help pay for the strike. Both hard and soft coal will be higher this season than they were last season, despite lower freight rates.

The Tariff.

The passage of the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill, which became law immediately on its being signed by the president, affects us. The duties on florists' supplies and on bulbs will be higher. Chiffons, in particular, have fifteen per cent added to their duty. It is probable that when the stocks now in this country are exhausted prices will advance.

Bulbs.

The higher price asked for the French bulbs, especially for Paper White narcissi, will have an effect on the cut flower market this season. Paper Whites cost about one-half more than they did one year ago. There are likely to be fewer large lots of Paper Whites forced for the wholesale market. Those who grow Paper Whites to retail in their own stores will be less affected.

Dutch hyacinths are cheap and good, with every appearance of there being enough. Narcissi are rather scarce, but there are plenty of tulips.

There are plenty of first-size freesias, but few of the larger sizes.

The drift of the bulb market is toward the retail grower. The wholesale grower finds bulbs less and less profitable.

Dahlias.

George Aeugle has been receiving at the store of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. exceptionally fine dahlias that have been in brisk demand. They are grown by George Wolfrum and are remarkable, both for culture and for varieties. Mr. Aeugle said that bronze was the popular

One of our Dahlia growers has over 100 acres planted in Dahlias. It is hardly necessary to say that that number of plants will produce any quantity of flowers.

This season we offer many new varieties—novelties handled here exclusively.

color and that, despite a good supply, he had not been able to meet the demand at the close of the week. Panama, Insulinde and U. S. A. are three of the leading fancy bronze dahlias. The October Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at the Hotel Adelphia Tuesday evening, October 3, at 8 o'clock. The election of officers will take place at this meeting.

The nominees are: For president, Leo Niessen; for vice-president, John W. Prince; for secretary, Robert Kift and E. P. Klinger; for treasurer, George Craig.

Various Notes.

J. D. Eisele, president of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., and Mrs. Eisele returned from the Pacific slope September 17.

Samuel S. Pennock returned from Westerly, R. I., September 25. Mr. Pennock was summoned to Westerly by the sudden death of Mrs. Pennock's sister, Mrs. Horatio Willetts, of Lansdowne, Pa., a lady, who while in full health and vigor, was suddenly stricken with pneumonia. Funeral services were held at Middletown, Del.

The September meeting of the Germantown Horticultural Society brought out a fine attendance and exhibition. S. Mendelson Meehan spoke of the character displayed in the gardens of Germantown. Mr. Meehan deplored the too free use of evergreens. George Redles spoke on wild flowers. There were fine fruits, vegetables, plants and flowers on display. Curiously enough, there were no dahlias.

F. J. Michell, Jr., and family have returned from Ocean City.

The Charles F. Krueger Co. reports business as improving at the Reading Terminal Flower Shop.

J. Otto Thilow and daughter returned from Cleveland September 22. Mr. Thilow is a Mason in the thirty-third degree.

Sydney H. Bayersdorfer is rapidly recovering from his operation for appendicitis. Mr. Bayersdorfer returned home from the hospital September 22, after a stay there of only eleven days.

BOSTON.

The Market.

There is a decided shortening up in the supply of cut flowers and conditions have considerably improved. In spite of the Jewish holidays and the absence of many of the usual buyers, flowers have moved well in the last few days and everything points to better business. The easing of the coal situation, the gradual cessation of strikes and the greater activity prevailing in nearly all the New England industries augur well for the coming season.

Roses are much less plentiful than they were and prices are higher. For 21-inch Hadley prices are as high as $30 per hundred, while for the general line of other standard sorts, like Butterfly, Columbia, Premier, Ward, Ophelia and Double White Killarney, $4 to $16 per hundred are standard values, with some fancies a little higher. More carnations are coming in and the quality is much improved. Prices on these also have advanced. Chrysanthemums, as yet, are available only in small lots and the chief varieties are Golden Glow, Early Frost, Yellow Frost and Chrysolora.

few dahlias appear, but the big flowers, which all growers are aiming to produce, have little market value, as they are the reverse of graceful and decorative. Gladioli are still quite abundant, but good spikes now bring $1 per dozen without difficulty. There are many remarkably fine asters, with the best realizing $4 per hundred and the other grades $2 to $3 per hundred. There is the usual supply of miscellaneous flowers, like cosmos, everlastings, bachelor's buttons and sweet sultans.

The cattleya scarcity is over, with the appearance of C. labiata and C. Bowringiana. There are also still a few C. Gaskelliana and C. gigas. Valley continues in good demand, and some fine white bouvardia is coming in.

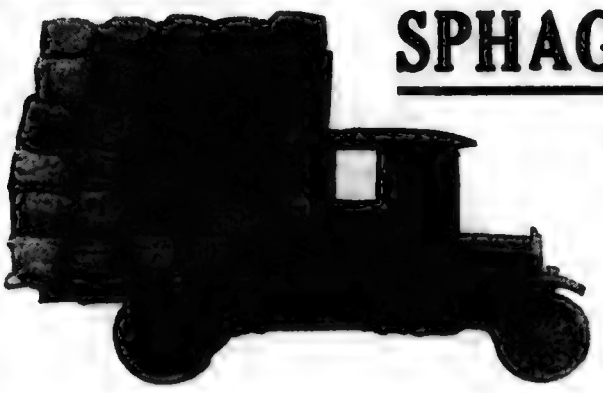
There is an abundant supply of ferns and asparagus. A considerable number of cyclamens, as well as begonias, are already offered at the retail stores, where a good many wedding orders are being filled at present.

Club Meeting.

There was an excellent attendance at the first meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club following the summer vacation, September 19. Six new members were elected. Committee reports on ladies' night, in June, and the picnic, in July, were read and duly accepted. The committee on resolutions for the late Patrick Welch, of which Henry Penn was chairman, presented resolutions, which were adopted by a rising vote.

A letter was read from L. C. Vinson, secretary of the Ohio district organization of the National Flower Growers' Association, regarding the standardization and grading of cut flowers and plants. After some discussion by Messrs. Bartsch, Denham and others, who favored the plan, it was unanimously voted to accept the grading recommended. All who spoke said that there was a crying need of such standard grades, particularly as applied to cut roses.

Walter H. Golby showed handsome Elberta peaches and was awarded a report of merit. A similar award went to James Donald for a collection of greenhouse melons of splendid size and flavor, including King George, Hero of Lockinge, Cotting's hybrid and Honey Drop. W. N. Craig showed heavily fruited branches of Chionanthus virginica and a handsome red-fruited Pyrus Malus, a cross between P. floribunda and P. Niedzwetzkyana.



Gustave Thommen was the first speaker of the evening and for an hour or more entertained members with a report of his recent Florida trip. He considers summer an ideal time to visit Florida, as steamship fares are most reasonable and the menus excellent. There is no rush of tourists as in winter, and excellent hotel accommodations can be had inexpensively. The grower moving to Florida has to learn much and forget much that he has learned. With rare exceptions, commercial establishments look quite rough compared with those in the north. Mr. Thommen described visits to Jacksonville, Tampa, Lakeland, St. Petersburg, Orlando, Tarpon Springs and other places, in some of which there were excellent flower stores, comparing favorably with what we have in the north.

Mr. Thommen visited the nurseries of Reasoner Bros., 170 acres in area, at Oneco. Days and weeks, according to Mr. Thommen, could well be spent at this famous nursery, where so much tropical vegetation is to be seen. Date palms, introduced from India, are here seventy-five feet high and three feet in diameter. Phœnix sylvestris is of equal size. Jacarandas are fifty feet high and thirty feet in diameter, and there are many wonderful bauhinias, banyans, sandalwood trees, purple and yellow allamandas, queen's crape myrtles, bromelias and hosts of other new, rare and interesting plants; in fact, the whole nursery was a veritable paradise for plant lovers.

William Downs, who had spent more than five years in orange groves in Florida, did not at all agree with Mr. Thommen. He said that comforts of life in Florida were comparatively few; that the extreme humidity made life often almost unendurable. Frosts at intervals, he stated, devastated the growing crops and the climate causes a feeling of lassitude, unknown among northerners. His advice was to visit Florida by all means, especially in winter if you can afford it, but his parting words were, "Don't go to Florida to make a living."

Herman H. Bartsch spoke of a recent visi to Canada on the occasion of the convention of the Canadian Florists' and Gardeners' Association at Montreal. He said the meetings were splendid. He found the Canadians an up-to-date and fine body of men, who sent their cordial greetings to their brother florists across the border.

HAVE YOU SEEN THE NEW WRIGHT FERN?

THE RETAIL STORE

A PAGE OF HINTS AND HELPS FOR THE RETAIL FLORIST

HOLDEN'S NEW STORE.

After a little more than a month of business operations in the new location, at 341 Morrison street, Portland, Ore., the management of Holden's Flower Shop reports enough encouragement to make it feel confident of success. This report in itself, however, is only the natural expression of satisfaction which every owner who is operating his business on ethical principles has a right to make, but in this particular instance greater credit is due. To this store must also be given the credit of discovering floral designers who are equal to any of those in the middle west or eastern cities of the country, if the production of a tablecloth design made entirely of pansies and Asparagus plumosus is a criterion which we may use in estimating the artistic abilities of Mrs. J. G. Holden and her assistant, J. Schnap. The photograph on page 69 indicates the general design of the piece, which was placed in the window of the new store on the opening day, August 10. It measured six and one-half feet in diameter, and 3,500 cut pansies, together with a great deal of Asparagus plumosus, were used in making it.

Interior View of the New Quarters of Holden's Flower Shop, Portland, Ore.

The store itself measures 16x40 feet, and has a basement space of 58x68 feet, divided into three parts; namely, a show room, a stock room and a work room, all of which will come in exceedingly useful during the holiday rush. The view of the store interior shows how the owner of the store solved the problem of hiding the bareness of a stairway railing and at the same time utilizing valuable space for displaying palms and ferns. Here the large and small ferns and palms, as well as the decorative baskets, vases and jardinieres are displayed to their best advantage. The entire setting was highly complimented by all who viewed it.

DYED BLOOMS FOR DEAD DAYS.

To the dealer who capitalizes his ideas there is seldom a dull season. Something different for the public carefully thought out and actively worked out will increase the movements of the cash register. Starr the Florist, Wilson, N. C., bids fair to be in the market for a new cash register before long. Here is a recent idea of his and one that may aid florists all over the country, especially in the quiet season. Stickney Boyd, of this firm, tells it thus:

"We purchased some flower dyes of different colors and dyed some tuberoses, zinnias, physostegia, butterfly bush and scabiosa various colors. These flowers we placed in our window and found a ready sale for them. They were something different from what the people had seen before, and they took with the flower buyers quite readily.

"We place these flowers in the dye just as soon as they are cut and let them stay until the desired color is obtained. For instance, if we want just a pale shade of blue or yellow, we take them out before they get too dark. A pretty combination can be obtained for baskets through this process. We found this profitable during the summer months, when there are so many outdoor flowers and business is a little dull."

EXPLAINING THE "HOW."

The Idle Hour Nurseries, of Macon, Ga., it seems, are to be found idle at no hour. And if this is true of any branch of the business, certainly it applies to the retail end, where new lines are being continually cast for new business and more of the old business.

Taking time by the forelock, the company has issued a little booklet, informing the buying public how to send orders by telegraph for occasions to come. In this booklet prices are quoted and they are so listed that a customer, on reading, will know what stock will cost him at future holidays throughout the year. Prices are quoted on cut flowers, plants, bulbs, rose bushes, etc. And a whole page is given to Christmas prices. For Christmas, one reads, orders must be placed ten days in advance, while orders for other occasions can be safely handled with a week's notice or, if necessary, less.

In short, this booklet talks to the public frankly, telling the extent of the firm's responsibility and the aim of the firm to give service. It is a booklet that the customer can put in the desk or on the library table for future reference. And it answers many questions before they are asked. It simplifies ordering by telling what the public needs to know—the "how" of ordering.

GAIN BY FALL OPENING.

The fall opening at Lincoln, Neb., is an occasion when all merchants have their display windows on dress parade. This year the fall opening at Lincoln was a grand success. Crowds from all about the town came in for the event and to gaze at the fall styles.

At this time the florists of Lincoln put forth every effort to make their windows worthy of their trade. This is a big idea for florists in other towns, as the trade not only has an opportunity to arrange florists' windows, but florists can push their business so that flowers and flower creations can be used in the display windows for other lines of business.

This year at Lincoln the window of Frey & Frey had large yellow mums in the background and brides' and bridesmaids' shower bouquets on either side. Many corsages of varying color combinations made up the rest of the window.

J. K. Hiltner was in his new location just in time to have his store a show place. With palms and ferns as a background and baskets of flowers, a large mound of roses was the central attraction.

Chapin Bros. had a gay background of autumn-colored leaves, touched with bronze shades. A fallen log, with a black squirrel perched at one end, formed the central part. There was a large basket of the new Celosia Brysonia chrysantheflora on one side and a pedestal basket of large yellow mums on the other. A corsage and vases of roses completed the window.

The Lincoln Flower Shop had as a background some of the new tinted grasses. Ferns were set off to good advantage and many baskets of roses, displaying some of the new varieties, were prominent.

The Eiche Floral Co. had one window of pampas grasses and cat-tails, with many birds of interest to all bird lovers. The other windows had leaves of sumac, with a porcupine in the foreground.

The annual events of spring and fall openings have become famous in and about Lincoln. Each merchant has his windows arranged for the occasion and at 7:30 p. m. all curtains are drawn aside simultaneously and the "ohs!" and "ahs" of the crowds are significant of the idea's success. M. L. C.

PALMS IN RETAIL STORE.

I am desirous of obtaining information concerning the keeping of palms in a retail store. We have a bench with a gravel bed and kentias are placed upon it. The average temperature in the day is 80 degrees and at night, 70 degrees. The house is of low construction and, therefore, the glass is about one foot above the top of the palms. The ventilation is a little poor in this store, but I give the palms all the air possible. On bright, sunny days I shade them partially, while on dull days I give them all the light they can get, but they do not seem to be doing so well as I should like.

I syringe them occasionally and keep them moist, but not too damp, and, after all this treatment, they still continue to die. These palms were badly infested with scale, but I washed them with a solution of whale oil soap and a little nicotine. Could the trouble be the effects of too strong a solution?

J. F. G.—Mo.

It is quite probable that the loss of foliage on these palms is partly due to the leaves having been injured by the scale, but the defective ventilation would also be detrimental to these plants during the torrid weather that so frequently prevails in your city during the summer. From the description, it is easy to infer that this small greenhouse is dry and warm, and it would be advisable to syringe more frequently and to dampen the floor from time to time, in order to maintain a better growing atmosphere. It might also be possible that some of the plants are dry in the ball, although they appear moist on the surface; a well rooted palm can utilize a good deal of water. W. H. T.

Table Cover of 3,500 Pansies Displayed in Window of Holden's Flower Shop.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

Friday, September 22, was a red-letter day at Danker's Flower Shop, Albany, N. Y., when Maiden lane was crowded with maidens, youths, matrons and gallant old boys. The attraction was a magnificent display of dahlias. Especially noteworthy were Amun Ra, Colossal, Peace, Judge Marean, Venus, Princess Pat, Patrick O'Mara, Millionaire, Mephistopheles and others. Apart from the volume of immediate business, the effort made to popularize dahlias is seen as a success in the admiration of an appreciative public. The whole Danker force, headed by Saleslady Mabel Harding, were kept busy with pencil and pad.

GAIN BY FALL OPENING.

The fall opening at Lincoln, Neb., is an occasion when all merchants have their display windows on dress parade. This year the fall opening at Lincoln was a grand success. Crowds from all about the town came in for the event and to gaze at the fall styles.

At this time the florists of Lincoln put forth every effort to make their windows worthy of their trade. This is a big idea for florists in other towns, as the trade not only has an opportunity to arrange florists' windows, but florists can push their business so that flowers and flower creations can be used in the display windows for other lines of business.

This year at Lincoln the window of Frey & Frey had large yellow mums in the background and brides' and bridesmaids' shower bouquets on either side. Many corsages of varying color combinations made up the rest of the window.

J. K. Hiltner was in his new location just in time to have his store a show place. With palms and ferns as a background and baskets of flowers, a large mound of roses was the central attraction.

Chapin Bros. had a gay background

of autumn-colored leaves, touched with bronze shades. A fallen log, with a black squirrel perched at one end, formed the central part. There was a large basket of the new Celosia Brysonia chrysantheflora on one side and a pedestal basket of large yellow mums on the other. A corsage and vases of roses completed the window.

The Lincoln Flower Shop had as a background some of the new tinted grasses. Ferns were set off to good advantage and many baskets of roses, displaying some of the new varieties, were prominent.

The Eiche Floral Co. had one window of pampas grasses and cat-tails, with many birds of interest to all bird lovers. The other windows had leaves of sumac, with a porcupine in the foreground.

The annual events of spring and fall openings have become famous in and about Lincoln. Each merchant has his windows arranged for the occasion and at 7:30 p. m. all curtains are drawn aside simultaneously and the "ohs!" and "ahs" of the crowds are significant of the idea's success. M. L. C.

PALMS IN RETAIL STORE.

I am desirous of obtaining information concerning the keeping of palms in a retail store. We have a bench with a gravel bed and kentias are placed upon it. The average temperature in the day is 80 degrees and at night, 70 degrees. The house is of low construction and, therefore, the glass is about one foot above the top of the palms. The ventilation is a little poor in this store, but I give the palms all the air possible. On bright, sunny days I shade them partially, while on dull days I give them all the light they can get, but they do not seem to be doing so well as I should like.

I syringe them occasionally and keep them moist, but not too damp, and, after all this treatment, they still continue to die. These palms were badly infested with scale, but I washed them with a solution of whale oil soap and a little nicotine. Could the trouble be the effects of too strong a solution?

J. F. G.—Mo.

It is quite probable that the loss of foliage on these palms is partly due to the leaves having been injured by the scale, but the defective ventilation would also be detrimental to these plants during the torrid weather that so frequently prevails in your city during the summer. From the description, it is easy to infer that this small greenhouse is dry and warm, and it would be advisable to syringe more frequently and to dampen the floor from time to time, in order to maintain a better growing atmosphere. It might also be possible that some of the plants are dry in the ball, although they appear moist on the surface; a well rooted palm can utilize a good deal of water. W. H. T.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

Friday, September 22, was a red-letter day at Danker's Flower Shop, Albany, N. Y., when Maiden lane was crowded with maidens, youths, matrons and gallant old boys. The attraction was a magnificent display of dahlias. Especially noteworthy were Amun Ra, Colossal, Peace, Judge Marean, Venus, Princess Pat, Patrick O'Mara, Millionaire, Mephistopheles and others. Apart from the volume of immediate business, the effort made to popularize dahlias is seen as a success in the admiration of an appreciative public. The whole Danker force, headed by Saleslady Mabel Harding, were kept busy with pencil and pad.

"Not yet, but possibly soon," observed Charles F. Rossiter, of C. E. Rossiter & Son, Sunbury, Pa., pointing to an aeroplane overhead, en route from New York to Chicago. "We are in direct line and what is to hinder us from making a connection in keeping with orders received by radio?" Chrysanthemum Golden Glow sells as soon as the blooms mature. Double White Killarney, Columbia and Premier roses and Thomas C. Joy carnations lend their spicy fragrance at this place.

Superintendent Richard King, of the United States Cut Flower Co., Elmira, N. Y., commenting upon the failure of some new roses to materialize the first year, finds it practical to nurse the stock and to figure on the second season's harvest. This means waiting longer, but it is worth the effort when the variety proves worthy. It is the custom here to plan for a heavy crop for Christmas, especially roses. Laddie carnations, carried over, furnish an early crop in a more satisfactory manner than do the new plants. Chrysanthemums look well,

The range of the Hoffman Greenhouses, Elmira, N. Y., is almost completed. The range had its first christening with hailstones in July, and sufficient damage was done to create an interest in hail insurance. H. B. Hoffman has charge of the roses and carnations here. These are looking fine. President Harry N. Hoffman is on a combined business and pleasure trip in the east.

The Market.

Business last week improved perceptibly, with the coming of cooler weather, and prices stiffened considerably accompanied by a shortening up of the general supply of flowers of all kinds. Roses are coming into the market now with fairly long stems and the quality has improved, so that good stock now brings from $8 to $12 per hundred. Columbia, Russell, Butterfly and a few good Mock are among the leaders. A large quantity of short-stemmed roses is being used in little tumbler baskets. The popular varieties for this purpose include Ward, Butterfly, Ophelia, Premier and Columbia.

Carnations are improving and the stems are a little longer than they were. The best of the latter bring $2 per hundred, but plenty of short-stemmed carnations can be had at $5 to $10 per thousand. Gladioli are not in sufficient supply to meet the demand. The best of these moved readily last week at $6 to $10 per hundred. Asters are poor and there are not enough good ones to go around at times. The average price on these is about $2 per hundred. Dahlias are coming more into favor, owing to the scarcity of gladioli and good asters. The dahlias of better quality move well at an average price of about $3 per hundred. Many of the new varieties arriving at this time are becoming quite popular with the people and they move satisfactorily.

There is a constant call for stephanotis, swainsona and valley for wedding bouquets. Most of the time these orders can not be filled.

There is a large quantity of outdoor stock coming into the market, including fine zinnias and cosmos.

Various Notes.

Z. D. Blackistone has completed the redecorating of his store at Fourteenth and H streets, northwest. The establishment now presents a striking effect, with red polished floor and black border. The woodwork generally is green, with light yellow trimmings. The ceiling is white.

Richard Sauer, of the George C. Shaffer store, is receiving the congratulations of his friends upon the honorable mention that was awarded him at Atlantic City during the recent carnival there. The occasion for the award was his decoration of the chair in which Miss Washington appeared before the judges. The work was done on short notice, Mr. Sauer having been sent to Atlantic City the night before the day of the event. The fact that he received honorable mention speaks of itself for his ability as a decorator. In all there were fifty-seven of such chairs. Some of them were under preparation for weeks prior to the day of the event. The Shaffer chair was lined with pink and blue velour, with a background of America gladioli and Carnot roses, and finished with croton, pandanus and privet foliage. The front of the chair was decorated with a large cluster of Russell roses and these roses were showered all over the chair itself, interspersed with adiantum. More than 400 yards of ribbon formed the back of the chair and it was so arranged with flowers as to suggest a puffy cushion. Mr. Sauer carried the flowers used in the decoration with him from Washington.

Mrs. Foltz, of the George C. Shaffer store, has returned from a two weeks' vacation, spent touring through Virginia with her husband in their new Liberty motor car.

George C. Shaffer, who is a member of the Shrine 1923 committee, spent the week end at Atlantic City, where he participated in a preliminary meeting of the Shrine conventions committee.

Herbert M. Sauber, formerly with the George C. Shaffer store and at one time manager and vice-president of Blackistone, Inc., who now conducts the florists' stand at the Wardman Park hotel, announces that he will open his new store, at Fourteenth street and Thomas Circle, October 1.

John H. Small III has been selected by the commissioners of the District of Columbia to develop the landscape plan for the new Gallinger municipal hospital group on Anacostia parkway. This institution, when completed, will be among the finest and largest in the United States. Final plans for the landscape development will be submitted to the national fine arts commission for approval. T. N. S.

tion, to be held at Gavel Club hall, October 2 and 3. The object of the show is to increase the knowledge and love among all the people of this wonderful late summer and autumn flower. The prize list, which is out, includes twenty-four classes for professional florists and fourteen for amateurs. This is unusual recognition for the home gardeners. The details of the show are being handled by the following committee: Z. D. Blackistone, chairman; William F. Gude, O. A. C. Oehmler, George C. Shaffer, Albert Schnell, Otto Bauer, A. E. Gude, C. E. Gersdorf, J. Harry Ley and George Ernest. Entry lists or other information can be received from Morley Rice, secretary, 1206 H street, northwest. Sunday, October 1, the Florists' Club will publish an article on the culture of dahlias.

Z. D. Blackistone says: "I have been asked by florists from a number of cities how we manage to get local publicity. The Florists' Club's publishing an article on the culture of dahlias is cited as a sample of how to get newspaper publicity. We have been getting two or three write-ups a week in all of the daily papers. If copy is carefully prepared, so as to carry with it a news or human interest message to the people, the paper not only will print it, but will be glad to get it."

of roses have fallen off considerably, but enough roses have arrived to supply the demand, leaving no surplus. Premier, Columbia and Butterfly show good color and are in demand, but White Killarney is favored. Ophelia and Golden Ophelia in the fancy grades sell well.

Carnations are arriving, but they are a bit small and short-stemmed. Last week there was a good call for asters from the retailers, who consumed much of the best stock. Gladioli have been in heavy supply; these will have to give way to the incoming dahlias and mums, which from now on will be in the limelight. Dahlias will not be in heavy supply, since the hot, dry summer has killed many of them. Mums will be in great supply, however. Varieties in the market now are Smith's Advance, Yellow Advance and Chrysolora, only a few of each.

A good supply of valley and Easter lilies was seen all last week. Cosmos is not so plentiful as it has been in former years. A good frost is needed to stimulate business. In greens the supply is equal to all demands.

Growers' Meeting.

The executive committee of the St. Louis district of the National Flower Growers' Association held a meeting September 19 at the home of Iles Cole, at Springfield, Ill. The attending party visited the state fair during the day as guests of W. J. Hembreiker and Mr. Cole. Here was found much to attract, especially in Floral hall, where the local florists had staged a splendid display of plants, cut flowers and floral designs. The judge, George Asmus, of Chicago, had his hands full the four days of judging, but, as usual, he made a clean job of it, without a bit of dissatisfaction on the part of anyone. When Chairman Walter Amling called the meeting to order at 8 p. m., the following were found present: J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.; W. A. Rowe and W. J. Pilcher, Kirkwood, Mo.; Phil Daut, Decatur, Ill.; Frank Washburn, Bloomington, Ill.; James N. Cole, Peoria, Ill.; C. E. De Wever, Olivette, Mo.; L. R. Larson, Middletown, Ill., and J. J. Beneke, St. Louis.

The financial statement by the secretary showed the club's finances to be in a healthy condition.

A special prize of $100 was voted for the St. Louis fall flower show. All outstanding bills were ordered paid. Several communications from outside districts were read and filed for action at the regular meeting of the district.

Reports from the various committees were heard from the chairmen, as follows: Pot plant growers, C. E. De Wever; cut flower growers, W. J. Pilcher; retail growers, Iles Cole; auditing, James N. Cole, and purchasing, W. A. Rowe.

The next meeting of the committee will be held in St. Louis the week of November 5. The specific date is left in the hands of a committee, consisting of W. A. Rowe, W. J. Pilcher, C. E. DeWever and J. J. Beneke.

Various Notes.

The automobiles of W. A. Rowe and Louis Baumann, who motored to Springfield, Ill., September 19, met with an accident at Carlinville, Ill., when both machines were badly damaged and when Henry Blixen was hurt. Besides Mr. Blixen there were in the party W. A. Rowe, with his wife and Mrs. Rowe, Sr.; Mrs. O. C. May, Mrs. Louise Baumann, Miss V. Baumann and Mrs. Henry Blixen. Both machines were left for repairs and all, except Mr. and Mrs. Blixen, who returned to St. Louis, proceeded to Springfield by rail, after the needed treatment.

J. F. Ammann, field manager of the F. T. D., will leave October 4 for an eastern trip, including Baltimore, the meeting place of the F. T. D. He was assured that a large party from here will attend the meeting.

Mrs. E. W. Bruenig, chairman of the ladies' reception committee of the St. Louis Flower Show Association, has appointed her committee, as follows: Mrs. H. G. Berning, Mrs. F. C. Weber, Jr., Mrs. Oscar Ruff, Mrs. Edward Guntly and Mrs. O. G. Koenig. This committee will care for all the ladies attending the show.

Miss Mohler, of the Davis Floral Co., Pine Bluff, Ark., and A. F. Koehle, Mangum, Okla., were visitors last week, as guests of H. G. Berning.

Paul T. Heil has a number of good-sized weddings booked for next month and the early part of November. Mr. Heil has asked to be relieved as chairman of the decoration committee for the fall flower show; he feels that he is unable to give the task the proper attention.

A. H. MacKinzie, of Edinburgh, Scotland, landscape expert of Carter's Seeds, Ltd., arrived here last week to perfect the landscaping of the North Hills Country Club. Mr. MacKinzie has spent a number of years traveling

It is not certain that the remains of the late Adolph Brix, who died in Europe a month ago, will be brought over here for interment. Mrs. Brix, who is in Czecho-Slovakia, has not as yet decided, according to F. Plotz, the store manager.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association will hold an important meeting October 4 at 8 p. m., in the Eleven Mile House. President Thomas Kirkwood and Secretary Joseph Deutschmann say that many interesting subjects will be discussed, including the coal situation, the fall flower show and the opening of the mum season.

Oscar Ruff and Edwin Niebling, heads of the Bergstermann Floral Co., say that they are looking forward to a busy fall and winter season.

Owing to urgent business, the meetings of the executive board of the St. Louis Fall Flower Show Association and the executive board of the Flower Growers' Publicity Association, called for October 3, were changed to September 28.

William Sanders, well known in local trade circles, is the head designer for Jansen, Inc., on Delmar boulevard.

Henry G. Berning is away on a business trip through Illinois and Indiana. While away, he will talk fall flower show at every opportunity. He is one of the most active pro-show workers.

The florist bowlers enjoyed a pleasant evening September 21. The surprise of the evening was the defeat of the strong Violets by the Sweet Peas in all three games. The Daisies won two of the three games from the Carnations and the Orchids did the same to the Roses. This makes the Daisies and the Orchids tied for first place. J. J. B.

The Market.

Changeable, disagreeable weather exerted its influence on business last week. Great quantities of asters are arriving, but there is little demand. Gladioli are much improved in quality and they are plentiful. Carnations are small and short-stemmed. White roses are scarce and poor in quality. Ophelia, Columbia, Premier and Hoosier Beauty are abundant. The supply of valley is equal to the demand.

Primula obconica, begonias and potted wool flowers are the only blooming plants available.

Various Notes.

About seventy-five arbor-vitæ and other evergreen trees, varying in size from three to thirteen feet, are a great addition to the front of the New Sagamore hotel. Felix Alberts had the contract for the evergreens.

The new flower shop known as the O. K. Flower Store, which opened for business last week, reports business as good. Ferns, begonias and cut flowers are being sold.

A large shipment of Holland bulbs has been received by Hart & Vick. The bulbs are all large and in fine condition.

George Kramer has just completed dismantling the hall at Edgerton park, where the flower show was held. He is now on a business trip to Buffalo.

George Case, at the James Vick's Sons branch store on State street, reports business brisk in candidum and calla lily bulbs.

Mammoth red, yellow and bronze zinnias are being cut at the Boucher greenhouses, on Penfield road.

Thomas Sullivan, of Lyndonville, N. Y., is repairing his range of glass. He has added a new boiler. This is the establishment of George B. Hart.

Harry Merritt has begun cutting his fall crop of Delight carnations.

Florists' Club Meets.

At the meeting of the Canadian Florists' and Gardeners' Association, held last week, Thomas Manton, the well known grower and retailer, spoke on the development of horticulture. As far as the private gardener is concerned, there has been little development, but the grower has shown commendable enterprise in growing what the people want and in producing flowers which have a great blooming capacity. Three new members were admitted. Alexander Simpson gave an excellent report of the Montreal convention. It was decided to take up the report for discussion at the meeting of October 16.

J. J. Higgins has been appointed marshal of the trip to Baltimore, and many signified their intention of making the trip. There will be at least twelve from Toronto.

The treasurer's report showed a good gardener is concerned, there has been little development, but the grower has shown commendable enterprise in growing what the people want and in producing flowers which have a great blooming capacity. Three new members were admitted. Alexander Simpson gave an excellent report of the Montreal convention. It was decided to take up the report for discussion at the meeting of October 16.

F. D. Clark, president, who occupied the chair, gave an outline of his recent visit to England, France and Belgium. He was disappointed at the condition of the English parks, but found the cemeteries of France and Belgium beauty spots. R. Hayward spoke in like manner of his recent trip to England, where he found the place where he once worked overgrown with weeds and no heat in the houses. Mr. Simpson suggested that the association take steps to have a sub-section for private gardeners organized in the C. F. G. A.

Ed Uberrhein, of Medicine Hat, was a caller at the Toronto stores on his way back home after a long visit to Europe. He was accompanied by his two sons and two daughters.

Business is increasing and there is a plentiful supply of flowers. There appears to be an increase in the number of weddings, as the orders from this source are on the increase.

H. G. Dillemuth was judge at the flower show at Beaverton last week.

S. A. Frost was in Ottawa last week with Major Connon, of Hamilton; E. J. Hay, of Brockville; W. W. Gammage, of London, and F. J. McKenna, of Montreal, to interview the authorities about the sales tax and the inspection work.

the increased demand a slight rise in prices occurred. Short-stemmed Columbia roses and other varieties, which were selling the week before at $1 and $2 per hundred, jumped to $4. There were corresponding rises in the other grades. The Montreal Floral Exchange was obliged to import roses from Boston to meet the demand. Asters, gladioli and other outside flowers are becoming more scarce each day. There have been several frosts within the last few days, and soon the season for outdoor flowers will be a thing of the past.

Various Notes.

The death of Richard B. Angus, past president of the Bank of Montreal and director of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co., gave the florists an abundance of orders for funeral pieces. Through Mr. Angus' death Canada loses one of its most prominent men. He was one of the original syndicate which incorporated the Canadian Pacific Railway and was, in no small way, responsible for its great success. His work while president of the Bank of Montreal was equally brilliant.

wedding of Miss Isobel Marjorie Baillie to Frederick Ridley Beverley, which took place Wednesday, September 20, at Knox Crescent church. Campbell's, Florists, had charge of all the decorating for this wedding and many congratulations have been extended to the firm for its artistic work. The church was decorated with masses of golden-tinted chrysanthemums and oak sprays against a background of cibotium ferns. The bridal couple stood under an arch of ferns and chrysanthemums, while at the end of the guest pews were sheaves of the same flowers tied with bronze tissue. The same color scheme was carried out in the dresses of the bride's attendants, who wore chiffon in shades of burnt orange and yellow, with wreaths of autumn leaves in their hair. They all carried huge arm bouquets of shaded President E. J. Hay, of Brockville; Major Connon, of Hamilton; W. W. Gammage, of London, and S. A. Frost, of Toronto. This committee went before the representatives of the government to try to systematize the sales tax on cut flowers and potted plants. There has been a great deal of dissatisfaction over the present sales tax laws. The committee went over all phases of the situation with the government officials and the matter will soon be straightened out to the satisfaction of all. E. H. S.

CLEVELAND, O.

The Market.

Business improved slightly last week and found the market short on good stock of all kinds. There is little really good stock coming in at the present time and what little arrives is quickly taken. As long as the outdoor crop continues, the greenhouse stock is hard to move in some lines. Of course there are always a few items which are more or less scarce at present. Columbia and Premier roses, especially the long-stemmed stock, are hard to procure. Dahlias are now beginning to arrive in quantity lots, and since we have had a little cooler weather they have been keeping much better.

During the hot weather previously it was hard to move dahlias, as they were so soft that most of the trade did not care to handle them. Although there is a good demand for them, there is still considerable waste. Asters have taken a back seat for the time being, the few coming in being quite small, but a few, the forerunners of the late crop, are appearing and these are much better in quality. Some really good gladioli are now arriving and are bringing a fairly good price. The demand exceeds the supply in these.

Roses, as mentioned previously, are scarce. There is an oversupply of white roses at present, as weddings have begun to fall off slightly. Carnations are still inferior in quality. The supply has increased. Easter lilies are still scarce. Early mums have put in an appearance, but are few and far between. Garden flowers of all kinds are less plentiful than heretofore, but arrive in a large variety. The large gold and yellow marigolds continue to arrive and are moving nicely, the demand being greater than the supply.

outing of the Michell Co., held September 14. The October meeting of the club will be held at the home of Elmer J. Weaver, on the Lincoln highway. Harry K. Rohrer presided at the meeting. Two new members were elected. Prior to the meeting the party partook of a generous supply of the famous Landis watermelons, which are unexcelled.

Various Notes.

The Iris Club of Lancaster held a fall flower show September 20, which was up to the high standard maintained at its previous shows. Mrs. Albert M. Herr was in charge of the show. The contest for arranging table decorations of garden flowers with china and silver was most interesting and certainly has a direct bearing on the florists' business in general.

September 14 the following men attended the outing of the H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia: B. F. Barr, E. P. Hostetter, Charles Newbold, Monroe H. Hostetter, A. K. Rohrer, Elmer J. Weaver, J. Wade Gayley, H. K. Rohrer, L. S. Landis and R. C. Smallwood.

The sympathy of the entire trade goes out to Albert M. Herr, whose father, David K. Herr, was buried September 18.

HURON GREENHOUSES

David K. Herr was one of the pioneer florists of Lancaster county, and although he retired from active work some time ago, he always retained an active interest in all that was new floriculturally.

Christian Graff, whose greenhouses are located at Witmer, Pa., has an exceedingly fine block of carnation plants coming along. Some space is also devoted to pompons and calendulas.

Joseph Clerico, at his Monroe street greenhouses, has some of the finest mums to be seen in this vicinity and will soon be cutting choice blooms.

Elias K. Lefevre is contemplating the erection of a new greenhouse at his home on the Lincoln highway.

H. K. R.

NEWARK, N. J.

The cool weather of the last ten days has acted as a spur to the florists' business, although trade is not brisk. Fall flowers are plentiful and much cheaper than they were a year ago. This is due in part to the fact that the cost of some of the articles used by the growers has decreased a little and in part to the lack of demand up to this time for the large quantity of flowers coming into the market since September 1.

Trauth, the Florist, 474 Orange street, reports that business is picking up.

There were 400 exhibits of flowers, fruit and vegetables at the exhibit held recently in the Prudential building. All of the sixty exhibitors are employees of the Prudential Insurance Co. The exhibition of dahlias was exceptionally good. The judges were C. W. Kinsey, of South Orange; John White, Jr., of Elizabeth, N. J.; C. H. Nissley, of the state agricultural college, New Brunswick, and H. Van Nest, Plainfield, N. J.

R. B. M.

WORCESTER, MASS.

Conditions in the florists' trade in this city are the reverse of those of a month ago. All those engaged in the trade are well employed. Flowers are scarce and the demand is feverish. A slight frost gave the outdoor stock a check, and the fact that mums are a little later this year than they were previously, causes the market to be an active one for miscellaneous stock. Aconitum is at its best, and the heads are unusually fine.

The Worcester County Horticultural Society held its weekly show Thursday, September 21. Cut flowers, cosmos and celosia were shown in many varieties. The classes in each were also numerous. This society has lost another active member in Arthur J. Marble, who was a trustee and also vice-president for twenty years. This is the fourth trustee the society has lost through death since January 1, 1922.

Preparations are going forward in the installation of fixtures for another large retail florist's store here.

Several large weddings were the means of using considerable stock of late. E. A.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

Business must be good or flowers are extra scarce, as there are not enough to supply the demand. There seems to be a lack of good outdoor stock, such as asters, dahlias and cosmos. Dahlias have been especially slow in blooming this fall, and will probably get "going good" just in time to be killed by the frost.

Theodore D. Kuebler, Sr., and Selma Wissmer were married at the parsonage of St. John's Evangelical church by Reverend Dressel Thursday evening, September 21. The wedding was a complete surprise to everybody, as no announcements had been made.

Mrs. J. C. Elspermann is putting in a new Superior boiler, which was badly needed. It is large enough to heat the entire place easily. Business continues good with this firm.

The Lockyear Floral Co. had several blankets to make last week.

The Niednagels have about completed their building operations for this year. The new plant is compact and well

DISEASED CYCLAMENS.

I have sent you some cyclamen leaves, which have spots on them. The plants did all right until a week or so ago, when I moved them from one house to another, to give them stronger light. Will spraying help? G. C.—Mich.

This appears to be a fungous disease and not a sun scald. It would be advisable to give the plants a spraying with Bordeaux mixture and to repeat the application a week later. If you have a small dust sprayer, give the affected parts a dusting with sulphur and lime, four-fifths of the former to one-fifth of the latter. This has proved effective in combatting fungous diseases, both outdoors and under glass. Let the liquid spraying dry on first and later apply the dust spray. C. W.

FRENCH HYDRANGEAS.

Kindly advise me what French hydrangeas are hardy. I wish to use them for outdoor planting.
W. H. T.—N. J.

While the French hydrangeas have been successfully wintered outside as far north as Massachusetts, they cannot be classed as dependable, and to achieve success with them the plants should be either buried outdoors or lifted and stored in a cold cellar over winter.

A Horticultural Library In Six Volumes

The Review is able to announce that it is in position to make immediate shipment of

BAILEY'S STANDARD

Cyclopedia of Horticulture

at a new low price. The last printing was sold out at $48.00 the set of 6 volumes—a very reasonable price considering war-time costs of printing. Now a new printing has been made and the publishers authorize The Review to give its readers the benefit of the saving made in recent competitive conditions in the book-making trades in the East. This means a new price of $40.00 per set for the CYCLOPEDIA—a saving of $8.00 per set.

Send Your Orders Now—Delivery by First Express, Prepaid

REMEMBER—BAILEY'S STANDARD CYCLOPEDIA OF HORTICULTURE is in 6 large volumes, over 3,000 pages. It is authority in all matters of plant names and spellings. Besides the purely botanical matter one would expect to find in such a work, there are many hundreds of cultural articles, chapters on insects, diseases, remedies, etc.—a veritable horticultural library, all carefully and completely indexed.

Don't Forget It

Confidence is a firm's best asset and it certainly applies to our business in a very large degree.

We can say, however, without fear of contradiction, that no one has ever felt that their confidence was misplaced when they consigned their flowers to us. Consign that next shipment to us and acquaint yourself with our service.

Special opportunity for a couple of good Rose Growers who are looking for best returns. Our present demand is greater than our supply.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

There was such a demand all last week that the market was cleaned. Retailers rushed around after anything they could get. They were not particular; anything in flowers would do. Saturday afternoon, September 23, their calls were in vain. There was nothing left on the market. Stock has shortened as the demand has increased. Roses are most plentiful and they are of good quality; they are selling from $4 to $10 per hundred. Asters are not so good. They are about done for the season. Only a few home-grown gladioli remain. Carnations will not be worth cutting for about two weeks.

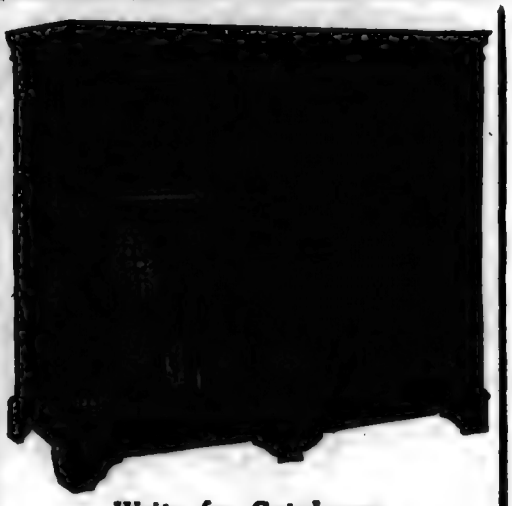
Florists' Club Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Florists' Club was held Wednesday, September 20, at 8 p. m. Glenn K. Parker, secretary, read letters from S. S. Pennock and John Young, secretary of the New York Florists' Club, in which the writers thanked those in Kansas City for courtesies extended at the annual convention of the S. A. F. Mr. Young wrote in behalf of the New York Florists' Club. A letter was read from Secretary L. V. Vinson regarding the action of the Ohio district of the National Flower Growers' Association in reference to the grading of cut flowers and the plan proposed was read and discussed.

On motion of William L. Rock, T. J. Noll, president of the club, appointed John Stevens, grower; T. J. Noll, wholesaler, and Samuel Murray, retailer, to consider the matter of grading flowers, as suggested by Mr. Vinson. This committee will report to the club and the growers' association. The matter was considered one of importance to the three branches of the industry. Letters were also read from William Stuart, secretary and treasurer of the Potato Association of America; L. E. Hitz, of Madison, Ind.; Mrs. T. A. Moseley, Kansas City, Kan.; W. Porter Fones, secretary of the Rotary Club of Kansas City; Mrs. W. H. Oberg and Harold M. Joy, Nashville, Tenn., and V. E. Martin, Fort Worth, Tex. All of these communications related to the success of the recent S. A. F. convention. Mrs. T. A. Moseley announced that she had arranged with the city council of Kansas City, Kan., to have one of the slogan boards placed near the inter-city viaduct.

The election of officers resulted in the following executives for the coming year: President, William J. Barnes; vice-president, C. A. Chandler; secretary, Mrs. W. E. Williams; treasurer, Robert Fields. Mr. Barnes was called upon for a speech, but he said that he would not say much until he assumed his new duties. He made a motion that a vote of thanks be given the retiring officers. This was unanimously carried. The officers who have so efficiently served the last year are: President, T. J. Noll; vice-president, M. E. Carter; secretary, Glenn K. Parker; treasurer, L. R. Bohannon. Mr. Noll was president of the club since its organization, two years ago.

Resolutions were read by B. S. Brown, chairman of the resolutions committee, thanking William L. Rock and all the committees concerned for the great success of the S. A. F. convention and extending thanks to the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce and other organizations for the success of the convention.



Various Notes.

Mrs. Ella Collins, 79 years old, died Friday, September 15. She had been a resident of Kansas City for many years and was active in Catholic church and charitable work. She is survived by two daughters, Miss Ella Collins, bookkeeper for the Alpha Floral Co., and Miss Lizzie Collins.

William Miller's new shop is in operation. He has an extremely attractive window and a store that lives up to Mr. Miller's reputation as a florist. The icebox and all of the interior woodwork is of Circassian walnut. The walls are painted a soft, creamy shade. Rose-shaded floor lamps and a walnut desk and chair are among the furnishings. The Market.

Last week the demand almost exceeded the supply for all cut flowers. Wholesalers in some cases were compelled to turn down orders. Roses are of exceptionally fine quality at this time. The varieties arriving are Columbia, Priscilla, White Ophelia, Ophelia, Crusader, Premier and Ward. Yellow mums were in the market last week and were disposed of quickly. The demand for valley exceeded the supply.

Asters were much in demand last week, as well as carnations. The quality of carna ions is improving each week. Dahlias have made their appearance; the demand for them is limited.

Various Notes.

T. P. Langhans, secretary of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., has returned from a several weeks' stay in Atlantic City.

The McClements Co. has added a new Dodge truck to its equipment.

Alex S. Sawyer, representative of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. in Ohio and Michigan, was in the city last week.

The Zieger Co. had a decoration at the Pittsburgh business show, which was held last week at the Motor Square garden.

The E. A. Williams Co. reports a busy week. Harvey Sheaf, manager of this company, has been east the last week.

While G. P. Weaklen & Co. have been in their new location for several months, they are not quite through with painting and decorating; however, it is expected that these alterations will be completed for the formal opening, to be held the early part of October.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Seattle, Wash.—J. A. Boyce Seed Co., which already handles garden and field seeds, bulbs, nursery stock, poultry supplies, fertilizers, insecticides and garden tools, is preparing to put in a stock of florists' supplies.

Pomona, Cal.—Lawrence N. Pollock has succeeded M. K. Zimmer as proprietor of the Pomona Floral Co., conducting the store at 283 North Garey avenue. The address of Mr. Zimmer is 1419 East Fifth street, Pomona.

Lodi, Cal.—M. Reynolds, who trades as the Lodi Flower Store, is preparing to remove, about October 15, to a new room in the Cory block, on School street, where everything will be spick-and-span. Mr. Reynolds also operates Pratt's Floral Nursery, at 347 East Elm street. He bought the nursery over six years ago, but still uses the old name for it.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

After several of the hottest days in the year and temperatures that topped all records since 1913, the weather cooled off suddenly last week. In the wholesale houses the difference was felt at once, shipping orders arriving more rapidly than at any time since May. Local retailers showed a better disposition to buy.

Funeral work has kept up, but transient business and box trade has been slack. Stock has been injured by the hot weather, especially dahlias and gladioli, but an improvement may be looked for now. Indoor roses are still below par and the recent hot spurt did not improve matters any. Those hot weather favorites, zinnias, seemed to revel in the heat and are among the showiest offerings now.

The plants offered now are indeed poor in quality. A kind of curb market at the Japanese market reveals a few plants of various kinds, but nothing good. In the exchange some good crotons are offered, but nothing in the way of flowering plants.

Greens are now abundant and good, the local maidenhair being especially fine.

Various Notes.

Fred H. Howard, of Howard & Smith; his brother, Edward, and a party of friends are in Oregon on a fishing trip.

L. Lecluse says that business is improving at the store, on the west side.

George Eischen reports that roses and valley are in particularly good demand. He has also some excellent mums from the north, which he handles at his store on Wall street.

Dan Stathatos, proprietor of the Broadway Florist, is going to open a store at San Pedro in the near future. Business is good, especially in funeral work. J. D'Ortignac has again joined the staff here.

At the store of the E. C. Amling Co. excellent rose stock continues to arrive from the range of Amling Bros., at Santa Ana.

Harry Cohn is now on the road for this firm and he reports a good trip to San Diego, where George F. Otto & Son are building a fine new store.

S. Murata is back from his northern trip, which he greatly enjoyed. He speaks highly of the scenery in and about Yosemite. Business has been good in his absence and continues so.

C. Gutting, of the Superior Dahlia Gardens, is offering fine crotons. The dahlia gardens on Figueroa street are a beautiful sight.

Paul Miller, of the California Floral Co., says there is a great improvement both in local and shipping business.

Andrew Bruce is making out well at the Alexandria Florist; both store and icebox look fine. Everything is neat and well displayed here.

E. Schaefer, of Schaefer's Nursery, on Figueroa street, has certainly developed a fine stock of plants for his fall trade. He specializes in 2-inch stock and has this in great variety and large numbers. Although some retail trade is done here, most of the stock goes to other nurserymen and landscape gardeners.

At the store of Walter Armacost & Co. the fall business has fairly commenced. Manager Williamson and his able staff are all busy with shipping orders.

Friends of William Parkinson, of Darling's Shop, will be glad to hear that in all probability he will recover from the attack of lockjaw which followed an injury to his hand recently. So seriously ill was he last week that little hope for his recovery was entertained, but as John Gordon, manager here, says, "it was a miracle." Both Mr. Gordon and Mr. Darling were indeed worried about it last week, and the relief is great, as Mr. Parkinson is a favorite with all. H. R. B.

The Market.

Asters had entirely disappeared from the market last week. Dahlias were still in evidence, especially the pompon dahlias, and there were fairly good crops of gladioli, gypsophila, cut cyclamens, larkspur, gillyflowers, marigolds and snapdragons. Fresh strawflowers were plentiful. Chrysanthemums were seen in abundance and of good quality. The varieties shown extensively included Chrysolora, Monrovia, Oconto, Unaka, Bright Rose and October Frost. It was stated that Chieftain, Bonnaffon and

"Let's Take a Little Walk Around The Place"

That's what we said to a customer the other day. He wanted to know what the prospects were for this season's supply.

We wish that you could all have been along. We started out through the pot plant section. First thing that he noticed was fifteen or twenty thousand Adiantum Hybridum and dish ferns ready to sell now, but will be all the better by Christmas. The packers were sending out shipments of four and five-inch Cyclamens for growing on. He liked the looks of them. He liked the way we were packing them. He couldn't help it.

From there we saw the tens of thousands of plants in pots for winter flowering. He confessed that he had been trying to grow some himself, but, "never again."

We found the Roses all rested and pruned, ready for winter. We are cutting about five thousand a day now and will cut double that number as soon as the Chrysanthemums are over.

By the way, Chrysanthemums promise to be extra good this year. It has been too hot for long distance shipping so far, but we expect to start next week.

The Plumosus is fast recovering from the effects of last winter's freeze. We found the plants looking very clean and healthy, but the spring and summer growth has been far from satisfactory.

Greens will be scarce in February and March, but, as usual, we will have the best and biggest supply.

This has been a good year on Heather. The four and five-inch for making up are the most profitable sizes. We have them in immense quantities. Our visitor could not help but remark about the fine green color of the foliage and how heavy set with buds all the plants were.

Of course, we looked over the young rose stock, the Orchid houses, the Lily of the Valley, and spent some time in the Saw Mill and the new Garage. Altogether we had a very nice visit, and by the time we had eaten a handful of figs, and a few peaches, our visitor was convinced that Armacost & Company was not only a pleasant place to visit, but a mighty good place to tie up to for the year's business. Sorry that you were not along—you would have thought so, too. Keep in touch with—some of the other leading shipping varieties would be ready for the market about October 1. The pompon and other smaller varieties of chrysanthemums were expected to be plentiful about the same date. Last week there were practically no pompon mums in the market, but they were stated to be coming along splendidly. Growers were beginning to cut roses, but the good rose stock was scarce and in large demand. Gardenias were a little more plentiful, but orchids were still somewhat scarce.

Dahlia Show.

Every foot of space was taken up by exhibits in the Ivory room of the Hotel Oakland when the Alameda County Floral Society held its fourth annual dahlia exhibit, September 18 and 19. The premium list had been arranged with the idea of stimulating competition among central California dahlia growers, and dahlia fans were much pleased at the good showing made. In the professional class, Carl Salbach won first prize for the best display arranged for general effect; Miss Aimee Hodgens carried off most of the prizes for flat work in various collections of different dahlias. The prize for the best collection showing twenty-five blooms of one kind of dahlia was won by the Star Dahlia Garden; J. W. Davis, past president of the Dahlia Society of California, won the prize in this class for twelve blooms, as well as the award for the best 1922 seedlings and also for the best established seedlings.

Probably the class that aroused most interest was that for the best collection of dahlias originated in California. The awards in this class were J. W. Davis, first; Miss Aimee Hodgens, second; Mrs. Jessie Seal, third. The display of the San Quentin prison also aroused interest in the entries made by societies and institutions. San Quentin won first prize for the best general display, arranged for effect, as well as another prize. The Alameda County Infirmary was another institution that entered a large display.

One of the professional exhibitors who carried off many prizes, Mrs. Edna Spencer, of Alameda, was among the most successful. Others who won numerous awards were J. H. Davis, Carl Salbach, R. McWhirter, Mrs. Jessie Seal, Hartstone & Burns, the Oakland Dahlia Gardens and others. Arthur Worsfeld, of Alma, made a fine complimentary exhibit. The show was ably managed by A. F. Shulte, assisted by Mrs. J. A. Scannavino and Mrs. R. H. Gray. The attendance was large.

Various Notes.

General A. J. Gooch, of Darbee's, has taken up with the American Express Co. the question of putting on a special refrigerator car from this city to New Orleans, for All Saints' day. Judging from orders booked with some of the San Francisco firms, it looks as if a consignment could be secured for the car. The firm is busy with strawflowers.

Frank D. Pelicano, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., has just received a post card from H. Plath which runs: "Am on the Rhine, and drink fine wine. Wish you were here."

P. V. Matraia, of the Art Floral Co., has bought the concession for shipping from the San Francisco Coöperative Flower Market.

stating that it was a "spirit plant." He said that it had been left there by the captain of a well-known liner on the New Zealand-Australia run who had brought it from the antipodes. Mr. Lichtenstein assured his friends that he and the captain had sampled the contents of several of the pods and found that the liquid contained therein had a genuine old-time kick. When the captain took the plant away to the friend for whom he had brought it, he promised to bring several more for the Terminal Florist on his next run.

C. Rosaia, the Seattle florist, is in town calling on the trade.

J. A. Axell is handling large quantities of chrysanthemums. He is especially busy on Tuesdays and Fridays, when the refrigerator car leaves. Speaking of the chrysanthemum crop, Mr. Axell expressed the belief that for the next six weeks there will be plenty of mums for everyone. Mr. Axell's staff is taxed to capacity to fill orders, especially on refrigerator car days.

Florists are getting up early to grab the good roses these days, according to P. D. Mortensen, of E. W. McLellan Co. This firm is cutting from some of its houses, and is also handling some fine woodwardia ferns, in addition to its chrysanthemum business.

R. Coombs, successor to the C. Kooyman Co., is making a good showing of cut and potted flowers. F. W. Davis, manager, stated that they have arranged with H. Hayashi & Co., of Oakland, to handle that firm's potted and flowering plants.

Enomoto & Co. report that their chrysanthemum business is now heavy. They are handling Oconto, Chrysolora and Unaka, but the pompon and other small chrysanthemums, including the canary variety, will not be ready for shipment until about October 1. Chieftain and Bonnaffon will also be ready to cut on that date. They are already booking satisfactory orders for All Saints' day from New Orleans.

"Business is going along well in chrysanthemums and they are in fine condition," was the report given out by Domoto Bros. Domoto Bros. think that this will be a fine season for mums, as the stock is good and plentiful and the demand satisfactory.

H. K. Tanaka, of the United States Flower & Supply Co., stated that the firm has been obliged to fall behind on its shipments of strawflowers, owing to the heavy demand. Now, however, the firm has dried a large amount of stock and is in a position to take care of all its orders. Many orders for strawflowers have been received from New Orleans for October 31, and the firm is ready to send any amount.

Mrs. Copeland, of the Misses Hannon Flower Store, is featuring her stock of oriental pods by using little Chinese figures and other oriental art objects in a window display.

Joseph's is busy with bon voyage baskets, both for departing steamships and overland trains, chiefly the former. Special orders were sent in for the private car of Mrs. William Howard Taft, who is a dahlia lover, and gave a special prize to the recent dahlia show of the California Dahlia Society.

Angelo Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., is in southern California in the interests of the California industries exposition, of which he is president. N. Canavero, of this firm, and Mrs. Canavero are taking a motor trip in Calaveras county.

F. C. Jaeger & Son state that they have been busy shipping strawflowers and that orders continue to come in. They report brisk retail business, with increased shipping orders.

Manuel Russell, one of the old-time members of Podesta & Baldocchi's staff, celebrated his return from a vacation on the Russian river by entering the annual race over the Dipsea trail and coming in tenth. This speaks well for the healthfulness of the florists' business, for Mr. Russell is 49 years of age, and the Dipsea trail is supposed to be about the hardest eight miles of moun-

The staff of the Charles C. Navlet Co. is still busy getting the bulbous stock in shape. Bulbs are coming in right along and it is stated that by getting a few of the American bulbs in early, considerable business is obtained. Many tourists leaving for the east and oriental points buy bulbs to take with them. Many purchasers prefer to buy at the store rather than order from catalogue. Even if the flowers of those especial bulbs are not on display, there are large, colored pictures of the blooms which cannot be put in a catalogue. Many orders, however, have been obtained by displaying the flowers. The firm expects a large shipment of Holland bulbs via the Panama canal about October 15.

Brown & Kennedy are keeping busy with weddings. For some reason, September continues to be an unusual wedding month. M. M.

The Market.

Dahlias are the most plentiful item on the market at the present time. There have been heavy cuts and numerous showings of blooms, with the idea of securing orders on bulbs for delivery in the spring. Gladioli are still plentiful. Some fine rubrum lilies are being shown.

The cut of roses could stand an increase without crowding the trade. There is sufficient demand to care easily for all the cut in sight. Orchids are scarce. The unusual number of fall weddings has led to an increased demand for these flowers. Among the smaller flowers, asters and marigolds are most common, while the carnation crop is not up to normal.

Various Notes.

At the invitation of Bert Conlee, newly named director of Bellingham's Tulip Festival, several members of the trade made the trip to Bellingham,

(Concluded on page 140.)

PORTLAND, ORE.

The weather was abnormally hot here the first part of September. Many outdoor flowers are coming in. Gladioli are still arriving, but the spikes are small. Chrysanthemums are showing up. Golden Glow and October Frost are coming in from the local growers, and are of fair quality. Chrysolora is arriving from California. Taking the market all the way through, the supply is greater than the demand, and no one suffers from a lack of stock.

E. P. Zeman, of the Park Floral Co., Denver Colo., was a visitor here last week.

E. A. Aldrich, representative of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, Pa., has returned from a business trip, which covered the Rocky mountain and Pacific coast states.

two weeks on a deer hunting trip in southern Oregon.

The Wilson-Crout-Gehr Co. is making some improvements, rebuilding one of its greenhouses. This firm has been cutting some Golden Glow mums for the last ten days.

Arrangements were made by J. Forbes and Fred A. Van Kirk to have several large plant and cut flower exhibits at the annual state fair at Salem, Ore., which was held September 26 to 30.

The Oregon Florists' Club visited the state fair in a body Thursday, September 28.

Several members of the Oregon Florists' Club are participating in the bowling team and are practicing once a week to meet their old friends from Seattle and Tacoma later in the season.

Several large shipments of Dutch bulbs are arriving in this city and will keep the growers busy to have them planted in time. N. V. H.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Alexander Forbes, Newark, N. J.; secretary, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

MOST of the American bulb jobbers are absorbing the increased duties on bulb imports received after September 21.

H. G. HASTINGS, of H. G. Hastings & Co., Atlanta, Ga., has been made a director of the Whitehall street branch of the Citizens' & Southern bank.

PARAGRAPHS from the new tariff law which affect the seed trade are quoted on page 28 of this issue. A tabular comparison of new and old rates of duty appeared in The Review of September 14.

A. W. MACKINZIE, of Edinburgh, Scotland, and of Carter's Tested Seeds, Ltd., London, England, is at St. Louis supervising the landscape work on the golf course of the North Hills Country Club. Mr. MacKinzie is a specialist in this line.

To increase the interest in the growing of bulbous flowers in its town, the Williams Seed Co., Norfolk, Va., announces a contest in which it will give $100 in prizes for the best flower gardens produced from the company's bulbs planted this fall. Contestants are required to purchase at least $5 worth of bulbs from the company and to enter their names at the time of placing orders. Members of the Garden Club of Norfolk will act as judges.

EARL E. MAY, president of the May Seed & Nursery Co., Shenandoah, Ia., states that fall trade has been quite active this year. Alfalfa business was good, and the company is having a quite substantial call for peonies and fall bulbs. Of the new clover, Hubam, Mr. May says the company will have about the same acreage as a year ago, but he does not believe the yield per acre will be so good as last year, as the season did not seem to be quite right for a heavy yield in crop.

"IN checking up those who are willing to pay for Lilium giganteum at the present prices," remarked President R. B. Howe, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, "it is interesting to note how the progressive florists, mostly in the larger cities, who follow the trade papers and realize the market conditions, are taking their orders as booked, while those who are not so well informed almost invariably ask us to cancel, although, from our viewpoint, we believe the small town florist who sells direct to his customer has a greater opportunity to realize on his money than has the large grower in the larger cities."

IN their preliminary price list for the season 1922-1923, Sluis Bros., Enkhuizen, Holland, state, in introduction, that the year 1922 is expected to produce the smallest crop of seed known in several years. After explaining that last winter was extraordinarily severe in practically all the seed-producing countries, causing destruction to most biennial crops, the firm goes on to say, "The growing season this year has been rather unfavorable. We had a cold and late spring; the early summer months were dry and hot, and crops made little growth, and since that time we have had too much rain and too little warmth. Due to these facts, most crops are late, and the yield will probably be disappointing. These adverse conditions, combined with the fact that the acreage of most seeds has

SEEDS HAVE PRIORITY.

As a result of the efforts of the officers of the seed trade associations, the Interstate Commerce Commission September 19 issued an order directing all railroads east of the Mississippi river, including the west bank crossings thereof, to give preferential shipment, over all other commodities, of several important commodities, including fertilizers and seeds. This priority order was effective at midnight, September 20.

BULBS FROM ROTTERDAM.

There was a rush last week to get Dutch bulbs into port in time to avoid the payment of the higher duties under the new tariff laws. GLADIOLUS NOVELTIES

Mostly all of our own raising, including our new Gladiolus Maiden's Blush, of which the Florists' Review writes as follows:

Gladiolus Maiden's Blush originated with J. J. Grullemans & Sons of Lisse, Holland, being one of a number of Primulinus hybrids of pronounced early flowering habit. The color of this beautiful variety is of a most attractive shade of light pink and some good judges think Maiden's Blush will become one of the most widely grown and popular varieties, when it is well known.

It is said that this variety will force in the greenhouse in seven weeks.

In a former number the Florists' Review said: Maiden's Blush has taken better on the Chicago market than any other Gladiolus ever did.

We offer to the trade, as follows:

	Per 1000
Prim. Maiden's Blush, size ¼-1¼ inch	$20.00
Apricot, apricot shaded orange	30.00
Ada, satiny white, pink blotch inside	30.00

L'Or d'Australie, tall slender stems with deep golden yellow flowers	30.00
Orange Brilliant, a further description is not needed, the name itself is quite sufficient. On the Hague Show a basket filled obtained the Gold medal of the Bulb-growers' Association	20.00
Rose Luisante. A magnificent Primulinus of the same colors as Tulip Rose Luisante, which always is in great demand. Splendid variety for shop-sale, highly recommended	$60.00
Sunrise, light yellow, shaded orange, fringed	30.00

sowing of small seeds until rain falls. The acreage of turnips will be much smaller than usual.

The Griffith & Turner Co., Baltimore, Md., while primarily catering to a large agricultural clientele, is in close touch and sympathy with the local florists, and will extend a hearty welcome to the members of the F. T. D. when they visit this city in October.

"Thank you in advance for giving our signature prompt protection, but how could one possibly delay doing the necessary thing when so cajoled?" inquired Harry E. Chaapel, of the Chaapel Seed Store, Williamsport, Pa., "especially at this time, when it is for a consignment of spinach seed, a scarce item on the market." Although the retailer is heartily in sympathy with the method of publicity adopted by the wholesale seed trade, attention is called to the fact that he, through the many avenues by which propaganda is disseminated, incurs an expense that is purely local and borne only by himself. One of the best seasons on record is believed to be the result of special effort along publicity lines.

This is the time when a visit to one's former patrons pays, following the summer clean-up. A friendly chat prepares the way for future business. There is nothing like talking over the situation right on the spot, according to Ray Boyce, of the Binghamton Seed Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for many years a representative of the Landreth Seed Co.

I. S. Mathews' Sons, Binghamton, N. Y., opine that the fall seeding will fully equal the average. Much rain has fallen in this locality throughout the spring and summer, and as a result the army of bugs was a negligible quantity. W. M.

D. Hill Nursery Co., Inc., Dundee, Ill.—"Hill's Wholesale Florists' Catalogue of Choice Evergreens and General Nursery Stock," a compactly but clearly printed book of twenty-eight pages, with concise, lucid descriptions. Evergreens, of course, are the Hill specialty, and comprise numerous sorts and sizes, from dwarf and feathery to tall and rugged, to serve the various purposes for which evergreens are adaptable. In deciduous stock, some good-sized, transplanted shrubs are listed, but the bulk of the stock in this department consists of small shrubs and trees for lining out. Small evergreen seedlings, for bedding or lining out, also are offered.

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

REPORT of the death of John T. Lorett, Little Silver, N. J., appears on the obituary page.

FIRE completely destroyed the packing sheds of the Cash Nurseries, Sebastopol, Cal., September 3.

PARAGRAPHS from the new tariff law which affect the nursery trade are quoted on page 28 of this issue.

THE Greenville Nursery Co., of Greenville, N. C., has opened a branch at Spartanburg, S. C., to be known as the Spartanburg Nursery Co. The officers of the newly formed company are as follows: President, A. B. Calvert; secretary-treasurer, C. O. Allen; resident manager, Claude Miller.

A VOLUNTARY petition in bankruptcy was filed in the United States district court Wednesday, September 13, by John A. Hodgdon, 23 Grove street, Cliftondale, Mass., doing business as the Hub Nursery & Seed Co., Cliftondale. The liabilities are fixed as $5,216, while the assets amount to $264.

THE certificate of incorporation of the Ahrenstedt Nurseries, White Plains, N. Y., to carry on the business of growing, cultivating and dealing in flowers, seeds, trees, bulbs, etc., has been filed in the office of the county clerk, Westchester county. The company will have a capital stock of $10,000. The incorporators are Herman Ahrenstedt, White Plains, N. Y.; Charles L. Bartels, Bronx, N. Y.; John F. Devine, Brooklyn, N. Y.

ACCORDING to E. M. Sherman, president of the Sherman Nursery Co., Charles City, Ia., nursery stock in that section of the country has made a most satisfactory growth this season and stands are usually good. Financial conditions are materially improved throughout the west, and the firm is looking for an unusually good trade for another year. "We shall have an especially fine block of apple, native plum, Hansen's hybrids and Compass to offer to the trade this year," says Mr. Sherman. "We are also well stocked in currant and some lines of ornamental shrubs. Evergreens, however, are our long suit, and we are glad to report that we shall have an unusually large stock of these of fine quality for another season's trade."

TREE PLANTING WEEK.

Every nurseryman should boost Tree Planting week. If you are not familiar with plans for it, read this explanation of the week and its aims included in his "Plan to Plant Another Tree" column by J. A. Young, Aurora, Ill.:

"October 27 to November 3 is to be Tree Planting week. October 27 has been designated as Arbor day. There are many reasons why one day is not sufficient time in which to do the necessary tree planting. That is the reason why the week has been selected. During this week chambers of commerce and other civic clubs should plant memory trees, memorial parks, birthday trees and, in fact, all plantings of a public character. This is the time when individual planting should be done. A tree should be planted for each member of the family. A happy occasion can be made in every household in America. It could be made a home-coming event, when father, mother and all the children should gather on the home grounds and plant a tree for each one of the family—a tree for John, a tree for Mary, and even a tree named for the baby.

"It must be borne in mind that planting week will be successful when the proper planning is done. Chambers of commerce and other civic clubs should now plan for the planting which is to be done October 27 to November 3. Now is the time to get committees appointed, put on a "buy a tree" campaign, and be all ready to plant the memory avenues, memory groves and memory parks during the Tree Planting week. This is also the time for father and mother to hold council as to the kinds of trees to be planted for each member of the family. Let us plan now and successfully plant October 27 to November 3."

SOUTHERN NURSERYMEN.

Pass Resolutions at Lexington.

As reported in last week's issue of The Review under the heading "Southern Nurserymen Meet," the Southern Nurserymen's Association, in convention at Lexington, Ky., September 14 and 15, passed a number of important resolutions which are aimed particularly to secure closer coöperation between the American Association of Nurserymen and various sectional and state organizations. The resolutions passed by the association in this connection are as follows:

Resolved, that the Southern Nurserymen's Association identify itself with the American Association of Nurserymen, agreeing to a plan of appointing committeemen of the association to work with the American Association of Nurserymen and furthermore to carry on the letterheads and all literature published by the association these words: "Affiliated with the American Association of Nurserymen," and be it further

Resolved, that the secretary of the Southern Nurserymen's Association be instructed to send a copy of this resolution to the secretaries of the other district associations and to those of all state associations, with a request that the subject be brought up at their next regular meeting, and be it further

Resolved, that every member of this association use his every effort to secure new members for this and the American Association of Nurserymen.

These resolutions were drawn up by John Fraser, Paul C. Lindley and Ralph T. Olcott, who prepared the other resolutions, adopted at the convention's close, in memory of departed fellow members and in appreciation of those who made the meeting so marked a success.

BROAD-LEAVED EVERGREENS.

In Southern Landscape Gardening.

It is obvious that a region of heavy snowfall produces no broad-leaved evergreen trees. It is in the south that we find the various live oaks, the magnolias called "bull bay" and "swamp bay," the persecas or mahogany bays, the evergreen cherry, the osmanthus or wild olive, the Cliftonia or titi, the hollies—the one so commonly used for Christmas greens everywhere, the yaupon and dahoon holly—also the palms and bamboos, as well as a host of evergreen shrubs and vines. The north has none of these trees and comparatively few broad-leaved evergreen shrubs, which it must use in particular locations, and these we use also in the south—the boxwoods, some hollies and laurels and thorns, rhododendrons, kalmias, azaleas, andromedas, yews, climbing evonymus and periwinkle. Nevertheless, our nurserymen have, until recently, found it more convenient to follow the traditions of the north, and landscape men have generally brought their planting lists down with them—lists mostly deciduous. But today there are several cities of the south which show many fine examples of what broad-leaved evergreens will do.

Summer and Winter Decoratives.

The broad-leaved evergreens have all the pleasing virtues of color and grace in the summer landscape to be found in their deciduous neighbors, and in the winter, whether covered with vivid berries or only glossy leaves, they alone are glad to be alive. Nevertheless, to the famous "man in the street" and his wife, the word "evergreen" recalls graveyard, pressed cedar, juniper, spruce—said juniper or spruce meaning any and every coniferous evergreen. Therefore, when you propose to gladden their home grounds with evergreens, you have undertaken some preaching, for though they are familiar with the flowers of the magnolia, the oleander and the jasmines, they do not believe that any evergreen shrub will bloom during the summer and stay green in the winter. But the sober John Brown fact is that we have a most delightful embarrassment of riches right here, and the ambitious young landscape architect who strives to dumfound and satisfy his equally ambitious client can find enough diverse varieties among the broad-leaved evergreens to make of the ordinary home grounds a squirming, restless omnium-gatherum that will stump all friends of the proud owner.

Paper on "Broad-leaved Evergreens of the South," by L. M. Jenney, manager of the United States Nursery Co., Roseacres, Miss., delivered before the members of the Southern Nurserymen's Association in convention at Lexington, Ky., September 14 and 15.

WHOLESALE GROWERS OF Pot Plants
Second and Bristol Sts., Philadelphia, Pa.

There are several varieties which bloom till winter. In fact, his only disappointment will be that he has no evergreen Lombardy poplar, no evergreen purple plum and no evergreen weeping and wailing mulberry.

Aside from these wants, the broad-leaved evergreens give us all possible varieties of line, color and texture, of style and æsthetic suggestion, and in addition, an endless array of blooms and berries every month in the year. And the wants noted above can be supplied by the conifers. But we do need some dwarf varieties of broad-leaved evergreens that are thrifty growers and good bloomers—a dwarf abelia, some still dwarfer ligustrums, a dwarfer elæagnus. By thrifty grower I mean a plant which grows rapidly in its earlier years. You will appreciate this point by comparing the rapid privets with their slow relative, the common lilac. We need some dwarf shrubs for that great majority of limited home grounds in our towns and cities.

Including Deciduous Plants.

In passing, I mention that I am not wishing to exclude deciduous landscape plants; they are indispensable in their time and place, and we wish only that some of them were evergreen. They are less expensive, more available and universal, and on extensive grounds they should be largely associated with natural deciduous growth.

The broad-leaved evergreens are less familiarly known and for limited grounds, seen every day in the year, infinitely more desirable, for they are always waiting to receive you with flowers in bloom or branches in green. Among the trees are the many live oaks, American and Japanese, of different styles, which are good from Memphis to New Orleans, the magnolias and other bays, many kinds of holly, osmanthus, cherry, ligustrum and elæagnus. Some of the dwarfer trees are most useful in shrub form, and wherever we have space, it is always desirable to grow some trees, even oaks and magnolias, with branches sweeping the ground. Some of these evergreens can be grown as pyramidals and standards for formal use. There are many of the broad-leaved evergreens too tender for the upper south; the camphor, the noble and regal laurel, tea olive, loquat, laurestinus, pittosporum, oleander, camellia, myrtle and many others. The heather family as a whole will not endure limestone soil. But there is a host of hardy and adaptable broad-leaves; and in this list I would include cephalotaxus and the yew in its differing forms, from pyramidal to prostrate, which furnish foliage textures approaching the conifers.

There are many sorts which will endure adverse conditions of soil and extreme drought, such as elæagnus, evonymus, sophora, sumac, Italian jasmine, nandina, barberry, mahonia and the ligustrums as a class. All these do best with good drainage and moisture, but in Texas and some other sections, drought and extreme sun are often the controlling factors in planting. The mention of Texas brings up the fact that the whole southwest and California offer another field rich in native broad-leaved evergreens.

Ground Covers.

After the shrubs, we have for ground cover Japanese spurge and honeysuckle, many roses, English ivy and the periwinkles. The English ivy and evonymus vine are excellent for covering tree trunks and walls, and in the lower south, the creeping fig. For trellises the jasmine and Jackson vine are delightful. Almost any evergreen tree or shrub may be used for hedge, and on wire the Japanese honeysuckle and the Cherokee and McCartney roses make good hedges.

Among the more recent broad-leaved evergreen shrubs, a dwarf elæagnus, some dwarf privets and loniceras, some viburnums and hollies are invaluable; but the broad-leaf field is new and there is no place in the entire south where even an approximately complete representation of broad-leaved evergreens can be found. The most commonly used at present are the abelias, aucuba, the various sorts of buxus and evonymus, the many sorts of ligustrum, elæagnus, gardenia, hypericum, ilex, laurocerasus and magnolia in variety, the mahonia, the varieties of photinia, jasmine, osmanthus, pyracantha and quercus. Though not included among the broad-leaved evergreens, the palms, bamboos, yuccas and evergreen grasses furnish a wealth of desirable material extremely valuable, which will be used more generally and extensively as planting advances in the south. Also, many evergreens are listed among our hardy perennials, such as iberis, helianthemum and galax.

greens as a whole is comparatively recent and we expect great additions to our present list, made by discovery at home and abroad, by hybridization and mutation but at present we are not using as we should the wealth of evergreen plants already at hand, both those indigenous to the south and those imported and available in nurseries.

There is no one thing that can so much improve and make southern homes so enjoyable as the correct planting of broad-leaved evergreens. There is no other factor in landscape planting so advantageous to our section, and it is extremely fortunate for the south that it is richer in these superlative plants than any other part of the United States.

PAINESVILLE, O.

With the dawn of the fall shipping season at hand, nurserymen in this section are making preparations for what is hoped to be a heavy trade. The weather has been extremely hot and dry. Rain and an occasional frost will be welcomed; they will be the means of starting the season in full blast.

Claude Reynolds, of Mentor, O., has finished planting a field of 40,000 peonies in choice varieties.

T. R. Norman & Sons are to have a sales nursery at Cleveland, O., on Euclid avenue. Mr. Norman intends to have a supply of all stock grown at his nurseries and will book orders.

George Martin began to ship delphiniums last week. Mr. Martin reports business as good.

California privet in the larger sizes is not plentiful, and before the fall season is over it will be on the scarce list.

James York and his partner, Grayton Sweet, are out on the road selling nursery stock.

Never before has there been such keen interest in the nursery business as there is at the present time. Competition seems to have stimulated ambition

A wise business man figures costs by the year, right down the line, and especially so if his business has to do with greenhouses. He knows, either by experience or from a close study of the subject, that the only businesslike method of determining material costs in greenhouse building is by the year—first cost and up-keep cost.

CYPRESS, "the wood eternal" for greenhouse construction, is positively the cheapest wood to use, figured by its years on the job, without repairs or replacements.

All good constructors in these days are insisting on genuine "Tide-Water" Cypress, "The Wood Eternal"—every board and bundle bearing the famous Cypress Trade-mark.

Vol. 3, CYPRESS Pocket Library, is a little book filled with a big bunch of facts and figures about greenhouse construction—profitable reading. There are 44 books in the "Library," all of which give useful facts and plans about HOW, WHEN and WHERE to use CYPRESS, "The Wood Eternal," AND WHY. Which one shall we send you?

Greenhouse Heating

Subscribers are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

HOW MUCH RADIATION?

We have mailed you a sketch of our greenhouse range and should like to have you examine it and advise us regarding the heating requirements of the range. We wish to maintain 50 degrees when the outside temperature is 15 degrees below zero. B. N. C.

From the sketch it is learned that there is a main house, 20x350 feet, with a lean-to along the north side which is seven feet in width. There are five feet of glass in the south wall of the main house and two and one-half feet in the north wall of the lean-to. The boiler house is located at the middle of the north side of the greenhouses and twenty feet away.

A 4-inch supply pipe leads to the houses, with two 2-inch distributing pipes. On the side walls of the main house and on the north wall of the lean-to there are four 1¼-inch pipes in coils, with one 1¼-inch drip pipe. These coils are connected every twenty feet with the distributing pipes overhead. There is also a 4-inch return pipe running to the boiler.

The amount of radiation in the houses should be ample to give the temperature specified, and the flow pipes should be able to supply the steam needed for the coils. From the fact that there is a drip pipe under each coil, it is inferred that the returns are in sections twenty feet in length. We do not consider this a desirable arrangement, nor is there any occasion for connecting the distributing pipes with the coils at intervals of twenty feet.

It would be preferable to run the 4-inch supply pipe across the middle of the house and arrange the heating pipes in two sections, each about 175 feet in length.

Either on the purlins, as now arranged, or on the side wall plates, we would run two 2-inch distributing pipes in each direction in the main house, and would use one distributing pipe in each direction in the lean-to.

Use four 1¼-inch pipes in the coils on the south side of the main house and three pipes in the coils on the north side of this room. In the lean-to, in addition to the two 2-inch distributing pipes, use three 1¼-inch returns on the north wall in each direction.

To heat the combined house with hot water, run three 2½-inch flow pipes in each direction and use nine 2-inch returns in each end of the main house and four returns in each end of the lean-to. Use a boiler rated anywhere from thirty-five to fifty horsepower. The stack should be eighteen to twenty inches in diameter and about thirty-five feet high.

From this it will be seen that only about 1,000 feet of 2-inch distributing pipe and 3,500 linear feet of 1¼-inch pipe will be required. There is no occasion for using drip pipes, since all of the pipes in the system run downhill and carry the drip to the main return pipe.

While it will not be worth while to make the change, a 2½-inch main return pipe would answer. When the coils are fifty feet or more in length, it will be safe to consider that a 2-inch pipe will supply 400 square feet of steam radiation; a 2½-inch supply pipe will carry 650 square feet of radiation; a 3-inch supply pipe, 1,200 square feet; a 3½-inch supply pipe, 1,800 feet; a 4-inch supply pipe, 2,400 square feet of steam radiation under low pressure. For the smaller sizes of supply pipes, the diameter should be one-tenth of the square root of the radiation to be supplied. Thus a 1½-inch pipe will supply about 200 to 225 square feet, and 1-inch pipe may be used for 100 square feet of low-pressure steam radiation.

PIPING A HOUSE.

Will you give me directions for piping my greenhouse? A plan of the house has been sent. I can use only 2-inch flows, as my boiler openings are for 2-inch. I do not desire to run any pipes overhead in the center of the house. I desire to obtain a temperature of 60 degrees when the outside temperature is at zero. What should be the rating of my heater? W. E. S.—Md.

The house is fifty-four feet long, with nine feet of glass on each side of the ridge, and with fourteen inches of glass and thirty inches of concrete in each side wall.

To heat such a house to 60 degrees in zero weather, about 400 square feet of radiation will be required and it is suggested that you use a boiler rated at 700 square feet of hot water radiation, if soft coal is to be used. The writer has heated a house of this size with a boiler rated at 450 square feet of radiation and a grate twenty inches in diameter, using hard coal, maintaining 60 degrees in zero weather and 50 degrees when 15 below zero, but for bituminous coal the grate should be at least 22-inch and the rating of the boiler should be considerably larger.

For the radiation use a 2-inch flow pipe on each side wall plate and eight 2-inch returns. This is rather more radiation than should be supplied by a 2-inch flow and, even though the openings are only 2-inch, it would be well to use 2½-inch mains, reducing to 2-inch at the boiler.

he can root ninety-five per cent of his cuttings another season.

The local branch of the National Association of Gardeners will hold a meeting at Horticultural hall September 27, to clean up matters pertaining to the late successful convention and to plan for a continuation of meetings during the coming season.

George W. Hamer, the ever-popular assistant manager of the Flower Exchange, fell down a flight of stairs while carrying a box of flowers, September 22. His ankles were hurt so badly that he is obliged to lay up for a while for repairs. His absence and the Jewish holidays coming together have made the exchange seem excessively dull.

Callers last week included George Severns, of Olympia, Wash.; F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y., and Leonard Barron, Garden City, N. Y.

There has been a change in the personnel of the officers of the Beacon Florist, on Beacon street. Golab Bros. retire and hereafter John Eisemann and Benjamin Mirsky will rule the roost. This means good management and increased business. The name has been changed to Beacon Florist, Inc. Everyone in the retail trade knows John Eisemann and his new partner is equally popular and well known.

A. W. Kidder, of Lincoln, the noted violet specialist, has been quite ill, with glandular trouble. He has been in the hospital since early in July. The Flower Exchange sent him a handsome basket of fruit and flowers last week and his many friends in the trade hope for his speedy recovery.

Hardly any dahlias are offered for sale in the wholesale market here and retailers seem to fight shy of them, in spite of the fact that they are grown in ever-increasing numbers in this section and are this season flowering more abundantly than ever. Individual flowers, mainly of decorative and peony-flowered varieties, are seen in some stores under numbers, and orders are booked for plants for another season, but few, indeed, are the flowers used by the stores in designs or decorations. The main reasons for this are, first, the rather poor keeping qualities of dahlias and, second, the fact that the large-flowered varieties, for which a craze now exists, are of little value decoratively. The singles, collarettes and smaller cactus are most liked by critical flower buyers and these are now little seen on the dahlia farms or at exhibitions.

A bridal window at Penn's last week attracted much notice from passers-by. The shower bouquets of valley and sweet peas elicited many words of admiration. W. N. C.

Branded for Your Protection

YOUR guarantee in purchasing Greenhouse Glass manufactured by the American Window Glass Company is the grade marking indelibly branded on the end of every box. The standards used in grading our product are so high that our "B" quality is difficult to distinguish from ordinary "A" and our "A" grade is the choice of all growers and greenhouse construction companies seeking higher quality. An excellent combination of quality with economy is to use our "A" grade on the south side of your house, with "B" for the north side and gables.

For Greenhouse Glazing

The careful grower demands glass that is reasonably flat and of uniform thickness on the edges; it must be comparatively free from the blisters that cause sunburn and of a clear, refined metal to admit all the light there is in the dark days of winter. The branded product of the American Window Glass Company meets all these requirements. Serious errors in flattening or annealing, noticeable discoloration, blisters or other defects are not permitted in "A" or "B" quality glass. Both grades are furnished, carefully packed, single and double strength, in all the sizes popular for greenhouse glazing.

Get acquainted with our Specialties—29, 34 and 39-ounce Glass

When you obtain an estimate from a jobber or greenhouse construction builder, specify American Window Glass Company's branded product and look for the brand on every box delivered. Write us direct if the dealer does not handle it.

SEATTLE NOTES.

Wash., Friday and Saturday, September 22 and 23.

The Union street windows of the Woodlawn Flower Shop attract the attention of evening passers-by. One, which has been arranged to form an aviary, draws most onlookers. Theater time always finds a crowd at these windows.

With the return of vacationists and the opening of the fall shopping season, business for the Pinehurst Floral Shop has been showing a nice increase, especially in sales to transients.

A number of large funerals last week helped to boost the business for the week at Kenney's; there has been a gain in general business.

Rosaia Bros. featured two tall stalks of rubrum lilies in the corner of their largest show window last week, each of these having better than ten blooms. The display attracted the attention of passers-by readily.

Special combinations of fall flowers were used to drape an attractive window display for the Orpheum Floral Co., with some sixty or more varieties of dahlias on display at the front of the window.

Automobile tourists who visited Seattle this summer generally commented on the attractive showing made by the flower boxes mounted on each of the light posts along the main streets downtown. Eugene Sandahl, of the Burdett Co., did the greater part of this work.

Inquiries and business in sight for the holidays for the B. E. Hammond Co. indicate that this year's total for the firm is going to surpass that of its opening season.

Business has shown signs of an increase, with the return of families from their summer residences, according to John Dressen, of the Art Floral Co.

In a recent item carried in this column it was stated that the Seattle Star and the Standard Furniture Co. combined on the wedding held in the latter's model bungalow. Credit for the floral decorations and the bouquets of the bridal party should have been given to Hollywood Gardens, which donated this important feature of the wedding. With the opening of the fall social season, the number of decorations handled through this shop is increasing.

Sales of dahlia and narcissus bulbs have been a big feature with Irving Harris, of the Bon Marche Flower Shop. The showing of fancy boxes, so that the bulbs could be mailed as gifts, helped the movement.

With the increase of traffic along Third avenue, business for Morgan's Flower Shop has been holding up in fine shape, and this shop has been carrying one of the largest stocks found in any of the smaller stores. A good share of the flowers came from Henry Morgan's own gardens.

A small increase in the cut of roses is reported by the Beall Greenhouse Co., of Vashon, Wash.

Melby's Flower Shop reports an increase in business, especially on funeral orders.

Felix Rosaia has handled a number of decorations lately, and general business for this shop has been maintained in nice order. H. M.

The Market.

With outdoor flowers practically out of the market, roses and carnations have become the main factors. A few asters and gladioli are still available. Dahlias, as yet, are poor and short in stem. Lilies are scarce.

Roses are good and sell at $4 to $12 per hundred. Carnations are getting better and bring from $1 to $3. A few Laddie are to be had at $4 per hundred. Asters are of poor quality, but make from $3 to $4. Gladioli sell at from $6 to $8. A few lilies are to be had at $20 per hundred. Dahlias are bringing $3.

Various Notes.

The visit to the National Coöperative Show Gardens, at Spencer, Ind., was called off on account of the seriousness of Mr. Barnes' illness. He has been in poor health for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Coffee, of Kokomo, Ind., have a fine boy baby.

The trade extends its sympathy to Albert Warner, of Noblesville, Ind., in the recent loss of his mother.

The Baur & Steinkamp establishment is almost surrounded with pavement. The paving of Rookwood avenue has just been completed and now Byram avenue is being paved. The city is rapidly growing around this firm's range.

The M. Brandlein & Sons Co. has an attractive new truck.

The Roepke Floral Co. has a fine lot of cyclamens coming on.

The merchants near George Wiegand's home held a carnival recently. He donated the decorations for the affair.

E. E. T.

Montreal, Que.—William C. Hall has sold the retail store he has conducted under the name of Hall & Robinson, at 825 St. Catherine street, west, to George D. Reid, a member of the staff of the E. Wienhoeber Co., Chicago. Mr. Hall will confine his efforts to growing pot plants at his greenhouses on the east side. Mr. Hall believes the future in this field is almost unlimited in its opportunity. As soon as he is able, he will purchase a tract of land outside the city limits, as his present glass area, 22,000 feet, is so hedged about with residences that expansion is impossible.

Will they be dead when you get back?

Have Tight Greenhouses

by using

Kuhls' Elastic Glazing Composition

It is light gray in color and the only glazing material that can be applied with the hands the same as putty, and will not stick. It retains its elasticity indefinitely and prevents breakage of glass. Withstands heat, cold and dampness and will adhere to wood, iron, stone, etc. Beds perfectly and lasts as long as the glass lasts. If the glass breaks, Elastic Glazing Composition can be cut out without injury to the wood, as it remains flexible.

Kuhl's Elastic Glazing Composition is used by:

EVERTITE GLAZING CEMENT

EVERTITE GLAZING CEMENT remains elastic at all times—forming a waterproof and airtight joint over the sashbar. It will stand the extreme expansion and contraction that a greenhouse is subject to and will not check or crack—nor will it harden. It lasts from five to ten years.

DELPHINIUMS—Continued

WHITE HYBRID DELPHINIUMS.

Several years ago Wm. Toole, Sr., discovered a plant among some Delphinium Formosum which bore pure white flowers. Since then he has crossed them with choice hybrids and selected from the best of these.

In general habit of growth they are like a good strain of hybrids of the blue color. Some of them are double though most are single, some have dark centers but most are pure white.

The plants we offer have all been selected and marked while in flower and no inferior specimens are sent out.

Price for strong selected plants, carefully packed, 35c each, $3.50 per doz., $25.00 per 100, $225.00 per 1000.

GERBERAS

GERBERA HYBRIDS.
Few florists are acquainted with the Gerberas. They will grow under glass under ordinary treatment and bloom all winter long. Imagine a Daisy of a rich red or a soft pink, or any other color, borne on long stems and 2 to 3 inches across. Try a few of my field-grown plants at 25c, 35c and 50c each, according to sizes.

King GREENHOUSES

For the man who is just starting in the vegetable or flower growing business, the King 21x50-foot semi-iron greenhouse is proving to be a popular size and style. (The 21-foot width can also be furnished in 25, 75 and 100-foot lengths.)

It's built the King way—light and strong and it keeps the weather out and lets all the sunshine in. It's a dandy for turning out the "firsts" and a great many growers claim that it has not only given them their start in business but has made enough money to enable them to add to their ranges.

Send today for bulletin 40C and facts and figures concerning the size in which you're interested. We'll be glad to mail them to you without obligation immediately upon receiving your letter.

Barbe's Show House at Kansas City

A. F. Barbe, as everybody knows, who knows him, is one of Kansas City's oldest men in the business.

One of the oldest.

And one of the youngest.

You and I know that a man never really gets old until he begins to "let-well-enough-alone."

When you start in doing that, you begin to do a lot of sitting down.

Right then you kind of begin letting things slide.

That very day you are starting in to be an old man.

You don't catch this man Barbe doing much sitting or any sliding.

He is right on his toes.

Here's evidence that he is, in the fine show house he had us finish for him in time for his friends to see who went to the S. A. F. Convention.

Next time you go into a Liggett drug store, just notice how everything possible is on show. With their thousands of stores they have found it pays. Everybody who walks along this street can't help but see Barbe's goods on display in his big glass show case.

The flower shop is several steps above the greenhouse which gives a splendid view of everything on the benches.

Seeing how carefully worked out and thoroughly well built the house was right down to every last little detail, made a lot of the Convention visitors sit right up and take notice.

It made two men totally change their minds about construction and constructing firms and to whom to give their greenhouse order.

When their houses are up we will show you photos and remind you of this little talk we had together.

REMEMBER—No expense to you beyond the price we quote for our Bulbs—we pay ocean freights, brokerage fees, duties, etc. The new tarriff law which went into effect September 22 has increased the duty on Tulips 300% and on most other Bulbs 100%, but we do not add anything to the prices quoted in said advertisement. SAVE this by buying of us.

Don't Be Caught Short

Without our patented cardboard Wreath Forms

Experience has shown us that most of our trade has paid too much for their Wreath Forms because they held back their orders until shipment had to be made by express. This increased the cost of the merchandise from 25 to 35 per cent. Besides, our customers lost business because they did not have the goods on hand—their customers would not wait when delivery could not be made at once. The profit on such specialties comes through having the goods on hand when wanted. It does not pay to approach the Christmas holidays with little goods on hand.

Therefore we suggest to you that you place your orders now for fall requirements in Christmas Wreath Forms.

Send for our line of samples of cardboard Wreath Forms as illustrated in this advertisement. Do it now. Prices and samples will be sent gratis on request. We make the following sizes:

Wreath Forms—4, 6, 8, 10, 12 and 16-inch.
Star Forms—4, 6, 7, 9 and 12-inch.
Heart Forms—5, 6 and 7-inch.
Cross Forms—14x21-inch and 18x30-inch.

Write us today about your requirements.

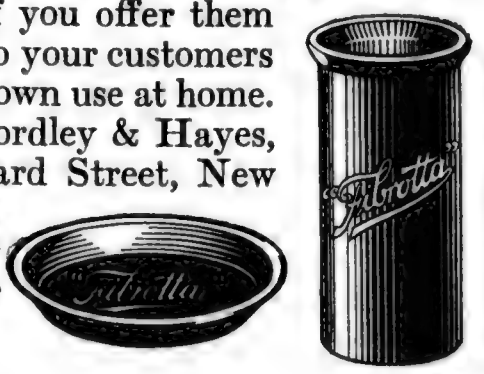
Buy to last—it pays



READ this letter from Gallivan Brothers, of Holyoke, Massachusetts: "We have been using "Fibrotta" vases for the past 21 years—one or two doing duty at the present time that we purchased 21 years ago—some service, I'll say—we find they are much more durable than crockery vases——." Isn't that the type of service you have been looking for? Isn't it a fine way to cut down expenses?

Not only are "Fibrotta" vases durable, but they are handsome. They attract trade. "Fibrotta" vases set off your cut flowers as no other container can. "Fibrotta"—the seamless fibre ware, resembles polished mahogany. It retains its attractive appearance. If desired, it can also be furnished in white or green enamel.

For displaying cut flowers "Fibrotta" vases are exceptionally effective. "Fibrotta" vases are non-conductors of heat and cold. They keep water cool. They do not chill the water when the flowers are placed in your refrigerator over night. They cannot rust or stain woodwork. They are not easily broken, as is earthenware.

It is a notable feature (and an important one) that cut flowers if left standing in "Fibrotta" vases will last longer when sent out to customers than if they are kept in a metal vase. The rust which inevitably forms in a metal vase deposits on the stems of the flowers. The flowers wilt much sooner because of this peculiar fact than if kept in "Fibrotta" vases.

"Fibrotta" saucers for flower pots are another important item. They cannot sweat, stain or scratch woodwork. You will also find a profitable market if you offer them for sale to your customers for their own use at home. Write Cordley & Hayes, 14 Leonard Street, New York City, for further details.

Selling More Flowers Thru Chicago Co-operation

The Allied Florists' Association of Illinois is a mighty factor in increasing the sale of flowers for both wholesale and retail florists within a 1000 mile radius from Chicago, through the extensive advertising and publicity carried on during the entire flower season.

During the coming season bigger and better and more extensive plans will be carried out, which through the newspapers will spread the message far.

The Chicago wholesalers and 500 growers adjacent to Chicago who have made this allied publicity and advertising possible by their contributions are deserving of your careful consideration in placing your orders for cut flowers, plants and supplies.

They stand ready to back up their claim "That if it can be gotten at all, it can be gotten and gotten better in Chicago."

You Who Look For Something Better!

Commonwealth is better than existing roses. Montgomery's dark pink seedling will please you. We have confidence in Commonwealth and have shown our faith by placing plants of this new rose with the following firms for trial. These men have our full permission to tell the truth. We have not asked them to be charitable as regards any faults that the rose may have. We have placed the rose with these growers that the story of Commonwealth may be the story of honest endeavor to give the rose growers of America something better than we have had before. See Commonwealth with your nearest neighbor; or, better still, come to Cromwell and see it here. These men are growing it:

NEW BEGONIA
CHATELAINE SUPREME

"Supreme" is the proper word to use in connection with this truly meritorious plant. Its superiority over the well known Chatelaine consists in the following:

1st. Larger and heavier foliage.

2nd. Larger blooms, measuring from 1½ to 2 inches across.

3rd. Deeper color.

4th. Quicker growth; cuttings taken in December, will make specimen 8-in. pot plants ten months later.

5th. Splendid keeping qualities, the flowers lasting longer than those of the old Chatelaine.

Here are a few letters from some of the leading retail florists of St. Louis, showing what they thing of Chatelaine Supreme:

KOENIG FLORAL COMPANY,
4654 W. Florissant St.,
St. Louis, Mo.

Sept. 12th, 1922.

S. S. Skidelsky & Co.

Gentlemen:—Comparison has proven that "Steidle's Chatelaine Supreme Begonia" is far superior over all others; it blooms quicker, has heavier growth and larger foliage and represents more when ready to sell.

Very truly yours,
Koenig Floral Co.

FRED C. WEBER,
4326 Olive St.,
St. Louis, Mo.

Sept. 11th, 1922.

S. S. Skidelsky & Co.

Gentlemen:—Replying to your inquiry of September 7th, I wish to say that we have handled Mr. Steidle's Begonia Chatelaine Supreme and found them to be very satisfactory.

Very truly yours,

THEODORE MILLER,
5886 Delmar Boulevard,
St. Louis, Mo.

Sept. 15th, 1922.

S. S. Skidelsky & Co.

Gentlemen:—Answering your inquiry about Mr. Steidle's Begonia Chatelaine Supreme, which I understand, you have undertaken to put on the market during the coming season, I am satisfied that the average retailer will find it most valuable as a Christmas pot plant. We have handled this Begonia in quantity during the past two seasons in sizes from 5 to 8 inch pots, and had no trouble in getting a very good price for them. Our trade, in St. Louis, takes well to it. You will make no mistake in introducing the Chatelaine Supreme to the trade.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) Theodore Miller.

F. H. WEBER, Florist,
Taylor Ave. and Olive St.,
St. Louis, Mo.

Sept. 23rd, 1922.

Mr. John Steidle,
Clayton, Mo.

Dear Sir:—Your new Begonia, Chatelaine Supreme, is much superior to the old Chatelaine. The flowers and foliage are much larger and the flowers hold better. I find the Chatelaine Supreme sells better than Chatelaine. It makes a much larger plant, as you well know.

The Supreme you sent me at Christmas and Easter in the large size—24 to 30 inches high—made a fine show and sold rapidly, as did the smaller sizes.

Very truly yours,

George Waldbart Floral Co., Inc.,
516 North Grand Ave.,
St. Louis, Mo.

Sept. 21st, 1922.

Mr. John Steidle,
Olivette, Mo.

Dear Sir:—Just a word to tell you of our entire satisfaction with your new Begonia, Chatelaine Supreme.

It is a very good keeping plant, and makes a better showing than the old variety, because of its large, glossy foliage. The flowers do not shake or fall off as easily as on the old variety.

During the coming season we expect to handle twice as many of the new variety as we usually did of the old.

Respectfully yours,
Geo. Waldbart Floral Co.

Mr. Chas. Beyer, a prominent grower and retailer of St. Louis, writes us, among other things, with reference to the Chatelaine Supreme as follows:

"It is a faster grower than the old one and holds its flowers longer. I intend growing them."

Dissemination of the Chatelaine Supreme will commence on or about March 1st and orders will be filled strictly in rotation.

Prices for 2¼-in. pot plants, $15.00 per 100, $140.00 per 1000.
250 at 1000 rate

At the popular price this plant is offered you cannot afford to wait until they get "cheaper." ORDER NOW. It will prove to be a good investment.

S. S. SKIDELSKY & CO., 53 Park Place, NEW YORK CITY

It is our intention to show the Chatelaine Supreme during the month of November or December, before the New York, Philadelphia and Boston Florists' Clubs.

New Carnation SUPER-SUPREME

Super-Supreme is a sport from Enchantress Supreme. It is the same as the parent in every particular excepting the color, which is much livelier and more pleasing. Super-Supreme should not be confounded with the several deep salmon colored sports of Enchantress Supreme, from which it is totally distinct. We have already booked many orders from growers who have seen it growing here. Delivery will begin in December of this year. If you need to buy in that color, by all means order Super-Supreme. If you are growing Enchantress Supreme, order enough to change over to Super-Supreme the second year. Let us have your order early.

Remember Them?

—at the Indianapolis Show

There were 12 of those big fellows, some with 140 flowers on them as big as your head. They all came from here. That Cleveland expert, Lars Anderson, grew them.

Our last year's stock was very good. Some claimed, "Not a blind shoot in them," and this year's stock looks just as good if not better. No secret in growing them, just common sense. THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

CLIMBERS THAT CLING TO WALLS

The varieties of ornamental vines are so numerous that an adequate discussion of the entire group or class would be impossible in the space here available. But this article has reference only to the few climbers that cling firmly to solid walls or other smooth and steep surfaces.

IN SELECTING climbing vines for the adornment of walls of wood or masonry, there is not much room for choice. The choice is strictly limited, of course, to the few varieties that will attach themselves firmly and permanently, by means of adhesive disks or holdfasts, to smooth and perpendicular walls. Such persistent clinging to slippery surfaces is really a remarkable achievement. Perhaps less than a dozen different sorts of vines have clearly proved themselves to be equipped with the right kind of tendril-tips for such a continuous, all-year-round, year-after-year performance. But in the more northern latitudes the width of choice is still further restricted by the necessity of obtaining vines that will endure the rigors of the climate. Wall-climbers are fully exposed to the view of the public and to the whims of the weather; any damage to the plants is particularly conspicuous and peculiarly difficult to remedy.

Hardy or Tender?

The utmost hardiness, then, is a prime essential. But it would be absurd or impossible to draw a line of latitude, or even a moderately crooked isothermal line, and say, "South of that line these plants are hardy; north of it they are tender." Local conditions are even a more important factor than they are generally supposed to be. Regional peculiarities of atmosphere or soil may so diminish the vigor of a plant that it will be unable to resist the ravages of winter. Unfavorable environment in some large city, for instance, may so impair the vitality of a plant that it will weakly succumb to winter's cold, though precisely the same species of plant, thirty or more miles north of the same city, may thrive luxuriantly and may pass unscathed through the severest winters. Debilitated plants are an easy prey either to disease or to winter's rigors. Therefore, with reference to any plant that is not of "iron-clad" hardiness, the people of each community must discover for themselves whether that plant should be considered hardy or tender in their locality.

Shelter for English Ivy.

It is a matter of general knowledge, and of genuine regret, that the English ivy, Hedera helix, is not reliably hardy in the northern states of the Union. A common verdict is, that it "is hardy in sheltered places as far north as Massachusetts." That assertion, though probably as nearly accurate and definite as so brief a statement of the case can be, is complicated by many uncertainties, especially in regard to the nature of the needed "shelter." The English ivy is particularly susceptible to injury from scorching in bright winter sunshine. Hence it is benefited by shade in winter, as well as in summer, and is frequently best suited by a location on the north side of a building. If no other shelter can be provided for it, at least the soil about its roots may be protected by a mulch and by the shade of adjacent shrubbery. A rich, somewhat moist soil is desirable. Since the English ivy is in some respects the most beautiful of vines, there is a glimmer of cheer in the report that a variety named Hedera helix baltica, imported in comparatively recent years from the Baltic provinces of Russia, has been tested at the Arnold Arboretum and has been proved, apparently, to be hardier than the type.

There are a few other "self-supporting" vines that are somewhat tender or only doubtfully hardy. Among them are Bignonia radicans, Hydrangea petiolaris and one or two more. All of these are more successful in clinging to walls than in resisting northern winters.

Boston Ivy, Ampelopsis Veitchii, on a Brick Wall.

Three Standbys.

Thus the choice of hardy wall-climbers is reduced, by a process of elimination, to about three well known varieties. One of these is an evergreen, Evonymus radicans. The other two are deciduous and are commonly known as the Boston ivy and the Virginia creeper. The most popular variety of Boston ivy is seen in the illustration on this page. Both the Boston ivy and the Virginia creeper are forms of ampelopsis. At least, the genus is usually called ampelopsis and shall be so called in this article, though many botanists term it parthenocissus, reserving the name ampelopsis for species which climb with twining tendrils and do not cling by means of adhesive tips or disks.

Boston Ivy, Ampelopsis Veitchii, on a Brick Wall.

Three Standbys.

Thus the choice of hardy wall-climbers is reduced, by a process of elimination, to about three well known varieties. One of these is an evergreen, Evonymus radicans. The other two are deciduous and are commonly known as the Boston ivy and the Virginia creeper. The most popular variety of Boston ivy is seen in the illustration on this page. Both the Boston ivy and the Virginia creeper are forms of ampelopsis. At least, the genus is usually called ampelopsis and shall be so called in this article, though many botanists term it parthenocissus, reserving the name ampelopsis for species which climb with twining tendrils and do not cling by means of adhesive tips or disks.

It is true that Evonymus radicans suffers occasionally from the burning of its foliage in winter, but it is less liable to such injury than is the English ivy. Moreover, a trustworthy Boston grower testifies that this evonymus has withstood, under his observation, temperatures of 20 to 25 degrees below zero. Among other growers, some say that in the most northern states the plant lives, but does not really thrive; others say that it is satisfactorily hardy and that it maintains its evergreen character "except in the extreme north." At any rate, if a northern grower wants a hardy evergreen wall-climber, he will probably have to content himself with either Evonymus radicans or the variety of E. radicans called vegeta, about which more will be said a little farther on. E. radicans is shown in the illustration on this page.

Climbs or Creeps.

Among the common names of Evonymus radicans are the evergreen climber, the evergreen bittersweet and the climbing or creeping evonymus. The word radicans, meaning "rooting," has reference to the aërial roots which enable the plant to climb or creep. It is a favorite as a low, trailing plant for borders and similar places, but climbs whenever it can find any sort of support. It clings tenaciously to concrete, stone or wood, and attains a height of ten to twenty feet or more. In average conditions its growth is comparatively slow, but if it receives the right encouragement it grows with fair rapidity. In one grower's experience, some small plants of Evonymus radicans, placed in good soil, watered occasionally in dry weather and mulched with cow manure each spring, covered a wall sixteen feet high in four years. Other growers recommend the application of a top-dressing of old manure each fall. There is no need of being particular about the exact nature of the soil, if it is sufficiently rich and in good mechanical condition. The plants have small, glossy, dark green leaves and pink fruits. The flowers are inconspicuous.

Propagating Evonymus Radicans.

Evonymus radicans is usually propagated from cuttings of half-ripened wood, taken either in early August or in the fall and winter. Summer, as a rule, is the preferable time, as the cuttings root more readily then and develop into good plants the first season. And flats usually are superior to frames as receptacles for the cuttings, since the flats can be moved as desired. The soil used in the flats is sandy loam, with a bottom layer of coal ashes or other suitable material as drainage. If the cuttings are inserted in summer and kept moist by regular syringing, in less than two months the flats will be filled with roots and may then be placed outdoors, to remain there until cold weather arrives. Then they—the flats and their contents—may be stored for the winter, either in a cool greenhouse or in a coldframe, under a bed of dry leaves. Or the little plants, at the end of the outdoor period, may be potted at once and prepared for early spring sales. When planted out in their final positions, they should be about two feet apart.

Evonymus Radicans Vegeta.

A variety of Evonymus radicans, E. radicans vegeta, is believed by some growers to be distinctly superior to the type. Note the meaning of vegeta—"vigorous, thriving, lively." According to some witnesses, at least, it is true to its name, showing plain evidence of a disposition to grow freely. Some of its admirers are enthusiastic in praise of it and declare that it is "the coming ivy for America, destined to be used as the English ivy is used in England." It has been proved to be hardy in the vicinity of Boston, but probably has not yet been fully tested in most other parts of the north. Its leaves are larger and more nearly round than those of the type. Its scarlet fruits are produced abundantly and remain long on the branches. Altogether, it promises well, though most of its advocates admit that their experience with it has been too brief to permit them to speak positively.

Evonymus Radicans on a Shingled Wall.

Boston Ivy and Virginia Creeper.

It is likely, however, that the Boston ivy and the Virginia creeper, in spite of their deciduous character, will long continue to be the most popular of all hardy wall-climbers. Their luxuriance of growth, the largeness and abundance of their leaves, the rich coloring which the leaves assume in the fall—these and other good traits form a combination that compensates amply for the lack of winter foliage. Of the two varieties, the Boston ivy is by far the greater favorite in the north, flourishing splendidly even in the soot and grime of the great cities. Its glossy leaves easily shed the pollutions of the city atmosphere, remaining clean, bright and wholesome throughout the summer. But here, again, the effect of varying local conditions must be borne in mind. A well known Minnesota nurseryman, probably speaking from practical experience, says that Ampelopsis Engelmannii, an improved form of the Virginia creeper, "is the only ampelopsis that is perfectly hardy" in his state.

The Right Start in Climbing.

Even the Boston ivy, though notably hardy in a general way, is somewhat tender when young and it is well to protect the little plants during their first year or two. A good method of protection, in addition to mulching, is to stretch such material as burlap, matting or old carpet over the plants, fastening the ends of the burlap or other fabric to tall stakes or to strips of wood attached to the wall. In a year or two the plants will become established and henceforth they will grow rapidly. They should be planted about three feet apart. If, at the time of planting, the young vines have attained any considerable length, they should be cut down to within six inches of the ground, so that they will promptly attach themselves to the base of the wall, as close to their own roots as possible. Only in that way can they make the right start. A vine that has been permitted to wander loosely until it has become long enough to be tossed about by the wind, or until its tendrils have been dried out, has thus become refractory and is not likely to begin its climb properly.

Known by Their Leaves.

Owing to their general family resemblance, the two favorite species of ampelopsis, Boston ivy and Virginia creeper, are frequently confused in the public mind. Some people cannot distinguish one species from the other; some even think that the two names are synonymous. Most members of the trade, of course, are better informed on the matter. Although the leaves of the Boston ivy are exceedingly variable in shape, usually there are enough leaves of the true, typical form to make identification easy. As is indicated by the botanical name, Ampelopsis tricuspidata, "3-pointed," the typical leaf of the Boston ivy is 3-lobed, or trilobate, thus bearing a real resemblance—in a general way, though not in detail—to the leaf of the English ivy. Many of the leaves, however, are not 3-lobed, but are 3-foliolate, or trifoliolate; that is, they consist of three distinct leaflets, as if nature, with an invisible scissors, had cut apart the lobes of the typical leaves, transforming the lobes into separate leaflets. The 3-lobed leaves and 3-foliolate leaves are frequently found growing side by side on the same stem. Another variation in the Boston ivy foliage is seen in many of the small, young leaves, which have not developed their lobes, but are almost plain, or "entire," having only slight serrations on the margin.

Look for Three-Lobed Leaves.

Yet, as already has been said, the Boston ivy always bears a greater or less proportion of the typical, ivy-like, 3-lobed leaves, and thus can be readily identified. In fact, on vigorous-growing, well developed plants there seems to be, usually, a decided predominance of the 3-lobed leaves. On the other hand, the typical leaf of the Virginia creeper consists of a group of five leaflets, all diverging from one point, as is implied, again, by the botanical name, Ampelopsis quinquefolia, meaning "5-leaved." The foliage of the Virginia creeper also is decidedly variable, however, epecially as to the number of leaflets. All of that leaf-talk may be less interesting to the readers than to the writer, but it may be enlightening to some beginner.

Improved forms of both the Virginia creeper and the Boston ivy have largely superseded the original types, but the improved varieties have retained the characteristic foliage of their parents, except, perhaps, in the size of the leaves. Among the improved forms of the Virginia creeper, or Ampelopsis quinquefolia, the most popular variety is Ampelopsis Engelmannii, which generally has smaller and thicker leaves than the type. Another distinctive quality of A. Engelmannii is, that it has more fully developed adhesive disks on the ends of its tendrils than have most other varieties of A. quinquefolia; therefore Engelmannii clings more closely and tightly.

Favorite Form of Boston Ivy.

Of the Boston ivy, or Ampelopsis tricuspidata, the favorite form, as already stated, is the one shown in the first of the accompanying illustrations and usually designated as A. Veitchii. It, also, has smaller leaves than the type. Its tendrils end in completely developed disks and it is not surpassed by any other climber in the tenacity of its hold on almost any sort of wall. It should be understood, however, that scarcely any climber can be guaranteed to adhere unfailingly to the glassy surface of a well painted wall. Besides, if it becomes desirable to renew the paint, the vine is hopelessly in the way. Usually, therefore, it is necessary to dispense with either the paint or the vine. Some botanists believe that Ampelopsis Veitchii is not a distinct variety, but a synonym of the original A. tricuspidata, or "only a juvenile form which may pass later into the type."

Perhaps it should be mentioned that the Boston ivy is occasionally called, also, the Japanese ivy. Both names are appropriate, as the vine's native home was Japan and its early American home was Boston. It was brought to this country more than half a century ago, as a conservatory plant, but soon proved its hardiness in the vicinity of Boston.

Propagating Boston Ivy.

The Boston ivy may be propagated either by seeds or cuttings, but the cuttings produce stronger plants, which grow more rapidly than seedlings during the first year or two. The seed is sown in flats in February or March; the seedlings are potted and grown along on benches until fall; then they are generally placed in a cool greenhouse or protected frame for the winter and are planted out in the following spring. The cuttings are taken in the spring, from young, soft wood; these root freely in gentle heat. Or, if circumstances require, the cuttings may be taken in September, with two or three eyes of the current year's growth, and inserted in light loam in flats, which are placed in a shaded greenhouse. Plants from cuttings, if not less than 2 years old, promptly start into vigorous growth when planted in their permanent positions.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Examining Committees.

President E. H. Mann announces the committees to examine new chrysanthemums for the ensuing year, as follows:

Boston, Mass.—James Wheeler, chairman. Ship flowers to chairman, care of W. J. Thurston, manager of the Boston Flower Exchange, 1 Winthrop Square and Otis street, Boston, Mass.

New York, N. Y.—A. Herrington, chairman, Madison, N. J.; William H. Duckham. Ship flowers to A. Herrington, Madison, N. J.

Cincinnati, O.—R. Witterstaetter, chairman; James Allen and J. C. Murphy. Ship flowers to chairman, Jabez Elliott Flower Market, care of janitor.

Chicago, Ill.—Hans Jepsen, chairman; K. A. Kanst and George Asmus. Ship flowers to chairman, care the Joseph Foerster Co., 160 North Wabash avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Shipments should be made to arrive by 2 p. m. on examination days to receive attention from the committee. Express charges must be prepaid to destination and an entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week the plants are to be examined, or the money may accompany the blooms.

Seedlings and sports are both eligible to be shown before these committees, provided the grower has given them two years' trial to determine their true character, not less than six blooms of each variety to be shown. Special attention

Perhaps it should be mentioned that the Boston ivy is occasionally called, also, the Japanese ivy. Both names are appropriate, as the vine's native home was Japan and its early American home was Boston. It was brought to this country more than half a century ago, as a conservatory plant, but soon proved its hardiness in the vicinity of Boston.

Propagating Boston Ivy.

The Boston ivy may be propagated either by seeds or cuttings, but the cuttings produce stronger plants, which grow more rapidly than seedlings during the first year or two. The seed is sown in flats in February or March; the seedlings are potted and grown along on benches until fall; then they are generally placed in a cool greenhouse or protected frame for the winter and are planted out in the following spring. The cuttings are taken in the spring, from young, soft wood; these root freely in gentle heat. Or, if circumstances require, the cuttings may be taken in September, with two or three eyes of the current year's growth, and inserted in light loam in flats, which are placed in a shaded greenhouse. Plants from cuttings, if not less than 2 years old, promptly start into vigorous growth when planted in their permanent positions.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Examining Committees.

President E. H. Mann announces the committees to examine new chrysanthemums for the ensuing year, as follows:

Boston, Mass.—James Wheeler, chairman. Ship flowers to chairman, care of W. J. Thurston, manager of the Boston Flower Exchange, 1 Winthrop Square and Otis street, Boston, Mass.

New York, N. Y.—A. Herrington, chairman, Madison, N. J.; William H. Duckham. Ship flowers to A. Herrington, Madison, N. J.

Cincinnati, O.—R. Witterstaetter, chairman; James Allen and J. C. Murphy. Ship flowers to chairman, Jabez Elliott Flower Market, care of janitor.

Chicago, Ill.—Hans Jepsen, chairman; K. A. Kanst and George Asmus. Ship flowers to chairman, care the Joseph Foerster Co., 160 North Wabash avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Shipments should be made to arrive by 2 p. m. on examination days to receive attention from the committee. Express charges must be prepaid to destination and an entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week the plants are to be examined, or the money may accompany the blooms.

Seedlings and sports are both eligible to be shown before these committees, provided the grower has given them two years' trial to determine their true character, not less than six blooms of each variety to be shown. Special attention is called to the rule that sports, to receive a certificate, must pass at least three of the five committees. The committees will be in session to examine such exhibits as may be submitted to them each Saturday during October and November, the dates of which will be October 7, 14, 21 and 28; also November 4, 11, 18 and 25.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

Business has been on the increase, and practically all of the florists were extremely busy last week. Stock has improved. The stems of the carnations coming into the market now are getting longer than they have been for some time and the quality of the stock is much better. Roses are improved in size and color. Asters are about gone.

The Blossom Floral Co. is getting in its fall supplies and has many attractive novelties. The plant and cut flower trade of this firm has been brisk.

The Doswell Floral Co. will be cutting some October Frost and Chrysolora mums next week. Business has been good with this firm. Walter Butler, recently with the firm, has taken a position with A. G. Bieberich, Huntington, Indiana.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey are cutting some fine roses. This firm made a large shipment of orchids to St. Louis for the annual Veiled Prophet's ball. Miss Margaret Vesey, daughter of Judge Vesey and a member of the firm of W. J. & M. S. Vesey, sailed October 3 on the S. S. American Legion for Montevideo, Uraguay, South America. Miss Vesey has accepted the position of continental city secretary of the Y. W. C. A. for South America. Miss Vesey had charge of the Hostess House at Camp Taylor during the war and was later sent to Camp Pike. After the war closed she was occupied in the position of general secretary for the Louisville Y. W. C. A.

AMERICAN BULBS

BULB GROWING IN FLORIDA.

Godbey Tells of Career.

I took up bulb growing in an experimental way about twenty-five years ago, and after convincing myself that many of the imported bulbs could be grown with success in Florida, I decided about seven years ago to discontinue general farming and turn my hand to the florists' business, reasoning that if the florists in the north could buy a new lot of bulbs every year, plant them in expensive greenhouses, run fires night and day for six months and make a living out of it, I could, by growing bulbs where they bloom naturally in the open ground during the winter, also make it pay. So far the results have shown my reasoning to be correct.

I began my venture by planting 1,000 Chinese and 1,000 Paper White Narcissi, 1,000 gladioli, 100 Lilium Harrisii and twelve callas. One year later I set out some freesias, sweet peas and Asparagus plumosus. My stock of bulbs increased about fourfold each year, while my trade in cut flowers kept pace with the increase in bulbs. For the first six years, I only sold a few bulbs now and then, to let the greenhouse men in the north have a chance to try them out, believing that the time would come when I would have a surplus of bulbs for sale. Well, that time came, all right, and with it came a demand for many more bulbs than I wished to dispose of. My seventh year in the business I sold a carload of Chinese narcissus bulbs, all of which would have been taken by one man had I not decided that it was best to divide the stock among a number of florists who had already placed orders.

Planting Plans.

I begin planting bulbs about September 1 and continue until January 1, or later. It is my intention this year to plant 2,000 hyacinths, 2,000 tuberoses, 3,000 Lycopodium cernuum, 4,000 amaryllis, 12,000 Lilium giganteum and L. Harrisii, 30,000 gladioli, 30,000 callas, 35,000 Spanish irises, 30,000 Soleil d'Or, 200,000 Paper White and 600,000 Chinese narcissi. So far all of my bulbs have been free from disease and insects, except red spider on the callas.

I plant about 40,000 bulbs per acre and cultivate the fields with a mule and a small garden tractor. The fields are fertilized with cattle manure and commercial fertilizer. The bulbs are ready to dig about May 1. This early date of maturity is an advantage, because it gives the bulbs a long period of rest, which makes them better for early forcing than the bulbs which are grown anywhere else.

Blooming Dates.

Narcissi begin to bloom in this locality about November 1. Gladioli can be had in bloom every month of the year, while callas begin to bloom about November 1 and continue until June. Freesias bloom in February. When the bulbs are dug, cannas are planted in the same fields.

Canna roots grown in Florida are far superior to those grown in the north, where the forest kills them down, causing the sap to run down into the roots and to sour them. More than half of the canna roots sent to me from the north are soured and fail to grow, while those grown here never fail to grow. From what I have been able to learn, I have the most successful bulb farm in the United States, and this success is not due to any previous training. The adage, "There is more in the man than there is in the land," does not admit of a broad application. It only means that a man who is capable of being a farmer will find out what his land is good for, adapt himself to his environment and go after the crops best suited to his soil and climate. This is the only way that he can ever expect to get anywhere, for it is only by working in harmony with the laws of nature that anyone can succeed, and more especially a tiller of the soil. Nearly all of the failures in farming that have come under my observation were caused by men who persisted in trying to grow something to which their soil and climate were not suited.

It is evident that this part of Florida is especially suited to bulb growing. Our soil is Norfolk sandy loam, with clay about two feet from the surface and exceedingly level. It is free from stones and easy to work. The rainfall is sufficient and well distributed throughout the year. The soil here is like that of Holland, but our climate is warmer. Florida will soon be a land of bulbs and flowers.

BULBS IN CALIFORNIA.

Some of those who have tried growing bulbs in California have made a great deal of noise about it before they had demonstrated that their methods were successful, but L. H. Sutton Co., of Santa Cruz, has not sought publicity. Yet it is believed that Mr. Sutton was one of the earliest to start bulb growing in California and that his concern now is possibly the largest grower in the state. It probably has the largest stock of Paper Whites in the hands of any American grower. A friend of Mr. Sutton gives the following list "of the bulbs he has in the ground now":

900,000 Paper White Grandiflora;
150,000 Daffodils (different sorts, some of the best);
75,000 Callas, white;
10,000 Chinese Lilies;
10,000 Grand Soleil d'Or.
10,000 Pearl;
50,000 Liebesfeuer Gladioli;
5,000 Yellow Callas;
41,000 Now on the way from Holland, planting stock.
Odds and ends, from 1000 to 3000 of each.

It is said Mr. Sutton was the first to grow Freesia Purity in quantity in California.

BULBS AT FORTUNA, CAL.

Apropos of discussion in these columns concerning the growing in this country of bulbs which have been imported from abroad, Leslie Smith, manager of the Humboldt Evergreen Co., Fortuna, Cal., supplies the following information as to what his firm is doing along this line:

"We have been growing on a small scale for four years and are well pleased with the results so far. We have at the present time about 200,000 Paper Whites, 25,000 Emperor and 20,000 Von Sion daffodils, 10,000 N. poeticus ornatus and 10,000 Chinese lilies. Gladioli do well here, too, and we have about 5,000 Panama.

"All kinds of narcissi do well here. We have never had any bulbs tested for forcing, but will have some tested this year to determine what they will do.

"We have had fine success with Godfrey callas and are planting about an acre more this year than we have had previously. Lilium candidum grows wonderfully here. Some stalks which are growing in our yard without any attention at all have attained a height of over five feet, with as many as twenty-five and twenty-six blooms on the stalks. Several thousand scales of L. candidum are being planted here this year, and it is our intention to try several other kinds of lilies also.

"We have a fine climate here for growing, with our cool fogs in the summer and our warm winters. The coldest weather we have ever had was last winter, when the temperature went down to 20 degrees above zero."

DAHLIA SOCIETY MEETS

AMERICAN DAHLIA SOCIETY.

Eighth Annual Exhibition.

The eighth annual exhibition of the American Dahlia Society opened in the spacious roof gardens of the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, Tuesday, September 26, and continued until 10:30 p. m. the following Friday. It was the largest exhibition yet staged by the society, and, it was said by those who have seen the former shows, the largest ever staged.

The commercial section of the exhibition was prominent, so much so that the competitive exhibits were hard pushed for room. Confusion reigned throughout the first day; indeed, it was not until the afternoon of the second day that complete order came out of chaos. Of course, the management was open to criticism, not altogether unjustly, because the work of installing the exhibition devolved upon one head. Secretary Rathgeber was in control of every detail of the show, and it was too much for him. It is to be hoped that another year there will be a regularly constituted show manager and enough intelligent assistants to insure smooth working in the installation of what has come to be a pretty big annual show. A good deal of sympathy went out to the judges, who could not well locate their stagings, and whose work was unfinished at closing time of the first day.

Large Attendance.

The attendance was quite large, wonderful for a "one flower" show. The several passenger elevators of the big hotel, however, handled the visitors without any trouble or congestion. Visitors generally were amazed at the riot of color found in the two large halls, and it was not hard to realize that the dahlia was in full possession of its own.

Looking from one end of either hall to the other, the twenty-five years of dahlia development were laid out to view. The stretch from the old quilled variety of grandmother's day to the artistic blooms embraced in ten types seen today was in plain evidence.

Fine Seedlings.

While, practically, there was little new in character to be seen, the show was interesting because of the unusually large number of seedling flowers shown for the first time. Many of these appeared to show improvement upon existing varieties, but, as they were mostly staged on blocks, individual honors were not forthcoming, and the varieties will have to seek establishment in other ways.

One striking seedling, staged by Mills & Co., Mamaroneck, N. Y., a hybrid decorative named Miss Myra Valentine, a beautiful salmon mounted on perfect stems about four feet long, was awarded a special silver medal, and this was, perhaps, the top varietal feature of the show.

The judges were: James Duthie, Oyster Bay, N. Y.; Prof. J. B. S. Norton, Hyattsville, Md.; Prof. Geo. W. Fraser, Storrs, Conn.; John S. Vincent, White Marsh, Md.; M. E. Douglas, Woodbury, N. J.; Alt. The Annual Dinner.

The annual dinner was held Tuesday evening, September 26, in one of the large banquet rooms of the Hotel Pennsylvania. About thirty sat down at a large oval table, at the head of which President Richard Vincent, Jr., presided. Among the guests were some of the judges, and as these officials had to get back to their tasks of judging, the proceedings after the dinner were cut short. During the repast, the company was entertained with songs by Mrs. Callahan and Mrs. Martin, of New Haven, the former the efficient saleslady of William F. Jost, and the latter the wife of the manager of the New Haven detail establishment of Coombs' Flower Shoppe.

The Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the American Dahlia Society was held at the Hotel Pennsylvania Wednesday morning, September 27, with a fair attendance of members.

President Richard Vincent, Jr., said in his address:

"Today we stand, as a society, stronger and, we believe, better than a year ago, as we have had a fairly successful year, and it is our earnest wish that further prosperity may come to our society.

"Today we are showing you the triumph of the dahlia, for we believe that never in the history of a single flower show has there been a better exhibit of blooms than is to be seen in these halls today.

"Our finances are in a fairly good condition so far this season, by reason of the majority of our older members having come forward with their dues and new members having come in. Our bulletin, in the first two issues, practically paid for itself in advertisements, and although the third issue, or July number, did not have quite so many advertisements, yet it has paid the greater part of the expense of publication. If this exhibition pays out, as we have every reason to believe it will, we hope to have a fair balance left in the treasurer's hands that will help to further improvements.

"We aim to make the bulletin as instructive as possible, and our members can help to make it interesting to themselves and others by writing out their queries and experiences and sending them along for publication. There is a great deal for us all to learn, and often a query from an inexperienced grower, when answered, will aid others. We want you to show the bulletin to others, get them interested in dahlia culture and get a new member whenever possible for the society.

"Our trial grounds, both north and south, have been well supplied this season by growers of new varieties. They are and will be judged by competent judges, and reported upon by Prof. Jas. B. S. Norton and Prof. R. H. Patch, who have charge of them during the growing season, so that purchasers of these tested varieties can rest assured that they are up to the standard as quoted. Many thanks are due to the heads of the college and experiment stations for their kindness and assistance in this great work."

New By-laws.

A revised set of by-laws was presented by James Duthie, for the committee on by-laws. This set, with a few modifications, was adopted.

No financial report was forthcoming, the financial year not ending until January 1. It was stated, however, that the financial condition of the society was good, with a substantial balance in the treasury. It was ordered that the auditor's report be published in the society's bulletin as soon as possible after the close of the year.

Reports on the tests at the trial grounds at Storrs, Conn., and College Park, Md., were made by Prof. Patch and Prof. Norton. Their statements appeared to be quite satisfactory, and full reports were ordered to be printed in the bulletin.

Prof. Norton reported for the nomenclature committee and submitted proposed rules for the future guidance of the committee, receiving a vote of thanks for his work.

The question of application of state dahlia societies was brought up by Alt. F. Clark, and the subject was referred to the executive committee.

Election of officers resulted as follows: President, Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; secretary, William J. Rathgeber, New Haven, Conn.; treasurer, Mrs. Mabel Rathgeber, New Haven, Conn.; assistant treasurer, James Duthie, Oyster Bay, N. Y.

Vice-presidents were selected as follows: Geo. L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I.; Geo. W. Kerr, Doylestown, Pa.; James Duthie, Oyster Bay, N. Y.; W. W. Wilmore, Denver, Col.; J. W. Davies, San Francisco, Cal.; Mrs. C. H. Stout, Short Hills, N. J.

The executive committee chosen consists of I. S. Hendrickson, Flowerfield, N. Y.; C. Louis Alling, West Haven, Conn.; C. E. Walker, Paterson, N. J.; Edward Badetty, Huntington, N. Y.; Mrs. Stephen G. Van Hoesen, Plainfield, N. J.

The nomenclature committee comprises Prof. J. B. S. Norton, Maryland Agricultural College, Hyattsville, Md.; Dr. Marshall A. Howe, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx park, New York; Prof. Geo. W. Fraser, Willimantic,

FLORISTS HEAT WITH OIL

FLORISTS WHO USE OIL.

Beu Floral Co.

The ever-increasing interest in the burning of fuel oil instead of coal for heating purposes in greenhouses is given a further boost by the knowledge that C. W. Beu, proprietor of the Beu Floral Co., 4445 North Crawford avenue, Chicago, is not only burning and has burned oil for a number of years, but is also in a position to draw up plans and specifications for a heating apparatus which can be applied to any boiler, large or small, and which a florist can install himself at a small cost. Mr. Beu's system does away entirely with the possibility of the burners becoming clogged, as there are no burners.

The Beu Floral Co. has a range of 50,000 feet of glass, which it heats entirely with oil. The system in operation at this range has already proved its worth by maintaining a steady temperature of 60 and 65 degrees when the outside temperature was 12 degrees below zero. It was stated by Mr. Beu that the system could be left alone for one or two hours at a time, and then it was only necessary to glance in on it. He also stated that he had maintained 60 degrees during the winter on ten gallons of oil per hour.

A large storage space for the oil is found essential to economical operation of the oil-burning system, because, as Mr. Beu stated, in this way the florist has a chance to buy oil during the summer, when its price is lowest. He explained that, as fuel oil was only a by-product of crude oil and could be utilized in no other way than for fuel, its price was at the lowest level in the summer time, because the demand for gasoline is the largest in the summer, and, therefore, there was more fuel oil on hand to be disposed of, due to the increased operations of the refineries.

Mr. Beu has just completed the installation of two additional fuel oil tanks, with a combined capacity of 22,000 gallons. These tanks are of steel and are buried in the ground just outside the boiler room of the range. Mr. Beu was able to put in his supply of oil for the coming year at 5½ cents per gallon. The excavating for the outside tanks was undertaken by Mr. Beu and his employees, thinking in this way he could save a considerable sum of money on the job. The first four feet of digging, he explained, was easily accomplished, but below this they struck hard pan and then his difficulties began. Some of the soil was as hard as stone and Mr. Beu decided that he should have been better off if he had allowed a contractor to bring in a steam shovel to do the job.

He said that his experiences with this method of heating were so satisfactory and the care of the system so simple that he would never care to go back to using coal.

At Youngquist Range.

A comparatively short distance from the range of the Beu Floral Co. is the range of Henry Youngquist, at 3142 Foster avenue, Chicago. Mr. Youngquist has been using the oil-burning system for three years and was enthusiastic in his praise of this method of heating. His range consists of about 45,000 feet of glass. He has two storage tanks, one of which is just being installed, and a smaller one, making the total capacity 45,000 gallons. Mr. Youngquist explained that he burns between 75,000 and 90,000 gallons of oil per year, and he is using the Beu system. He specializes in ferns, and finds that, aside from the fact that the oil-burning system is much cleaner and easier to handle in every way, it is cheaper than heating with coal, not counting the saving in labor.

SAVINGS MADE WITH FUEL OIL.

Since writing the article on my experiences with fuel oil, which appeared in The Review September 14, I have had many questions to answer and I think they will be of interest to the readers at this time.

In the first place, we do not burn crude oil. Crude oil, as it comes from the wells, is sent to a refinery, where, I have been told, seventy per cent products are taken out, leaving a by-product called fuel oil. In other words, fuel oil to a refinery is like a cinder pile to a florist—in the way most of the time. The refinery must furnish and keep in repair cars to transport the oil, so when fuel oil is 50 cents a barrel they are not making much money on it, considering the fact that the refineries have to pay transportation charges on the crude oil from the wells to the refineries. These are the times to buy and buy heavily. Last year I bought 75,000 gallons at this price. The freight was 98 cents per barrel, and at this price the oil equaled coal bought at $3.50 per ton. In February I paid 80 cents per barrel at the refinery. I am giving these figures to show how a large storage tank pays for itself. The price on fuel oil today is $1.15 at the refinery and freight rates have been reduced to 90 cents per barrel. Fuel oil prices follow coal prices, both up and down. Fuel oil on the premises does not affect insurance, as it is not considered inflammable.

There are many advantages in burning fuel oil. There is no coal to shovel; there are no fires to clean, no ashes to wheel out and haul away, no combustion chambers to clean, no flues to punch, no coal to get in from the storage pile, where it has been depreciating, no coal to be wasted by banking fires when the steam is shut off and no wide-open dampers to let the heat go up the chimney. I feel that florists, in general, have not kept an account of their fuel as they should and really do not know what the cost is from the time it is on the track until the ashes are hauled away. I venture to say that in many cases it would be cheaper to burn oil at $7 than coal at $6 per ton. When the night fireman is out taking temperatures is the time the largest saving is made, for when he leaves the boiler room he fills the fire box so it will last until he gets back, which is about thirty per cent more than it would take by steady firing, and when he cleans his fires the houses usually suffer.

I have been making tests with my installation in other establishments where good coal is being burned and have found that I can evaporate as much water with ninety to 100 gallons of oil as they can with one ton of coal. Here are the figures for a 2-day test returned to me by one of our laundries: The coal consumption for this test period amounted to 5.75 tons, at $8.40 in the bin. This brought the cost to $48.30. The oil consumption amounted to 575 gallons, at 5.25 cents in the storage tank. This brought the cost to $30.18, bringing the balance in favor of oil to $18.12. The plant where the test was made operates nine hours per day, and the fireman had never burned oil before. In a year's time, figuring Sundays and holidays off, a saving of $2,772.36 will be the result. Then take away an investment of about $900 and you have a net saving per year of $1,872.36 the first year. Supposing this was a boiler in a greenhouse where the fire is kept twenty-four hours per day for seven months and twelve hours per day for two months, this would equal 5,760 hours of firing at $1.0066 per hour, or a saving of $5,798.02. KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

Stock is coming in more plentifully than it was. The quality is excellent. All demands were met by the market last week. Retail trade is brisk. Shipping business is good. In fact, the wholesalers are enjoying a better business than they anticipated for the early part of the season.

Various Notes.

The annual picnic of the Alpha Floral Co. was held Sunday, October 1, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alpha Elberfield, Overland Park, Kan.

The Kansas City Wholesale Cut Flower Co. is handling dahlias from Barkley & Moore. These flowers are of unusual quality this season.

C. P. Mueller, of Wichita, Kan., was in the city Friday, September 29.

The T. J. Noll Floral Co. is receiving regular shipments of California mums.

Isaac Bayersdorfer, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, called on the trade September 29.

Mr. and Mrs. John Klaus and Henry Kusik have arrived in New York after a six weeks' visit in Europe. They are expected home soon.

The Stuppy Supply Co. rounded out its first year of business October 1. Glenn K. Parker, vice-president and manager, says that if the coming year and each succeeding one shows the same growth and success, all concerned will be well satisfied.

George Williamson, yard foreman and salesman for the Chandler Landscape & Floral Co., died of heart disease September 21. He was at work as usual the day before his death. Through the night he was taken ill and he died early the next morning. Mr. Williamson had been in the employ of the firm for the last ten years.

E. D. Ellsworth, of The Rosery, has a plan to advance the sale of flowers which are plentiful on the market. Friday, September 29, he put a sign in front of his store, announcing that he would have a special sale of dahlias the next two days. He sold 1,000 dahlias the first of the sale days, using all of the supply that he had on hand. There was no great reduction in price. The fancy stock was sold at good prices, basket arrangements of different kinds were disposed of and some of the smaller flowers were used in funeral work. Mr. Ellsworth will follow the same plan with chrysanthemums when they are plentiful, and other flowers in season. He has recently made up some attractive baskets of tritomas and blue eupatorium. This combination of flowers has attracted much attention.

The Muehlebach Flower Shop decorated Adler's windows for the fall fashion show. In the windows of the millinery department oak leaves, ferns and baskets of cut flowers were used, with smilax covering the upper part of the window space. In the windows of the ready-to-wear department, panels of velvet in a rich blue shade were placed against a lattice of southern smilax and grape vines. Clusters of real grapes were fastened to these vines. On one of the panels clusters of fruit formed the main decoration and on the other Japanese lanterns were fastened.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Wirth, of Minneapolis, Minn., were in the city several days last week. Mr. Wirth is superintendent of parks in Minneapolis. He was here on business connected with the American Institute of Park Executives, which will hold its annual convention in this city in 1923.

W. L. Rock is chairman of the decorations committee of the Merchants' Association. This committee had charge of the decorations for the Priests of Pallas ball and the Fashion show, both being held in Convention hall. The decorating of Convention hall is on an elaborate scale. For the Fashion show the greater part of the north side of the hall has been transformed into a garden setting. A framework in the shape of an immense trellis is covered with vines, oak leaves and foliage in the autumn shades. In the center is a waterfall colored by electrical devices. At the lowest level of the fall is a bed of foliage and flowers. On either side of the waterfall, from the top level to the end of a runway extending about ninety feet from the flower bed into the main part of the hall, are rows of palms, ferns and foliage, with baskets of celosias. The scheme of decoration is one of the most elaborate ever used in Convention hall. For the Priests of Pallas ball the chief decorations will be large baskets of celosias and ferns hanging from the ceiling. Palms and ferns will also be used to some extent.

The first carload shipment of flowers ever made from here occurred last week, when S. Bryson Ayres made a shipment to Chicago buyers, Marshall Field & Co., the Boston Store and the Fair. The shipment consisted of the new creation of Mr. Ayres, known as Celosia Brysonia chrysantheflora. Mr. Ayres also has sold a shipment to W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J., to be used in an exhibition in New York.

The largest and most successful show ever given by the Kansas City Amateur Flower Gardeners' Association was held Saturday, September 30. There were seventy-two exhibitors at the show, a larger number than at any previous show. The variety and quality of flowers were decidedly creditable to an amateur exhibition. The W. L. Rock Flower Co., Rock's Gardens, the Chandler Landscape & Floral Co. and S. Bryson Ayres had beautiful exhibits, not entered for competition. J. E. K.

DUTCH BULBS

HEAT FOR DUTCH BULBS.

Although the writer is sure of 75 degrees temperature for forcing tulips and hyacinths, he would like to know if they can be forced late in the season in a temperature of 55 degrees. Will you advise as to this? S. B. J.—Colo.

Tulips and hyacinths, if wanted for sale in pots, can be forced in a temperature of 55 to 75 degrees after February 15. At the lower temperature, a longer time is taken for the flowers to develop. It is desirable not to give bulbous stock wanted for pot sale later in the season a high temperature. Let them come into the full light in a lower temperature, which will make them heartier and shorter in stem. Bulbous stock wanted for cut flowers, where long stems are desirable, should be given more heat and shade. This applies to hyacinths and early tulips only. Peter Pearson.

HYACINTHS FOR EASTER.

Will you tell me the best way to have good hyacinths for next Easter?
A. & J.—O.

Pot your bulbs sometime in October; soak them thoroughly after potting; barely cover them with soil. If you have a good, cold, unheated, but frostproof, cellar, there could be no better place in which to keep your hyacinths. You can bury them outdoors; this means considerable labor and, in the case of a severe winter, loss from frost in the form of broken pots or pans. In a cellar you will have no such trouble. Cover your pans with sand or fine coal ashes to a depth of two or three inches, but not for some weeks after potting. Several more waterings will be needed before this covering is placed on them. Hyacinths, if grown in large numbers, may be placed on shelves, tier over tier, putting an inch of sand on each and darkening the plants by means of cloths or burlap. Necessary moisture can be supplied, if the cellar is dry, by dampening the floor or by occasional sprayings.
C. W.

STORING BULBS.

We have tried many methods of covering our potted bulbs outside during the winter, but always have some sort of trouble, being bothered with snails eating into the shoots when straw and about eighteen inches of ashes were put on. Last year we did not put on as much ashes, with the result that the shoots came up against the frozen part and when we dug the pots out we found the shoots were doubled up and broken. This year we have a number of empty coldframes and should like to know if it would do to set the pots in the coldframes and lay boards across the top of the frames. If we did this, would it be necessary to use straw between the pots and boards and to cover the boards with dirt? H. W. Y. & S.—Pa.

Keeping Dutch bulbs in pots, pans or flats outdoors has many drawbacks and the most successful growers have now abandoned this method of storage. Pot breakages, freezings and difficulties in securing plants when wanted for forcing, to say nothing of the labor involved, all contribute to make this method of winter storage far from satisfactory. You could carry your bulbs satisfactorily over winter in frames. It would be well to put a good layer of dry sawdust around the sides of the frames, to exclude the frost. Before freezing weather comes, place six inches of sawdust over your bulbs. First, however, place a thin layer of sand over them, to prevent soil cleavage. You will find sawdust much warmer and more easily removed than the loam or ashes when you want to take out any bulbs, and if you have good matchboard shutters, which have had a coat of paint and will, therefore, shed water, to place over the bulbs, you will be all right. Dry leaves placed above the sawdust would help still further to exclude the frost, but in your section sawdust alone, if dry, should suffice. A cold, unheated cellar is, in my opinion, the ideal storage place for bulbs. They could be stored on shelves on which a layer of sand has been placed and several tiers can be placed one over the other. Burlap can be tacked around the shelves to exclude the light. C. W.

BULBOUS STOCK FOR EASTER.

I desire to grow a few tulips and narcissi in pots and pans for Mothers' day and Memorial day. Would I be successful if I left the potted bulbs in the cellar until about March 15 or March 20, placing them in frames at that time? I understand that the usual method is to take them out of the cellar in January. R. R.—Neb.

If you have a cold and frost-proof cellar, it will really be more satisfactory for your bulbs than keeping them outdoors buried in loam. For Mothers' day late varieties only should be used. Get the Darwin tulips, and only late narcissi, such as poeticus, will be of any use. For Easter do not plan on having any of the so-called early tulips and have only such trumpet narcissi as Victoria. It will take a couple of weeks for a late Easter to flower tulips and narcissi after they are removed from the cellar; much, of course, depends on the weather.

C. W.

CAN HE DO IT AGAIN?

Can he ever, ever do it again, excellent grower though he undoubtedly is? If he can repeat the performance frequently, other growers would be pleased to know how he does it. Is the startling result due, in any great degree, to the grower's skill, or is it due almost entirely to the eccentric generosity of Mother Nature? Did Nature, in a fit of kindness and jocularity, provide an exceptional sort of bulb, with transcendant possibilities wrapped up within it, and then develop these possibilities without any unusual aid from human hands? Is the grower of this lily a veritable magician, or is Nature the only magician in the case?

Such are some of the questions that are suggested by the first glance at the accompanying picture of a "freak" lily. The photograph was sent to The Review by the Floral Exchange, of Bellingham, Wash., with these remarks: "Enclosed is a photograph of a freak Lilium auratum, with 278 blooms. It was grown by E. T. Trimble, of this city, and was exhibited at a Bellingham fall flower show."

Since an auratum bulb, even with the best possible treatment, seldom produces more than fifteen to twenty blooms, the word "freak" seems to be applicable enough to the plant under consideration. Freaks, in general, are not considered especially beautiful; abnormalities often are deformities. Yet beauty and freakishness, or capriciousness, frequently are combined, in flowers and—so say the poets—in womankind. The two qualities are united in Lilium auratum. With its exquisite shades of white and crimson and gold, it is perhaps the most gorgeous beauty of the entire lily family. In indoor culture its capricious disposition seems to be no serious detriment, aside from the fact that many of the imported bulbs make a poor growth. The freakishness that manifests itself in the occasional production of a prodigious number of blooms would not distress any florist. Outdoors, however, one of the frequent caprices of this lily is to disappear entirely a year or two after being planted. Still, the right sort of treatment probably would prevent such desertion.

As a pot plant it is excellent, requiring about the same culture as the speciosum section. The flowers ordinarily are from six to ten inches in diameter and are deliciously fragrant, unless the perfume is too powerful to be delicious, as many people think it is. In popular parlance L. auratum is the gold-banded lily, the golden-rayed lily or the queen of lilies.

The Market.

Except for weddings, business has been quiet. The warm weather continues and people spend a great deal of their time outside. Garden flowers are still flourishing in their glory and an increase in trade cannot be expected before the colder weather comes in. September has been a good wedding month, and several of the florists report many orders booked for the first weeks of this month.

There is an abundance of all kinds of flowers and they are selling at reasonable prices. Roses, carnations, asters, dahlias, gladioli and mums are available in large quantities at reasonable prices, and there are probably more flowers than are required by the demand.

On account of the low prices, it takes a great many sales to make a reasonable total. A florist may, therefore, be the fireman had never burned oil before. In a year's time, figuring Sundays and holidays off, a saving of $2,772.36 will be the result. Then take away an investment of about $900 and you have a net saving per year of $1,872.36 the first year. Supposing this was a boiler in a greenhouse where the fire is kept twenty-four hours per day for seven months and twelve hours per day for two months, this would equal 5,760 hours of firing at $1.0066 per hour, or a saving of $5,798.02. KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

Stock is coming in more plentifully than it was. The quality is excellent. All demands were met by the market last week. Retail trade is brisk. Shipping business is good. In fact, the wholesalers are enjoying a better business than they anticipated for the early part of the season.

Various Notes.

The annual picnic of the Alpha Floral Co. was held Sunday, October 1, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alpha Elberfield, Overland Park, Kan.

The Kansas City Wholesale Cut Flower Co. is handling dahlias from Barkley & Moore. These flowers are of unusual quality this season.

C. P. Mueller, of Wichita, Kan., was in the city Friday, September 29.

The T. J. Noll Floral Co. is receiving regular shipments of California mums.

Isaac Bayersdorfer, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, called on the trade September 29.

Mr. and Mrs. John Klaus and Henry Kusik have arrived in New York after a six weeks' visit in Europe. They are expected home soon.

The Stuppy Supply Co. rounded out its first year of business October 1. Glenn K. Parker, vice-president and manager, says that if the coming year and each succeeding one shows the same growth and success, all concerned will be well satisfied.

George Williamson, yard foreman and salesman for the Chandler Landscape & Floral Co., died of heart disease September 21. He was at work as usual the day before his death. Through the night he was taken ill and he died early the next morning. Mr. Williamson had been in the employ of the firm for the last ten years.

E. D. Ellsworth, of The Rosery, has a plan to advance the sale of flowers which are plentiful on the market. Friday, September 29, he put a sign in front of his store, announcing that he would have a special sale of dahlias the next two days. He sold 1,000 dahlias the first of the sale days, using all of the supply that he had on hand. There was no great reduction in price. The fancy stock was sold at good prices, basket arrangements of different kinds were disposed of and some of the smaller flowers were used in funeral work. Mr. Ellsworth will follow the same plan with chrysanthemums when they are plentiful, and other flowers in season. He has recently made up some attractive baskets of tritomas and blue eupatorium. This combination of flowers has attracted much attention.

The Muehlebach Flower Shop decorated Adler's windows for the fall fashion show. In the windows of the millinery department oak leaves ferns and baskets of cut flowers were used, with smilax covering the upper part of the window space. In the windows of the ready-to-wear department, panels of velvet in a rich blue shade were placed against a lattice of southern smilax and grape vines. Clusters of real grapes were fastened to these vines. On one of the panels clusters of fruit formed the main decoration and on the other Japanese lanterns were fastened.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Wirth, of Minneapolis, Minn., were in the city several days last week. Mr. Wirth is superintendent of parks in Minneapolis. He was here on business connected with the American Institute of Park Executives, which will hold its annual convention in this city in 1923.

W. L. Rock is chairman of the decorations committee of the Merchants' Association. This committee had charge of the decorations for the Priests of Pallas ball and the Fashion show, both being held in Convention hall. The decorating of Convention hall is on an elaborate scale. For the Fashion show the greater part of the north side of the hall has been transformed into a garden setting. A framework in the shape of an immense trellis is covered with vines, oak leaves and foliage in the autumn shades. In the center is a waterfall colored by electrical devices. At the lowest level of the fall is a bed of foliage and flowers. On either side of the waterfall, from the top level to the end of a runway extending about ninety feet from the flower bed into the main part of the hall, are rows of palms, ferns and foliage, with baskets of celossias. The scheme of decoration is one of the most elaborate ever used in Convention hall. For the Priests of Pallas ball the chief decorations will be large baskets of celosias and ferns hanging from the ceiling. Palms and ferns will also be used to some extent.

The first carload shipment of flowers ever made from here occurred last week, when S. Bryson Ayres made a shipment to Chicago buyers, Marshall Field & Co., the Boston Store and the Fair. The shipment consisted of the new creation of Mr. Ayres, known as Celosia Brysonia chrysantheflora. Mr. Ayres also has sold a shipment to W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J., to be used in an exhibition in New York.

The largest and most successful show ever given by the Kansas City Amateur Flower Gardeners' Association was held Saturday, September 30. There were seventy-two exhibitors at the show, a larger number than at any previous show. The variety and quality of flowers were decidedly creditable to an amateur exhibition. The W. L. Rock Flower Co., Rock's Gardens, the Chandler Landscape & Floral Co. and S. Bryson Ayres had beautiful exhibits, not entered for competition. J. E. K.

DUTCH BULBS

HEAT FOR DUTCH BULBS.

Although the writer is sure of 75 degrees temperature for forcing tulips and hyacinths, he would like to know if they can be forced late in the season in a temperature of 55 degrees. Will you advise as to this? S. B. J.—Colo.

Tulips and hyacinths, if wanted for sale in pots, can be forced in a temperature of 55 to 75 degrees after February 15. At the lower temperature, a longer time is taken for the flowers to develop. It is desirable not to give bulbous stock wanted for pot sale later in the season a high temperature. Let them come into the full light in a lower temperature, which will make them heartier and shorter in stem. Bulbous stock wanted for cut flowers, where long stems are desirable, should be given more heat and shade. This applies to hyacinths and early tulips only. Peter Pearson.

HYACINTHS FOR EASTER.

Will you tell me the best way to have good hyacinths for next Easter?

A. & J.—O.

Pot your bulbs sometime in October; soak them thoroughly after potting; barely cover them with soil. If you have a good, cold, unheated, but frostproof, cellar, there could be no better place in which to keep your hyacinths. You can bury them outdoors; this means considerable labor and, in the case of a severe winter, loss from frost in the form of broken pots or pans. In a cellar you will have no such trouble. Cover your pans with sand or fine coal ashes to a depth of two or three inches, but not for some weeks after potting. Several more waterings will be needed before this covering is placed on them. Hyacinths, if grown in large numbers, may be placed on shelves, tier over tier, putting an inch of sand on each and darkening the plants by means of cloths or burlap. Necessary moisture can be supplied, if the cellar is dry, by dampening the floor or by occasional sprayings.

C. W.

STORING BULBS.

We have tried many methods of covering our potted bulbs outside during the winter, but always have some sort of trouble, being bothered with snails eating into the shoots when straw and about eighteen inches of ashes were put on. Last year we did not put on as much ashes, with the result that the shoots came up against the frozen part and when we dug the pots out we found the shoots were doubled up and broken. This year we have a number of empty coldframes and should like to know if it would do to set the pots in the cold frames and lay boards across the top of the frames. If we did this, would it be necessary to use straw between the pots and boards and to cover the boards with dirt? H. W. Y. & S.—Pa.

Keeping Dutch bulbs in pots, pans or flats outdoors has many drawbacks and the most successful growers have now abandoned this method of storage. Pot breakages, freezings and difficulties in securing plants when wanted for forcing, to say nothing of the labor involved, all contribute to make this method of winter storage far from sat isfactory. You could carry your bulbs satisfactorily over winter in frames. It would be well to put a good layer of dry sawdust around the sides of the frames, to exclude the frost. Before freezing weather comes, place six inches of sawdust over your bulbs. First, however, place a thin layer of sand over them, to prevent soil cleavage. You will find sawdust much warmer and more easily removed than the loam or ashes when you want to take out any bulbs, and if you have good matchboard shutters, which have had a coat of paint and will, therefore, shed water, to place over the bulbs, you will be all right. Dry leaves placed above the sawdust would help still further to exclude the frost, but in your section sawdust alone, if dry, should suffice. A cold, unheated cellar is, in my opinion, the ideal storage place for bulbs. They could be stored on shelves on which a layer of sand has been placed and several tiers can be placed one over the other. Burlap can be tacked around the shelves to exclude the light. C. W.

BULBOUS STOCK FOR EASTER.

I desire to grow a few tulips and narcissi in pots and pans for Mothers' day and Memorial day. Would I be successful if I left the potted bulbs in the cellar until about March 15 or March 20, placing them in frames at that time? I understand that the usual method is to take them out of the cellar in January. R. R.—Neb.

If you have a cold and frost-proof cellar, it will really be more satisfactory for your bulbs than keeping them outdoors buried in loam. For Mothers' day late varieties only should be used. Get the Darwin tulips, and only late narcissi, such as poeticus, will be of any use. For Easter do not plan on having any of the so-called early tulips and have only such trumpet narcissi as Victoria. It will take a couple of weeks for a late Easter to flower tulips and narcissi after they are removed from the cellar; much, of course, depends on the weather.

CAN HE DO IT AGAIN?

Can he ever, ever do it again, excellent grower though he undoubtedly is? If he can repeat the performance frequently, other growers would be pleased to know how he does it. Is the startling result due, in any great degree, to the grower's skill, or is it due almost entirely to the eccentric generosity of Mother Nature? Did Nature, in a fit of kindness and jocularity, provide an exceptional sort of bulb, with transcendant possibilities wrapped up within it, and then develop these possibilities without any unusual aid from human hands? Is the grower of this lily a veritable magician, or is Nature the only magician in the case?

Such are some of the questions that are suggested by the first glance at the accompanying picture of a "freak" lily. The photograph was sent to The Review by the Floral Exchange, of Bellingham, Wash., with these remarks: "Enclosed is a photograph of a freak Lilium auratum, with 278 blooms. It was grown by E. T. Trimble, of this city, and was exhibited at a Bellingham fall flower show."

Since an auratum bulb, even with the best possible treatment, seldom produces more than fifteen to twenty blooms, the word "freak" seems to be applicable enough to the plant under consideration. Freaks, in general, are not considered especially beautiful; abnormalities often are deformities. Yet beauty and freakishness, or capriciousness, frequently are combined, in flowers and—so say the poets—in womankind. The two qualities are united in Lilium auratum. Various Notes.

At present the chief talk among members of the F. T. D. is the annual meeting. All the "old guard" from Toronto will be there, with many of the recruits. Some of them may possibly make the trip by motor.

On account of the abundance of flowers, window effects are beautiful. Autumn windows with oak leaves, ferns, etc., backing up the various bright colors of the dahlias and asters, make striking displays, which occasion many favorable comments.

W. E. Groves, Hamilton, ex-president of the Canadian Gardeners' and Florists' Association, is to speak to the Kiwanis Club, Parkdale, Toronto, October 12.

PALLS OF SWEET PEAS.

A casket blanket, or pall, may be made of one or several of a wide variety of flowers. It may be made simply or pretentiously, and the appearance may be varied by the combination made of the flowers used.

In the accompanying illustrations are examples of how sweet peas may be used in such a blanket. In one the sweet peas are spread over the surface thickly and evenly, giving the appearance of a solid area of bloom. In the other the peas are arranged in clusters, which are set off by rows of adiantum.

Most blankets make use of the central panel arrangement. In one of these the panel is made of sweet peas and adiantum arranged to protrude conspicuously above the surrounding flowers. In the other, roses and adiantum are used for this focal point of decoration. The edging in both cases is of adiantum.

Both of these blankets were made at the store of the Hollywood Gardens, at Seattle, Wash., recently for the funerals of prominent citizens. This firm is called upon to supply a great deal of work of this character, and the examples shown give evidence of the character of the work turned out.

CLEVELAND, O.

The Market.

With last week asters and gladioli practically came to an end. There are a few stragglers, but carnations are gradually replacing asters, and mums will soon more than take the place of gladioli. The few asters arriving are short-stemmed and come mostly in dark colors, while the gladioli are in mixed varieties and small. Carnations are getting better daily, but come generally in white.

Roses are improving daily in quality and quantity. The demand is mostly for Ophelia, Columbia and Premier.

Easter lilies are greatly in demand and a crop is beginning to arrive which will about take care of the demand. Valley is moving nicely, but the price remains extremely high. Dahlias are slow in arriving; the few good ones that arrive are taken quickly. A few mums have made their appearance.

There has been a slight increase in the demand for stock the last week and, from all indications, the winter business bids fair to be exceptional. Prices are moderate for this season of the year. The days have been warm and the nights cool, with one or two killing frosts in some sections.

Horticultural Society Meets.

At a meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society Tuesday evening, September 26, the handsome silver cup awarded to the society's float in the recent automobile parade was presented. James P. Cozzens made the presentation and President Andrew J. Dorward accepted the cup on behalf of the society.

There were two visitors present from Boston, Peter Dewar and Frank Murray, both of whom spoke briefly. James Robertson exhibited a number of fine dahlias. His Insulinde was awarded a silver medal and his Silver Pink received a certificate of merit. California Enchantress, a gigantic pink cactus, was given a cultural certificate of merit.

Bruce Butterton and John T. Allan were appointed a committee to cooperate with the Civic League's committee to see to the proper fertilization of the school gardens. A basket of flowers was sent to Howard G. Ward, a member of the society, who is now in the hospital. Mrs. W. Richards, of Tiverton, a dahlia specialist, was elected an associate member.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

The Market.

Roses, which were scarce the early part of last week, are now on again in full crop, and the wholesale houses are beginning to take on a summer-time appearance on this item. The supply of long-stemmed roses is particularly heavy, and they are not moving to advantage, while all short grades are clearing well.

Asters and gladioli are coming in daily, but the quality is not of the best and, due to several heavy frosts, lasting qualities have been impaired. The finest dahlias ever seen on the Buffalo market are arriving now in large quantities and are clearing quickly.

Valley is arriving in large quantities, with a demand scarcely equal to the supply. Easter lilies are still scarce, and it appears as if all the growers in this section are off crop at the same time.

The present market conditions are unsettled, with the dealers following a line of watchful waiting rather than one of regular buying. However, as we are now entering into the month of October and the real opening of the season, business will certainly become more settled and will commence running smoothly.

George McCallum, Henry Blend, E. M. Nigel and John Walley, of the McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., were visiting the local branch of the company last week.

E. N. Button & Son, of Fredonia, N. Y., are cutting some fine roses and carnations at the present time.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

There was a perceptible stiffening along the line last week; the elimination of outdoor blooms and the fact that the indoor stock has not reached its height made the supply much short of the demand. Weddings and funerals have been numerous, keeping the market short. White roses commanded almost any price that the possessor wanted to ask, with white carnations and asters in great demand. Never has the opening of the fall season been so active as is this one, and there is every appearance that the winter will be a record-breaker.

S. S. Skidelsky, of New York, was in the city last week on business.

Robert Lamont has just completed the installation of oil burners at the Quidnick Greenhouses, at Quidnick.

Edward Brooke, of T. J. Johnston & Co., has returned from a vacation, which he spent on a fishing cruise down Narragansett bay. W. H. M.

WORCESTER, MASS.

Ideal autumn weather prevails here. Outdoor stock was about demolished by a frost that came upon this community the morning of September 26. Dahlias, cosmos, marigolds and other annuals were badly blackened. As this frost came early and when there was a rather brisk demand, the retailer and grower feel the loss considerably. Of course, with good weather, which we usually get in October, delphiniums, late gladioli, scabiosa, calendulas, bachelor's buttons and the like should be on the market for some time longer. There are no great displays of winter flowers, such as mums, carnations, roses, etc. The demand is greater than the supply of stock in most cases.

In spite of the coal shortage, it looks as though the trade will "carry on" just the same. The trade anticipates brisk business the coming season.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

There is no change in the condition of the cut flower market, and if the wonderfully fine weather enjoyed for many days continues, none can be expected. Rarely at this season can such a continuance of fine weather be expected. The country around New York is dry, and showers would be welcomed by the nurserymen and others engaged in outside operations.

Asters are having an unusual run and form the bulk of the daily arrivals. And it may be said that among the offerings are some flowers as tall as chrysanthemums from single stems, bringing easily 50 cents per dozen flowers. Gladioli still clog the market to a considerable extent and move in proportion to the price asked for them.

Chrysanthemum arrivals are increasing, Golden Glow and October Frost being seen everywhere, as also are the forerunners of the outdoor types, in pompons and the like. Of course, quality is not a great factor in the offerings, but the best stock brings as much as $4 per hundred.

Roses are in good supply, but they meet only a moderate demand. With a little flurry for requirements, prices go up a bit, and as speedily come down, so that it cannot be said that there is any change from last-quoted prices—the one thing of note is that he who has great needs at the time of a shortage must pay the price.

American Beauty is in liberal supply, rather greater than the demand can readily absorb. Hybrid teas seem to meet requirements adequately at the prices last quoted.

The carnation supply is increasing week by week, but there is no quality, and the offerings largely meet just funeral work demands. The price range is stationary, at $1 to $3 per hundred.

More cattleyas are arriving than the demand will care for; yet the price holds up to $1.25 per flower for the best.

The supply of white lilies is less than for some time, and the price of top grades has gone to the $30 mark. Lilies of the valley are in ample supply, and prices are down to $6 to $8 for top grades.

Outdoor flowers still more or less dominate the market. Dahlias are at their best, and when the quality of arrivals is good they move freely. Tritomas, tuberoses, calendulas, feverfew, candytuft, eupatorium, ageratum, cornflowers, strawflowers and cosmos form the bulk of the offerings.

Various Notes.

Monday, October 9, is the date for the next meeting of the New York Florists' Club, at the club's quarters in the Engineering Societies' building. The question of meeting quarters for the ensuing year will be settled at this meeting.

Rigo, chairman, care of the Henshaw Floral Co., 35 West Fifteenth street. GARDENERS' SCHOOL OPENS.

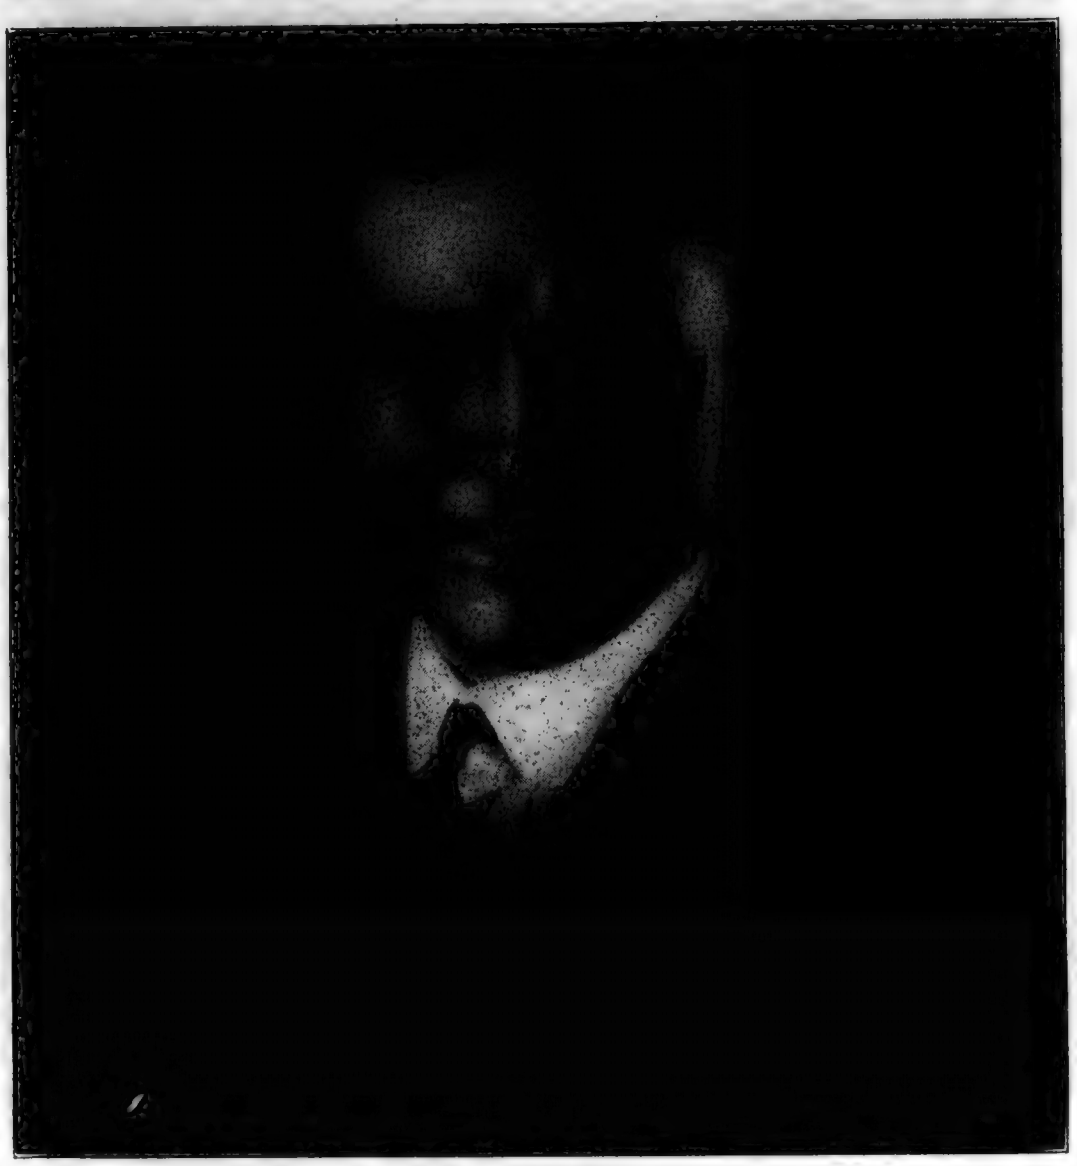
The course of training for young gardeners that has been introduced by the Massachusetts Agricultural College, cooperating with the National Association of Gardeners, opened its first term September 27, with a number of students enrolled. Judging from the number of inquiries that have been received both by the college and the association, the success of the course already seems assured.



This course of training is the first of its kind ever offered in this country and gives an excellent opportunity to young men who wish to engage in the profession of gardening, or in some of the branches of commercial horticulture, to secure a thorough theoretical experience as well as a practical one.

The general plan of instruction is based upon the 2-year course already in successful operation at Massachusetts Agricultural College. Students fitted to take the course will be admitted each year in September, and will remain in residence at the college for six months. During this time they will pursue general studies in fruit, flower and vegetable growing, forestry, general horticulture and such elementary subjects as may be necessary. These classes will close the last week in March and students will be sent to various commercial establishments and private estates for a summer of practical work. Every effort will be made to see that students are advantageously placed, so as to secure the best possible experience; and this summer's apprenticeship will be supervised by a committee representing jointly the Massachusetts Agricultural College and the National Association of Gardeners.

At the end of the summer students will return to the college for an additional period of nine months' study. They will thus complete this part of the course in the following June, and if successful in passing the examinations which will be given at this time, they will receive a certificate from the college. From this point they will enter upon an apprenticeship of two years, to be arranged and supervised by the National Association of Gardeners. At the end of this time they will be examined by a special board, and, if successful, will receive the diploma of the National Association of Gardeners.

This work will all be under the cooperative management of the Massachusetts Agricultural College and the National Association of Gardeners. The immediate direction of instruction will

OBITUARY.

Adam Reed.

Adam Reed, of Zanesville, O., passed away September 8. The deceased was well known as the president of the Zane Pottery Co., of South Zanesville, O., which has built a large trade among florists for pots and other supplies.

Mrs. Ann Ellis Currie.

Mrs. Ann Ellis Currie, of 511 Vermont place, Columbus, O., the wife of R. A. Currie, the well known florist, died early Sunday, September 17, from complications following an operation. The deceased was 71 years of age.

The husband of the deceased, R. A. Currie, who has been with the Fifth Avenue Floral Co., of Columbus, for the last twenty-one years, is well known to many of the old-timers in Philadelphia and Cincinnati, where he spent a great part of his long career in the profession in which he is to this day actively engaged.

Besides her husband, the deceased is survived by four daughters: Miss Elizabeth Currie, Mrs. C. E. Conn, Mrs. Ralph Merrill and Mrs. E. M. Preston; three sons: W. A. Currie, R. A. Currie, Jr., and G. F. Currie; eight grandchildren, one sister and two brothers.

AT STUPPY FUNERAL.

There was a gorgeous display of floral offerings at the funeral of Frank X. Stuppy, which was held in the cathedral at St. Joseph, Mo., Thursday morning, September 28, at 10 o'clock. About a hundred pieces were sent by friends in St. Joseph and different parts of the United States. Employees of the Stuppy Floral Co. made a blanket of Annie Laurie roses and lilies of the valley. Six hundred roses were used and 400 lilies of the valley. This variety of rose was Mr. Stuppy's own development and had never been put on the market, though it was displayed at the national flower show. The use of the rose on his casket marked the first time it was ever outside of the greenhouse except for show purposes. A large wreath, made of celosias in the blended shades and tied with ribbon in corresponding tones, was of flowers which Mr. Stuppy had cut the morning of the day of his death. He had cut the flowers for one of his sisters. This wreath was made by the employees of the Stuppy Floral Co. and elicited much admiration. Seldom has been seen such an elaborate display of floral tributes as was at the home.

The active pallbearers were Fred Keller, George Groves, Cliff Pruner, Carl Chessmore, Ralph Benhouten and George Roche.

The honorary pallbearers were Samuel Murray, Arthur Newell, William L. Rock, of Kansas City; Irving Frey, of Lincoln, Neb.; Jacob Hess, Omaha, Neb., and David Geddis, St. Louis, Mo. Among the out-of-town friends who attended the funeral were Irving Frey and Ray Frey, Lincoln, Neb.; Glenn Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Ia.; Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis, Minn.; Jacob Hess, Omaha, Neb.; Mr. and Mrs. R. CARBIDE KILLS TERMITES.

In The Review for September 21, A. F. C., of Alabama, asked for a remedy for termites on mums. If he will use carbide, a lump as large as the end of his finger, to one square foot of soil, he will find that he will quickly be rid of wood ants. The soil, when applying, should be fairly wet. Then a hole should be punched with the finger and a bit of carbide dropped in and covered over. The gas either kills the ants or drives them out.

WINTERING HYDRANGEAS.

In last week's issue of The Review appeared a question and answer in regard to the hardiness of French hydrangeas.

We have had our collection of French hydrangeas, including about fifty varieties, in the field for the last six years, and none of the plants has frozen down yet, though we had a temperature of 18 below. After the branches are frozen, we cut them off and throw about four inches of leaves or manure over the stock. They come all right in the spring, and every bottom shoot will bloom.

We recommend French hydrangeas to everyone for planting out. They make the same show as peonies and after blooming are still a plant for the eye to feast on. By all means push them for park and cemetery use; they are worth it.

The usefulness of this plant is not yet fully understood; it is as good for the florist as for the nurseryman. It produces wonderful cut flowers if planted in the field as suggested above.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Chicago, Ill.—The first meeting of creditors of the Everette R. Peacock Co., which was adjudicated bankrupt April 15, will be held at 11 a. m., October 10, at the office of Sidney C. Eastman, referee in bankruptcy, room 907, Monadnock block, 53 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago.

Lebanon, Pa.—Notice has been given by L. Raymond Riegert, referee in bankruptcy, that John L. Bernstein was adjudged bankrupt September 26. As was noted in The Review, the accounting of C. M. Seltzer, receiver, was filed in the Court of Common Pleas September 18. The first meeting of creditors will be held at the courthouse, room No. 4, Wednesday, October 11.

Chicago, Ill.—The receiver for the Western Pottery Co., in bankruptcy, sold the assets September 20, to R. C. Mazer, E. C. Blanko and A. W. Bookham, for $55,000. It is stated that an appraisal of the assets made for the receiver showed a total of $146,000. The creditors should receive about 45 cents on the dollar, it is said. The purchasers of the assets state that they will organize a strong corporation to carry on and develop the business. F. W. Haeger has been engaged as sales manager.

Summitville, Ind.—M. E. Goode, who has sold his business at Alexandria, Ind., plans to enter the florists' business in this city.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Mrs. Scott and Mrs. Eilmann, daughters of William Edlefsen, are about to open a new Edlefsen flower store at Third and State streets. The A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, is outfitting the store.

Wamego, Kan.—Mrs. S. Elinor Yantz has sold her flower shop to Vilven & Sons, who are erecting a greenhouse in connection with the business. Mrs. Yantz started the business two years ago, the only one in the town, and made a splendid success of it. She will leave early in October for Denver, Colo.

Pleasant Hill, Mo.—R. L. Isherwood, of Chillicothe, Mo., bought the greenhouses of the Pinehurst Floral Co. at the recent sale by the receiver and will run them under the style of the Isherwood Floral Co. Mr. Isherwood expects to bring this place up to the minute by spending approximately $20,000 in improvements and stocks. The firm is growing 50,000 ferns of all sizes, 80,000 roses, 40,000 carnations and 30,000 mums, besides pot plants of many kinds.

Valparaiso, Ind.—Reinhart & Adams have removed from 70 South Washington street and now are located in a new store at 123 Lincoln way.

Joplin, Mo.—The Joplin Greenhouse is now under new management, being operated by E. B. Mohr. He is conducting the business from the greenhouse, at 2004 Bird street.

Bloomington, Ill.—Arthur J. Graves, manager of the Maplewood Greenhouses, has returned from Cleveland, O., where he was honored by being made a Mason in the thirty-third degree.

Lewiston, Ida.—P. F. Stillings and C. T. Emery, proprietors of the Lewiston Flower Shop, have just completed a new greenhouse, 29x80, of pipe-frame construction. This gives the firm a range of six houses, with a total area of more than 13,000 square feet. The firm is both grower and retailer. Cut flowers and pot plants are grown. This summer about 30,000 gladioli were grown for the blooms. Besides local business, a fine shipping trade is enjoyed, as three branch railroads radiate out of here. It is the company's proud boast that, in seven years of business, an order has never been refused because it was too large.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

NEMESIAS.

Have you ever grown nemesias? If not, get a packet of Nemesia strumosa, either mixed or in separate colors, and sow it now. The seeds are extremely fine and light, and should be lightly covered with fine sand. When the seedlings are of sufficient size, prick them off in flats and later pot them off singly. Always grow them moderately cool; 45 degrees to 50 degrees at night is ample. The plants will flower in February and March, and 6-inch or 7-inch pots or deep pans are of ample size. Give the plants one pinching and use a light, but fairly rich, soil at the final potting. The nemesias are South African annuals and are among the most strikingly beautiful of pot plants. Groups of them at spring shows in New York and Boston always excite great admiration. The flowers are well adapted for cutting and surely no more beautiful pot plant can be conceived than a well flowered nemesia.

STEVIAS.

You cannot afford to run any risk with stevias, the useful winter-blooming plants. Remember that they can be grown under glass successfully at any temperature above 32 degrees, but you must not subject them to the least breath of frost or they will be ruined. An early batch placed at the end of a carnation house now will start flowering in November. Later batches are being held outdoors or in a cold pit and will be brought in from time to time in order to give a succession of flowers until March. While the dwarf stevia makes a neat pot plant, it is the tall one that is far the best for cutting. Stevias can be had two to three feet long, if wanted, and the plants, when headed back, give a useful secondary crop.

BUDDLEIA ASIATICA.

The beautiful, graceful and lusciously fragrant winter-flowering plant, Buddleia asiatica, commonly known as the Chinese winter-flowering lilac, is a most useful one for country florists, and nothing is more lovely in sprays or funeral designs. It will probably never be a plant that will fill a large place in the wholesale markets, but its rapidity of growth, ease of culture and remarkable floriferousness are all great factors in its favor.

Plants grown from spring cuttings are now four feet high and bushy, and some carried over in tubs are seven to eight feet high and nearly as much across. Plants are best grown outdoors during summer, but now that nights are growing cooler, the plants should have the protection of a greenhouse for an early Christmas crop of flowers. Give the plants a night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees. For later use, keep them in a cold house just clear of freezing, where they can be held, if necessary, as late as the end of March. The plants should be pinched until the middle of August to make them bushy. Buddleias want much watering and feeding and, if they are generously treated, will yield a remarkable quantity of flowers. A plant set out at the end of any greenhouse in good soil and abundantly watered will prove one of the most valuable subjects any grower can have. Try one or two and be convinced.

HARDY PRIMROSES.

If you have a cool house—never mind if it is not an up-to-date one—where a minimum of 40 degrees can be maintained, there are a number of bench crops which will pay well. Among these are violets, pansies and hardy primroses. The single violets succeed well at 5 degrees lower temperature than doubles. The hardy primulas and pansies each like a cold house and, in the case of the former, it is an advantage to let the plants have one or two freezings before housing. The common English primrose proves popular for bunching, and the giant yellow and white polyanthus, which have longer stems and carry a number of flowers on each, are splendid for cutting. Towards spring, flower buyers always eagerly buy these harbingers of spring. When they are done flowering, do not throw the plants away, but divide them and plant them out as you would violets, preferably where they can have a little shade.

ANTIRRHINUMS.

While not in reality annuals, antirrhinums are usually treated as such and have come to be among the most widely grown greenhouse plants we have. There are times when they become somewhat overabundant, this usually happening in April or May. The average small grower, not dependent on wholesale markets for all his flowers, will find snapdragons, to use the common name, among the finest of all flowers for cutting. Good points to consider are that the plants will flower from September until June, if well treated, and will produce a constant succession of flowers for practically all that period. In midwinter they may stand still a little during dark, cold weather, but how speedily they respond as the days lengthen and the sun's rays strengthen! Our earliest snapdragons, planted in benches in August, are now producing their first crop. The stems are not long, but the flowers are now welcome and useful and, by cutting the spikes down fairly low, a fine new crop of shoots will push up, and many of these will flower for Christmas.

Let your snapdragons dry out well between waterings. Do not spray them overhead; dampen the leaves as little as you can when watering. Do not coddle the plants. They take much fresh air; a night temperature of 45 to 48 degrees is plenty. You will find this an excellent crop to follow mums with and, of course, bright pink is much the best selling color. Remember always that seedlings are more disease-proof and much more vigorous than plants produced from cuttings.

CANTERBURY BELLS.

If you want to grow some canterbury bells in pots, lift them now with a nice ball and place them in 6-inch or 8-inch pots, according to their size. After potting, stand them in an open, sunny spot outdoors and leave them there until the plants have had several freezings. Before frost severe enough to break the pots arrives store the plants in a cold-frame and cover them with dry leaves. Put a sash over them until you want to house them. This need not be until after Christmas, as only indifferent success attends early forcing of this plant.

Perhaps you may grow some of the chimney flower, campanula. C. pyramidalis, a stately, late-summer bloomer, still gives a good account of itself. Any plants in the open ground can be lifted and potted now. Treat them much the same as canterbury bells. There is no more beautiful or stately plant in a large pot or tub than Campanula pyramidalis and the plant flowers for such a long period that it is of great value where nice summer-blooming plants are wanted. Both blue and white colors of the chimney flower are obtainable and it is sufficiently hardy outdoors to come safely through the winter where the minimum temperature falls to 20 degrees below zero.

HELIOTROPES.

Since the plants are popular for their delicious fragrance, no florist doing any retail trade can afford to overlook heliotropes, or "cherry pie" plants, as they are sometimes called. They are sometimes benched for winter flowering, but have more uses as outdoor bedding plants. Cuttings root with the greatest ease and winter best in a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees. These plants also make fine standards, but the writer finds that seedlings are better than cuttings for this purpose, possessing, as they do, much greater vigor. Many people fail to make heliotrope flowers keep when cut; like a number of other flowers, they should have the bottoms of their stems either seared with fire or dipped in hot water as soon as they are cut; if then placed in cold water, they will keep plump as long as almost any other flower. If you want to get a really nice flower bed another season, plant it with white verbenas, white vincas or white petunias and use dot plants of heliotropes through it; these should rise well above the other plants.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

ADVERTISING is the sunlight of business.

PERHAPS it can be blamed on the new tariff; perhaps not. At any rate, the price of chiffons has gone up.

ANY florist who does spring bedding should be in position to make lawns and do fall planting. There is good money in it.

WARM autumn weather last week checked the steadily rising tide of cut flower demand, but increased production. The condition was general all over the United States.

UNEMPLOYMENT declined during August, and the end of the coal and railroad strikes now brings the number of unemployed below the normal number idle at this season, according to report.

WE want to see the low-grade coal mines closed, a lot of miners set to other tasks and the others working 300 days a year. Then, and then only, shall we be able to get fuel at fair prices. How can it be brought about?

A POSTCARD from Hamburg bears this message from E. J. McCallum: "The Review is appreciated at home, but you don't know the feeling it gives an American florist abroad to get it. The Convention Number came today [August 27] and I read almost every word. It's the binding link between myself and home, and really prevents homesickness."

A FLORIST cannot expect his best customers to be impressed with a "classy" folder in four or five colors if it contains such misspellings as "boquet" and "lillies"—to mention only common and recently noted errors. He should refuse to send out printed matter which contains such mistakes, glaringly apparent to every educated customer.

THINGS are moving! Freight car loadings during August averaged 863,000 cars per week, compared with only 825,000 cars per week during the previous month and only 810,000 cars per week during August of last year. It will be noted that merchandise and grain loadings not only offset the decline in coal loadings, but actually created an increase in loadings of 9,000 cars every day for the month of August.

MANY a man is so keen to receive telegraph delivery orders that he forgets all about taking some to send to the other fellow. The telegraph delivery business is like charity, in that it begins at home.

BEYOND question, the coal strike has done more than anything else ever did to awaken florists' interest in oil as fuel. About all that is known on the subject was told in the leading article in The Review for July 20.

A NEWSPAPER syndicate is promoting Fathers' day, having selected the second Sunday in October for the occasion. If someone wants to honor father October 8, sell him or her flowers just as you sell them for mother the second Sunday in May.

WE cannot know too much about the merchandise we sell. Greater interest on customers' part is induced by the imparting of information by the florist. Read about the flowers you sell, visit the greenhouses where they grow, and your enthusiasm for your products will communicate itself to your patrons.

THOSE who got their orders in early for imported bulbs will be the gainers, it seems, and those who ordered at the last minute will be the losers. Most of the importing houses are absorbing the increase in tariff duty under the new law on the orders on their books, but some are passing it on to those whose orders came in after the law was passed.

DESPITE the growth of the telegraph delivery service, both in the number of florists who give it special attention and in the degree of excellence it has attained, great quantities of flowers are shipped from city to city, especially on funeral orders, which might have made a better showing at the casket if they had been relayed by wire to be filled by the local florist.

How many readers has The Review? We wish we knew. With daily newspapers it is customary to figure four readers for each copy printed. With a trade paper, how many? One man's guess would be as good as another's, but we should say that if a trade paper claimed 10,000 readers it would be printing about 3,500 copies. The pressroom order for this week's Review is to print 13,200 copies.

PAPER WHITES which had passed into the hands of the dealers had cleaned up pretty well when it developed that there were shipments which for one reason or another had not been accepted by the importers. These are now finding their way into the hands of other dealers, usually at something less than the original import price. This will account for some special offers florists may not otherwise understand.

BITUMINOUS coal production for this calendar year to September 2 was 233,000,000 tons, compared with 263,000,000 tons for the same portion of last year, so that, with the coal strike ended, the country is behind only 30,000,000 tons of soft coal as compared with last year, a shortage that can quickly be made up as transportation conditions improve. A real shortage exists in anthracite coal, production having fallen below last year by nearly 40,000,000 tons, a shortage which no amount of effort can possibly overcome. A considerable part of the anthracite demand will need to be cared for out of the soft coal supply, which should soon be ample.

IMPROVEMENT in business is hoped for and expected, but there is no belief that conditions favor a "boom." It would be a mistake to speculate on such an event, either by expanding one's present business facilities or by stocking too heavily with supplies. Prices and costs of production must come down before large prosperity arrives. We need our foreign customers, from whom we are now shut off by the barriers of high exchange rates, a high tariff and high labor costs.

THE new rose, Commonwealth, is to receive the same method of trial before dissemination as did Priscilla. Thirty-five growers, in various sections, have plants of it in their greenhouses, where members of the trade can see the variety's growth before ordering. The criticism which was Priscilla's lot, under this form of trial, resulted in its withdrawal by A. N. Pierson, Inc. If Commonwealth withstands the test, therefore, the trade will have confidence in its worth, already a matter of testimony on the part of a few florists.

PRICES paid to producers for the principal crops September 1 were three per cent higher than a year ago, fifty-three per cent below two years ago and thirty-two per cent below the 10-year average on that date. Prices paid to producers for meat animals August 15 were one per cent below a year ago, thirty-five per cent below two years ago and twenty per cent below the 10-year average on that date. Here is a clear index to the farmer's purchasing power, which is still fully thirty per cent below the average for the last ten years. Because of big production, and not because of higher prices, the farmers of the country are going to receive between one and two billion dollars more for this year's output of grains, fruits and meat animals than they received for last year's output, but it must be borne in mind that the farmers made no money, but actually lost several billion dollars on last year's meat and grain crops. Higher prices for all the products of the farm at the farm gate are necessary to the foundation of any real era of prosperity, and these will not come until there is a demand from foreign countries, which now either can not or will not buy here because of the high exchange rates.

FARES TO F. T. D. MEETING.

All American and Canadian lines, with the exception of the Western Passenger Association and the Southwestern Passenger Association, have authorized the rate of fare and one-half, on identification certificates, for members of the F. T. D. and their families to the convention, which is to be held at Baltimore, Md., October 10 to 12. The two associations that refused the special rate did so because of too small an estimated attendance from their particular territories.

This special rate is contingent on an attendance of 250 and one must have a certificate to get the reduction of the fare. Be sure to ask the ticket agent for that certificate when purchasing your ticket—a certificate, not a receipt. Upon arrival at the convention, leave the certificate in charge of the secretary or other person designated to take care of it. Provisions are to be made to have the certificates endorsed October 9 and 10. A joint agent of the railroads will be present to validate certificates October 11, until 5:30 p. m.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The market slowed up considerably last week, with little business outside of funeral work. Stock in general was scarcer than it was the week previous, with accompanying higher prices.

Roses were much in demand and the best stock was cleaned up promptly. Prices ranged from $6 to $15 per hundred. Short roses from young local stock brought from $2 to $4 per hundred. Among the varieties arriving are Golden Ophelia, American Legion and a few good Crusader. The favorites remain Columbia and Butterfly, of which good stock has been in evidence.

The quality of carnations is steadily improving with the coming of cooler weather, and good stock has been offered for $3 and $4 per hundred. The best varieties are Mrs. C. B. Ward, Red Matchless, Enchantress Supreme and a few Laddie.

Some good valley is to be had at $8 to $10 per hundred, and it is promptly taken up. The supply of orchids is not large, and is readily used, the prices being $100 to $150 per hundred.

Dahlias have been arriving in large quantities, and bringing $2 to $4 per hundred for the ordinary varieties, and $6 to $8 for the finer ones. Some of the local growers report a shortage of dahlias, due to the long drought.

The gladiolus season is about over, although some fine varieties have arrived in the last two weeks. Delphinium remains scarce.

Various Notes.

J. Dan Blackistone has opened a new store at 1406 Park road, northwest. His new location is a splendid one, being directly across from the new Riggs bank. The new store has two large show windows, each about fifteen feet long. The interior is decorated in shades of buff and is most effective.

Stanley Holland has opened a new store at eighteenth and Columbia road, northwest, which is far superior to the one he occupied previously. It is located in the heart of the residential district and promises to be one of Washington's most attractive flower shops.

Z. D. Blackistone is having great success with a new design he is putting out. He says it is a cross between a casket cover and a spray. The piece sells for $25 to $100 and meets with unanimous approval when presented to the customer. He is on the program to give an illustrated lecture on this design at the Baltimore F. T. D. convention.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The last week of September was not so good, marketwise, as the penultimate week of the month. The reason, apparently, lay in the return of summer weather. The official maximum ran as high as 85 degrees, but on the street, where the customers are, and under glass, where the roses are, it ran much higher than that. The demand for flowers at this season is not robust enough to sustain itself in hot weather and the sun on the greenhouses hastened the blooming season of the roses. There was a large increase in the supply.

One could not call trade dull last week if one considered the quantity of stock sold, but the supply was so large that good average prices were impossible. The principal increase was of roses. The quality, while not yet up to midwinter form, was excellent for September. Those who could use quantity obtained good bargains, which of course resulted in some softening all along the line, except, perhaps, on white, which is in limited supply in this market this season. The chief variety is Premier; Columbia has been cut down on by many growers to make room for more Premier. Russell has also been further reduced, but some good blooms are seen. Many growers have dropped both Ophelia and Butterfly, to plant pink or red. But nobody seems to have increased either yellow or white.

The supply of carnations has not increased so rapidly as of roses, but there is, nevertheless, a daily gain, in quantity if not in quality; the weather recently has been too warm to do the carnations any good. Of the stock reaching the market the majority is white, useful for little else than funeral work, but the best price, as last year, is made by Mrs. C. W. Ward. Many of the reds show the mark of thrips and are unsalable except at unquotable prices.

Chrysanthemums are in considerably increased supply, local stock being ready in some quantity, while California flowers are coming in as numerously as the demand justifies. Prices have ranged, according to quality, from $6 per dozen down to a few pennies apiece, the latter for flowers with burned or rotted edges, not ordinarily salable. The price of the better grades tends downward as the quantity increases. The importing of California mums thus far has been attended with some difficulty and loss, due to warm weather. Pompons are more plentiful, white and yellow, but they still sell clean.

Sweet peas received a setback in last week's warm weather. Snapdragon and calendula have arrived. The supply of lilies has shortened up and the price has advanced to 25 cents. Valley is in steady supply. Cattleyas are scarce.

There are a few good northern asters in the market, but most of the stock received from local sources is little more than rubbish. The supply of gladioli has run down to a point where it cuts little figure, although good spikes are selling well and at about the best prices of the season. The later plantings have suffered from lack of rain.

The price of ferns was advanced 50 cents per thousand by the pickers October 1 and is being passed on to the consumer, as usual.

Uptown Flower Show.

The flower show in connection with the Uptown Chicago exposition promises to be a splendid success, both as a show and as a publicity feature for flowers. Already twenty growers have signified their intention of exhibiting in several classes. Among their entries are two large plant groups and novelties in chrysanthemums, roses and carnations.

The Chicago daily papers are anxious to get news about the features of the flower show, and Peter Pearson, chairman of the flower show committee, desires to get pictures of flowers, especially novelties, suitable to use in the newspapers for publicity, and also any flower stores that can be made into interesting publicity. "All we need is material," he says, "and free publicity will flow generously."

All growers are asked to coöperate by sending a few flowers. It is not necessary that all be exhibition stock. The prizes offered this year are larger and more valuable than last year's. Following is a list of classes and of prizes donated by the Uptown Chicago Association:

Class 1—Fifty Premier, first prize, loving cup.
Class 2—One hundred Columbia, first prize, cup.
Class 3—One hundred Angelus, first prize, cup.
Class 4—One hundred Crusader, first prize, cup.
Class 5—Amelia Gude, first prize, cup.
Class 6—Grand prize of a sterling silver cup for the best vase of 100 roses, any variety.
Class 7—Fifty cut mums, any color, first prize, cup.
Class 8—Fifty sprays pompons, first prize, cup.
Class 9—Group of flowering plants, not less than 6-inch pots, twelve plants, first prize, cup.
Class 10—Group of decorative plants not less than 6-inch pots, twenty-five plants, first prize, cup.
Class 11—Six pots of lilies of the valley, 7-inch, first prize, cup.
Class 12—Six mum plants, 8-inch, first prize, cup.
Class 13—Six Boston ferns, 8-inch, first prize, cup.
Class 14—Display of carnations, three varieties, fifty each, first prize, cup.
Class 15—Meritorious exhibit not otherwise provided for, first prize, cup.

Provisions have been made for private growers' classes, and suitable prizes have been provided. Further details will be announced later. Suitable second prizes will be awarded in all classes.

Plants will be staged Monday morning, October 16; roses and chrysanthemums, Tuesday, October 17, and carnations, Wednesday, October 18. Judging will be done according to the scales of the American Rose Society, the American Carnation Society and the Chrysanthemum Society of America.

Chairman Peter Pearson says: "Any grower should be proud to win one or more of these prizes, both for pleasure and for the use it can be put to in advertising his own stock. There will be lots of publicity for each winner, both in the daily papers and the trade press." Mr. Pearson's address is 5734 Gunnison avenue. The general chairman of the exposition is H. Dieu Schiller, secretary of Schiller, the Florist.

On to Baltimore.

Chicago will send quite a representation to the F. T. D. annual meeting at Baltimore, October 10 and 11. The party will be headed by Director W. J. Smyth and Mrs. Smyth. Other members who will attend will be Arthur Blome and wife, representing Paul Blome; George Asmus, H. D. Schiller and Reinhold Schiller, representing Schiller, the Florist; Mrs. L. C. Stuart, of the Bohannon Floral Co., and Homer Lange, representing A. Lange. Miss Nettie L. Parker, secretary of A. T. Pyfer & Co., Paul R. Klingsporn, manager of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, and W. A. Hansen, of the Joseph Foerster Co., will represent the local cut flower market. Marshall N. Tyler and A. A. Martial, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., will take florists' supplies. H. V. Swenson, H. E. Larson and F. M. Suttle will go from the Swenson advertising agency. F. R. Kilner will represent The Review.

Bassett & Washburn to Use Oil.

The most important announcement in the greenhouse heating field in recent years is that concerning the decision of Bassett & Washburn to adopt fuel oil for operating the boilers at their big establishment at Westmont. It will be the largest oil-burning installation in any greenhouse establishment in the middle west and possibly in the country. Mr. Washburn has contracted to equip seven boilers, each of 150 horsepower,

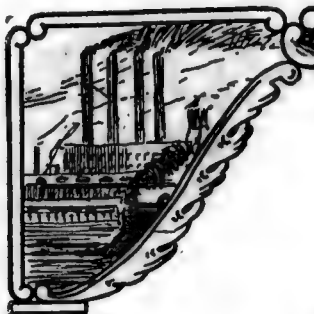
Crane, Jr., a heating engineer, who uses what is known as the Atorotary oil burner, the mechanical features of which combine the rotary and atomizing types. It is the same system that is employed by Stielow Bros., at Niles Center. Mr. Washburn also has contracted for a concrete storage tank of the capacity of twenty-five cars of fuel oil. He estimates that a maximum consumption in coldest weather will be five cars per week. Mr. Washburn is arranging to have every feature of the installation of the best character. All essential parts are duplicated, but two other big boilers are being held in reserve for coal burning in case of need. Mr. Washburn's first object in changing his heating system is to secure independence of the coal man and the car supply, but his heating engineer is confident the new system will result in a saving of twenty-five per cent in the heating cost.

Weiss & Meyer Co., at Maywood, is equipping one of its boilers for oil, using the system known as the Johnson burner.

Fuel oil at present is worth about 5½ cents per gallon in car lots in this market.



Various Notes.

After a fortnight's siege with lumbago, Hans Jepsen again is able to give full-time attention to his greenhouses at Maywood, where the mums and pompons are just coming into season. Those who thought his plants looked good last year say they are still better this year.

At the range of the Beu Floral Co., 4445 North Crawford avenue, everybody has been busy planting Lilium formosum. Approximately $5,000 worth of lily bulbs, in their cases, were seen here. This grower has an excellent stock of ferns and chrysanthemums at this time. Construction work on the installation of two new fuel oil storage tanks, with a combined capacity of 22,000 gallons, is almost completed, the only thing remaining to be done being the covering of the tanks with soil. Mr. Beu stated that he was glad to have the job finished, as it was a laborious task digging into the hardpan and clay which were encountered in the subsoil. Mr. Beu sold drawings and specifications for his oil-burning system to seven florists last week.

its thirtieth year in the wholesale cut flower business. E. C. Amling is expected to arrive here from California in time for the company's annual meeting, October 9. Mr. Amling will celebrate his fifty-fourth birthday October 10.

W. P. Kyle appeared in the market September 30 with a new Mercer.

Friends of H. N. Bruns know that he has spent a busy summer in gardening around his new home at Chicago avenue and William street in River Forest. Anyone passing that corner in a motor will appreciate, not only the extent of the work, but that it has been well rewarded. The salvias just now are making a splendid showing.

Paul R. Klingsporn is making a little trip north to size up trade prospects before going to Baltimore for the F. T. D. convention. The Klingsporn family is camping out at present. A new home in Evanston has not reached completion as soon as was expected and the old place had to be vacated September 30. Mrs. Klingsporn and the boy are with her mother.

It is proposed to widen Devon avenue from the Des Plaines river to Lake Michigan, making it a boulevard 108 feet wide. William S. Peterson has agreed to give the necessary land through a half mile of his property and others in the trade will be affected.

PRINCETON, ILLINOIS

H. Van Gelder is preparing to push the business of Percy Jones more aggressively this season than in recent years. Mr. Van Gelder believes that the only limit to the florists' business is the florist's willingness to exert himself for it.

At Crystal Lake Frank Schramm is receiving a car of coal every other day. The unloading machine disposes of it at the rate of a ton a minute. Mr. Schramm says he is paying $5.50 per ton, using a prepared size, 3x6, as against $3.65 as the highest price he ever paid before. He wonders if the market price of roses this season will keep pace with the increase.

Last January, S. Fisher prepared a liquid insecticide and plant food for use on plants sold at his retail store, at 3655 West Roosevelt road, and obtained such good results with it that in April he put it up in half-pint cans, gave it the name of Fisher's Plant Preparation and offered it for sale to his customers. Since then the sale has increased steadily and he now sells an appreciable number of cans over his own counter weekly, in addition to sales to other local florists who handle it. Mr. Fisher has not given much effort to selling his preparation, but hopes soon to give it publicity and distribute it nationally.

Marshall N. Tyler is preparing to go to Baltimore with a sample line of Poehlmann's supplies for the F. T. D. convention. Mr. Tyler will be accompanied by A. A. Martial.

Joseph Foerster believes there will be no reduction in the supply of Milady in this market this season, although there will be some increase in the supply of Crusader. Mr. Foerster points out that William Spandikow has planted 10,000 Milady at Maywood and that Joseph Kohout has planted one of his new houses, 40x500, with Milady at Libertyville. Mr. Foerster thinks this will more than make up for any cutting down on Milady by other growers.

Henry Youngquist, 3142 Foster avenue, has been busy putting hyacinth bulbs into the ground outside his range. Work has begun here on the installation of an additional fuel oil tank with a capacity of 19,000 gallons. Mr. Youngquist uses the Beu oil-burner system in his boilers, and with the new tank his total storage capacity will be 45,000 gallons. Mr. Youngquist specializes in ferns.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. hope to open for business in their new Wabash avenue building Monday morning, October 23.

Walter M. Rupp, manager of the John C. Moninger Co., is able to report progress. The concern has shipped all back orders, but is busy with new business, which is coming along fast enough to keep them fully employed.

When William Spandikow took over the Maywood greenhouses he now is operating, the place was planted to Columbia roses. Mr. Spandikow has replanted the entire establishment this summer, to Milady and Premier.

The bulbs for the Sam Pearce place, sometimes known as "Little Holland," now operated by the E. C. Amling Co., arrived at New York and were passed through the custom house only eleven hours ahead of the new tariff law. The difference in duties would have been a matter of thousands of dollars.

G. W. Tracy, for many years associated with the late W. S. Burling in the Martin Grate Co., has been elected president since Mr. Burling's untimely death.

There is lamentation among the growers. Of the coal they are receiving, they feel the low quality more keenly than the high price. But what galls them most of all is that they fear to protest lest they may get no coal at all.

Visitors.

L. M. Mason, of Streator, Ill., was a visitor to the market October 2. Mr. Mason has operated a range of about 60,000 feet of glass for a number of years, growing lettuce. A year or two
